The Day That I Forget
By MARIE BLIZARD

CHAPTER 26

RUSSELL BEDE sat at Janet's feet on a desk pillow. His face was turned from her and in the few minutes that followed his asking her to marry him, Janet saw in the firm set of his features, lighted by the moonlight, an expression of steady waiting that she had never seen on his face before.

She saw the man that he was, the man whose willpower, whose brain, whose foresight and determination has made a fortune out of a slipping business, the man who was accustomed to getting what he wanted and giving full value in return.

Oh, yes he would give full value in return. But he had come too late.

"Russell," she said softly, "I am not only married but I am married happily." Still she didn't say that she loved Joel; she thought that he would have known it.

"Some day you will marry me," he said evenly. "Janet, I am no boy to speak impulsively. Nor are you a girl who would misunderstand. I knew the first night I met you that you were the girl I wanted to marry. In these few weeks I have learned much about you—and your husband."

Janet was going to protest that he could not have known anything about Joel but she kept silent.

"You give and he takes."

"I like giving," she said simply.

"And he likes taking and that is wrong, my girl. The time will come, as it inevitably does in such a design for living as these people out here practice, when that unbalanced weight will topple. Like and like are the only ones who find and use the qualities that survive."

"But Joel and I are alike," she said and thought she said it aloud but it was only a question, not a statement, in her mind.

"You were a couple of kids who fell in love. Kids who turned out to be diametrically opposite. I am not being impertinent, Janet, in saying this. It's important to me. I know you as well as though I'd known you a lifetime. I know the extent of your courage, your loyalty and your love. And I dare to criticize you. I dare to tell you that you cannot make a success of the thing you have so nobly begun, that you are building a castle on sand. Hollywood marriages do not last. You have the world at your gates, the world that will give more than you can. That world gives things which your husband wants that you haven't got simply because it must be multiplied to have value."

Janet said nothing but her face was as set as his own.

"Do you talk about the future? Are you building things together? Do tomorrows count in your marriage? Do you believe that you can make this transient thing last? How?"

"Russell, you don't know me. You said that you knew my courage, my loyalty and my love. You don't really know my love. You don't know that it isn't a fragile emotion, that it is more than my heart. It's my everything and with it goes determination and strength. I forgive you for talking about marriage as you have because I can see where you get your ideas out here. You know that Joel is a matinee idol and that women are crazy about him but you don't know him."

It was then that he kept silent. He had learned to judge men, he believed.

"You don't know what my plans are. You only see that we are childless, that we have no obvious plans for life-long ties. I've thought of those things but these are Joel's years and he shall have them as he wants them. We have all the years of our life together ahead. My marriage is going to last because I'm going to make it last! I'm going to hold my husband only because he'll want to be held. I am equal to meeting all the circumstances that arise in our marriage and when a circumstance arises that threatens its structure, I shall find the open door if I have to look for it! I shall be honest with you...."

"You couldn't ever be anything else," he said, and little realized that she would manage and manipulate and have no one the wiser if it means Joel's happiness and mine. I have no conscience about using it and a code that will forever keep me from admitting that I ever have."

"Is my lot so different from that of other women? What woman lives who loves her husband and is not called up to mold in some way the things that she wants to hold?"

"I don't know," he said. "I don't know women. I only know that I want you and that I want to offer you everything I think you should have. To me, you are a fragile, lovely woman and as such I want always to have you near me in such a way that you would have no need of this fierce protection of your happiness. If I have said too much, forgive me."

"Of course, I forgive you," she said and was grateful that the lights of the harbor were nearing.

"The question will still be there if you ever change your mind, Janet. I'm going east tomorrow but I'm not going out of your life. I will always be there if you ever need me."

"Perhaps I will some day," she said, and little realized that she would.

She tried to forget the things that he said to her that night but they came back one by one bringing anger at his daring, anger that was submerged because she knew that he loved her and that she should never have let him.

Joel was asleep when she got in that night and she went to look at him as though he were her baby. He was sleeping with his arm thrown over her pillow. His face in repose of sleep pointed up the whiteness that had made it famous on the screen.

She looked at him tenderly with the lump that always rose in her throat when she saw him unguarded in sleep. She remembered that Russell Bede had said he wanted her. Joel had said he needed her. She was close then to knowing the thing that had bound them together from the beginning, the age old appeal that was greater in her heart than any other.

If only those peaceful, confident emotions and that knowledge could have stayed with her! But there was the business of living a thousand emotions a day, following the ordinary routine of social and professional life.

The autumn and winter wore on and another spring came again after Russell Bede had left, leaving Janet with little nerve ends newly sensitive to the life around her, to the dangers that threatened her and Joel. She had been aware of them before but they had been kept in the back of her mind.

With the passing of those months, she was increasingly aware of the strong pull of studio life and studio associations that were giving her less and less of Joel's time. She was aware of his brief infatuation for his leading lady and his not-so-brief one for another girl who had recently joined the film colony as a writer.

She thought: I know that this will work out all right because the others have. But—and the word BUT was big in her mind—this can't go on forever. This bridge will widen the distance between us until I will always be conscious of it and then I will be just a habit with Joel.

She was conscious that he no longer cared about art at all. He was satisfied, perfectly satisfied with his life and utter satisfaction was ruinous.

At last she began to cast about in her mind for a way to bring him back to the realization of what he had once had. She thought of the manipulation, she once had spoken about to Russell Bede, that was quickly fading.

She resolved to get Joel out of Hollywood. And she thought she had found the way when she heard that three of the leading film stars were deserting the screen for a season on the legitimate stage. She knew the weakness in Joel's armour and she proceeded to work on it.

Bedtime Story
By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY UP A TREE

"Wiggy! Wiggy! Stop!! You must not! I won't let you!"

When Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy heard Mrs. Longears shouting this way at Uncle Wiggily in the hollow stump bungalow one morning, the muskrat lady housekeeper squalked:

"What's he doing, Mrs. Longears? Is your husband pretending to be one of the Bad Chaps?"

"Oh, no, he isn't doing that, Janie," said the rabbit lady. "Uncle Wiggily is too kind to do that. But he says he is going out."

"I don't see anything so terrible about that," spoke Nurse Jane.

"Nor I," said Uncle Wiggily. "Can you imagine, Janie? No sooner did I tell my wife, just now, I was going to hop out and look for an adventure than she began to tell me to stop and that she wouldn't let me go. Can you imagine!"

Windy Day

"Is there any special reason, Mrs. Longears, why you don't want your husband to go adventuring today?" asked Nurse Jane.

"Yes, there is," said the rabbit lady. "There is a very strong March wind blowing and I'm sure he will be blown away as he was not very long ago."

"Do you mean, Wiggy," asked Mrs. Longears sweetly, "that it is nonsense about the wind?"

"Oh, the wind is blowing hard, I admit that," said the rabbit gentleman.

"Then you might get blown away," said his wife.

"Not this time," her husband replied. "The last time it was my hat that I had fastened to myself by a strong string that took me up in the air. I am wearing a cap this time and the wind won't get beneath it to take me up like a balloon. I won't blow away, I promise."

"Then I suppose it will be all right for you to go," said Mrs. Longears. "But I shall be anxious about you until you get back, Wiggy."

"So shall I," squeaked Nurse Jane.

Laughing at their fears for him, Uncle Wiggily hopped out of the hollow stump bungalow into the March wind. He had not hopped very far through the woods and over the fields before he knew it was a much stronger wind than he had imagined.

Flying High

"I hope nothing happens!" thought Mr. Longears. He held to his cap with two front paws and hopped along on his two hind paws.

And just then it happened. All of a sudden the wind seemed to pick Mr. Longears right up off the ground. It didn't lift him very high but it carried him along as if he were in a taxicab and, before he knew it, he was up a tree.

The wind had blown the rabbit gentleman into the tree branches. It wasn't yet Spring where Uncle Wiggily lived so the tree branches had no leaves on them. He could easily see the branches and he caught hold of one in his front paws and clung tightly to it.

After that one big blow the wind was more gentle. But it was too late. Uncle Wiggily was up in a tree some distance above the ground. He held tight and looked down.

"Oh, my goodness!" he murmured. "What am I to do? I could almost wish I were a monkey. Then I could climb down. But we rabbits aren't made for living in trees or getting down out of them. Oh, dear!"

Now we must find a way of getting the bunny safely down out of that tree. And you shall hear about it in the next story which will be about Uncle Wiggily's wish.

And I hope the pussy cat doesn't lose her mew as she has to borrow a bark from the puppy dog.

350 DISMISSED

PILE SUFFERERS
Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know the real cause of piles is on the inside?

Do you know they can be doctored from the inside?

Do you know you must get at and do you know you must get at and cut them?

The real cause of piles is poor circulation—a congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel. This makes the veins flabby, full of impure congested blood and weakens the rectal membranes.

So if you would have relief from piles you should use an internal medicine like HEM-ROID, a prescription written by Dr. J. S. Leonhardt. HEM-ROID banishes piles by relieving the cause. It stimulates circulation, eases the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and helps to heal and restore the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most stubborn cases that Mr. Dermid & Jury and Boyd's Drug Stores or any other good druggist is authorized to make good our promise to you that if you are not completely satisfied with the results from the first bottle, you may have your money back.

Mrs. Kendall, escorted by Provincial Constable Jack Clarke, reached the jail, the woman clutching her dog in her arms, apparently fearful lest it might be denied entrance. And that's just about what happened.

Turnkey M. D. Hamilton, on hand to receive the prisoner, didn't want the dog inside, but on Mrs. Kendall's protests, he allowed the woman to take the animal in with her, while he hastened to consult Sheriff William McGhee.

UNITED MEETING BY YOUNG PEOPLE

Three Organizations Join For Impressive Devotional Service At Hastings

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 18. — A united devotional meeting was held on Monday evening when almost one hundred young people from the Young People's Societies of St. Andrew's Presbyterian, Trinity United and St. George's Anglican Churches gathered together in the basement of St. George's Church. The meeting opened with the singing of the hymn, "All people that on earth do dwell," followed by prayer by the rector, Rev. William Stocks. Rev. D. E. Perrie, past of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, read the Scripture lesson, and Rev. William Stocks took charge of the short Litany service.

After the singing of the hymn, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," a most inspiring Lenten address was given by the guest speaker, the Rev. F. W. Newell, pastor of Trinity United Church. The seven last words of Christ on the Cross, "Father, into Thy hands I commend My Spirit," were chosen as the subject of his able discourse, the recessional hymn, "Rest beyond the River," was followed by the benediction by the Rev. D. E. Perrie. E. Radford, president of the A.Y.P.A., then welcomed the guests and took charge of a discussion period. Suggestions for united monthly meetings were among the discussions. Short addresses were given by Rev. D. E. Perrie, Grant Sine, president of Trinity Y.P.S., Mrs. Stewart Whitred, president of St. Andrew's Y.P.S., Miss Jessie Lamb, V. Findly, and Miss D. Plant.

The Young People of Trinity United Church will present their play, "The Red-headed Step-Child" on the evening of March 26.

CAMPBELLFORD

LANTERN LECTURE ENJOYABLE EVENT

Features B.Y.P.U. Program — Other Young People's Gatherings Held

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, March 18.—A very interesting lantern lecture formed part of the program of the weekly meeting of the Baptist Young People's Union on Monday evening. Miss Evelyn Oliver was in the chair for this meeting which took the form of a devotional evening which opened with the Lord's Prayer, followed by the reading of the Scripture, after which the secretary's report was read and approved. The topic of the evening was Jesus the Saviour, which was taken in three parts, the first and last by Miss Bunny Shaw and the second by Douglas Lloyd. The meeting closed with the Benediction by Rev. Mr. McIntosh.

St. Andrew's Y.P.S.

The weekly meeting of St. Andrew's Young People's Society was held on Monday evening with the vice-president, Mrs. M. McFarlane, occupying the chair in the absence of the president. The missionary convenor, Mr. Douglas Watson, who had charge of the program, called on Miss Violet Patrick, who gave a short talk on "St. Patrick." A reading, "Dawn on the Irish Coast" by Mrs. Bruce Grills, and a piano solo by Mr. Chas. Allan followed. A word contest, arranged by Mrs. McFarlane, brought the meeting to a close.

Talk on the Bible.

Continuing his series of talks on "How to Enjoy the Bible," Rev. Harold R. Neale continued his series at the weekly meeting of the St. John's Young People's Union held on Monday evening. Choosing as his subject "Old Testament Narratives," the speaker gave a very edifying talk saying that the New Testament was usually found to be more interesting than the Old Testament. The meeting was conducted by the president, Miss R. Pallister who, during the early part of the program, read the poem entitled "The Poet Galilee."

The program for the evening included a violin solo by Clarke McKaryte and a very interesting topic by Mr. Earl Bell, entitled "The Origin of Surnames." A rather novel contest arranged by Jack Carr, who was assisted by Alva Mowat, Pearl McComb, Arnold Bates and Frank McKelvie, made up the balance of the program.

Labor difficulties in the United States cast a cloud over the automobile show at Brussels, Belgium, because of the possibility of delay in the delivery of cars.

HERE'S THE SECRET OF SERVING GOOD COFFEE

● Carnation in coffee adds flavour and a rich colour. On cereals or fruit, Carnation takes the place of cream deliciously and economically. In all cooking where milk is used, Carnation adds richness, because Carnation itself is twice as rich as ordinary milk; smoothness, because every drop of Carnation has its share of butterfat.

All the food value of the best cows' milk is in Carnation, making it a splendid food for babies. In addition, it is more digestible and has extra "sunshine" vitamin D. Carnation is the evaporated milk the Dionne Quintuplets use.

LAST BARRIER MRS. SIMPSON DIVORCE FALLS

Charge Of Collusion Is Dismissed By President Of London Court

SURPRISE MOVE

Aimed To Ease Public Mind Case Being Treated Differently From Any Other

LONDON, March 19 (AP)—The last apparent barrier to Mrs. Wallis Simpson's absolute divorce and her marriage to the Duke of Windsor was cleared today when a charge of "collusion" was dismissed by the president of the divorce court.

Sir Boyd Merriam, president of the court, directed the charge stricken from the record after the King's proctor informed the court that, treating the case "as any other," he had made a careful investigation and had failed to find any grounds to prevent the absolute divorce of Mrs. Simpson and Ernest Aldrwich Simpson.

His action, following the proctor's surprise move in asking "for instructions" in the case, removed all legal obstacles except the technical granting of the final decree April 27. That action will free Mrs. Simpson to wed the man who abdicated the throne because of his love for her.

"The result of the King's proctor's inquiries," the Attorney General, Sir Donald Somervell, informed the court, "on all aspects of the case was that there was no evidence to justify him in directing intervention."

Stephenson Agrees.

Francis Stephenson, an elderly solicitor whose mysterious intervention last December—just one day before Edward abdicated—caused today's almost final scene in the drama, rose to his feet and gave his approval to the action wiping out his charge of "collusion."

Every inch of standing room was packed in the court. Hundreds of persons were turned away and stood in long lines outside the doors.

After the proceedings, Stephenson rushed from the room. The white-mustached, gold-spectacled little man seemed painfully embarrassed by his role during the hour's legal airing of the world's most celebrated divorce action.

"I've other fish to fry," he exclaimed as he brushed his way through the throngs of curious.

The spot light was focussed on the elderly man when the president

HAMILTON TORIES ARE ENCOURAGED

Bennett Holds Up Torch Of Strong Opposition—Dominion Parley—Of The People

HAMILTON, Ont., March 19 (CP)—Hamilton's current political campaign—a three-cornered fight between Conservative, Liberal and C.C.F. candidates for the federal seat left vacant by Herbert Wilton's death—took on a new impetus today.

Conservative workers, backing John Marsh to succeed to the traditionally - Conservative riding of Hamilton West, were spurred on by the words of the party's Dominion leader.

Speaking here last night, Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett held up the torch of a strong opposition, an adequate protective tariff and declared for a conference of provincial and Dominion representatives as elected by the people—to make such amendments to Canada's constitution as may be necessary to the well-being of the working man.

Tonight J. L. Ilsley, Dominion Minister of Revenue, will speak to a mass meeting in support of Kennedy Connor, Liberal candidate. John Hanley is the C.C.F. nominee.

Mr. Bennett remarked during the speech that one Liberal had voted for the Canada-United Kingdom trade treaty of 1933 and that this same man would speak here tonight. He was referring to Mr. Ilsley.

It was necessary that representatives of provincial and Dominion governments should get together to agree on amendments that were necessary to the constitution, Mr. Bennett said. Social security was what the working man wanted, and this could be achieved only through measures promulgated by a strong central government.

Little progress in combatting unemployment had been achieved by the present Dominion administration, said Mr. Bennett. They had sought to achieve improvement by commissions, but he questioned that method could ever be successful.

NEW YORK, March 19—(CP)—Two Canadian women—Mrs. W. M. Anderson of Toronto and Mrs. J. A. Faulkner of Belleville, Ont.—were included yesterday in the All-America contract bridge team announced by Sheppard Barclay, bridge editor of Collier's magazine.

The "Biz 10" team was expanded to 12 because of a tie of 11 players for eighth place. First recognitions of the Dominion ever to make the team that is selected on the basis of a point analysis of the year's championship tournament play, the Canadian women were in the eighth place tie.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, March 19. — Fire of undetermined origin did damage estimated at $18,000.00 to the Bank of Montreal building and nearly caused the death of Wm. Alphicks, second floor resident, who was trapped by the smoke and flames which filled the stairs leading to the offices and rooms on the second and third floor.

Alphicks was rescued by firemen only after his shouts for help brought aid to a second story window. While smoke blinded and choked firemen as they attempted to place a ladder against the building Mr. Alphicks calmly called to the rescuers telling them where he was. Clarence Massey, one of the local brigade assisted Mr. Alphicks who lives in an apartment on the third floor, down the ladder to safety.

The man had been awakened by the smell of smoke which had penetrated up to the third floor.

Passerby Sees Smoke.

The alarm was sent in by Bernard Forstell who was passing the building at 10.20 and noticed the smoke seeping out through the window casings. Local firemen were soon on the scene but were hampered in their efforts to get at the blaze which started in the cellar due to the basement windows which were all iron barred. While water was being poured into the main floor of the bank the blaze gained a strong hold on the basement from where it spread through the second floor. Finally an axe assistant hacked out through the bars on the cellar window and a line of hose brought the flames under control only to have the second floor of the building burst into flames.

At 11.45 when it seemed that the local brigade would be unable to cope with the flames a call was put through to Peterborough by Mayor F. F. Long asking for help. While firemen played three lines of hose into the structure the whole second floor occupied by the Aber-Knit Manufacturing Co. and D. J. Lynch LL. B. were completely gutted. It was not until a few minutes before the arrival of the Peterborough brigade that the firemen succeeded in bringing the blaze under control.

Crowd Watches Fire.

A crowd of five hundred people lined Campbellford's main intersection watching the fire while others assisted the occupants of the adjacent building in carrying out their belongings.

The law books of D. J. Lynch who has been practicing law here for over 20 years were completely destroyed while J. F. H. Douglas, whose offices are situated in the next building had his library and files removed to a place of safety. The mayor and members of the council stood around in anxious groups watching the local firemen who entered the building through a window on the second floor and

Royal Mail 100 to 6 Shot Wins The Grand National Winner Early Took The Lead And Was Never Again Headed Off

ONLY SIX FINISHED

Jimmy Plank's nine-year-old mare Cooleen was second, and E. W. W. Bailey's Pucka Belle took third money.

Royal Mail took the lead soon after passing the grandstand the first time and never was headed. Ridden by Evan Williams, he finished three lengths in front of Cooleen, who beat out Pucka Belle by ten lengths.

33 Starters.

Only six of the 33 starters finished the race over a course made heavy by almost constant rain over the past week.

Sir David Llewellyn's Ego, one of the favorites, was fourth, with R. Strutt's Crown Prince fifth and A. Pilkington's Pencraig sixth.

S. Wilkinson's Don Bradman fell early in the race, but was remounted and got credit for finishing seventh, and last, although he was a quarter-mile back of the first six.

The winner paid 100 to 6. Cooleen and Pucka Belle were held at 33 to

STRIKERS HUSH UP DODGE PLANT FIRE

Deny There Was One — But Two Brigades Who Fought It Say Differently

DETROIT, March 19 (AP)—Counsel for the Chrysler Corporation announced they would appear before [illegible] Allen Campbell today to take the next step in seeking ejection of 8,000 strikers holding its automotive plants in defiance of an injunction.

The nature of the action was not disclosed in advance.

The attorneys conferred with Judge Campbell yesterday and said they would return to his court-room today.

Mystery shrouded a fire reported to have burned for several hours early today in a tunnel at the main Dodge plant of the Corporation, in Hamtramck, where 2,000 sit-downers have remained since March 8.

Members of the United Automobile Workers of America who guarded the factory gates throughout the night said the office of the Dodge local of the union denied there had been a fire, as did a policeman on the beat.

But the Hamtramck and Highland Park fire departments said there had been a fire, confined to one tunnel and invisible from outside the Dodge grounds. Highland Park fire headquarters said it sent one company to assist Hamtramck's three.

John Griffin, Hamtramck fire chief, was reported to have been overcome by smoke. At 56, Francis Hoestal it was learned he had been taken there, but attendants said they could give no report on his injury or condition.

50 MILES HOUR LIKELY TO BE SPEED LIMIT

Henry's Amendment To The Original Abolition Plan Carries 14 To 11

AID TRAFFIC OFFICERS

Original Move Would Leave Reckless Driving Only Charge —No Two Ideas Alike On It

TORONTO, March 19.—(CP)—New motor vehicle speed limits for Ontario seemed likely today after the municipal law committee of the Ontario legislature voted to report for third reading a bill to raise them.

The limits recommended were: 50 miles an hour in open country; 30 miles an hour in cities, towns and villages, municipalities could have power to limit speed to 15 miles an hour in parks.

Before the committee, after second reading by the house, was the bill of James Clark (Lib., Windsor-Sandwich) to abolish the speed limit.

The committee struck out of the bill the no-speed-limit clause, providing for a 20-mile limit at hills and curves where the view was not clear, and one providing for a 15-mile limit past schools.

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, minister of highways, said it was just as dangerous to drive past children at 50 miles an hour near schools as any other place. To pass the clause would be to invite drivers to do this.

Safe Only for Speed Fields.

R. S. Colter (Lib., Haldimand-Cayuga) declared the bill would make the highways safe for speed fiends and nobody else. He moved the bill be not reported. This was lost 19 to 12.

John Glass (Lib. Toronto-St. Andrew's) moved the bill be reported. George Henry, Conservative House leader, objected and moved an amendment the bill be reported with the speed limit set at 50 miles. The amendment carried 14 to 11, the majority of those voting nay favoring abolition of the speed limit while two or three favored retaining the 35-mile mark.

The bill was given second reading by the House and sent to committee on the understanding its principle was not endorsed.

Mr. Clark said the abolition of the 35-mile limit would mean the legalisation of common usage. He was tired of breaking the law.

No Less Danger.

Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, said "momentary inattention" was the great offense of

GUNNING BEAUTY'S DIARY IS SEALED

Discloses Details Of Secret Meetings With Statesman In Famous Roman Palace

PARIS, March 19 (A.P.).—Intimate diary of dark-eyed Madeline La Perriere, with its revelations of an "unforgetable hour of love" with a "great Italian statesman," was sealed by police to-day as they widened their investigation of the shooting of Count Charles de Chambrun.

De Chambrun, descendant of the Marquis de Lafayette and former Ambassador to Italy, was questioned by a magistrate for his version of the shooting. Police declared Mme. La Perriere said she shot the count in a rage because he caused her to lose the "great man's" love.

The diplomat, reported recovering from a wound in the thigh, told authorities he met his assailant at an interview with Premier Mussolini of Italy and that she later visited the Embassy in Rome several times.

The magistrate, because of the injured man's weak condition, did not press for De Chambrun's explanation of the bitterness the 36-year-old woman said she held for him after he "betrayed my love" for a man "too famous to let me speak his name." De Chambrun was shot on Wednesday as he boarded the Brussels express at the Gare du Nord.

Extracts from the diary, read in Mme. La Perriere's apartment by investigating Magistrate Le Girard in the presence of her attorney, told of secret meetings with the "great statesman" in a famous Roman palace.

740 Teachers, Pupils Buried In Explosion, Fear Toll Over 600

Eight Hours Of Digging Bring Only Boy, Girl And Woman Teacher Out Alive

BLAME OIL FIELD FUMES

Dozen Improvized Morgues Set Up As 1,000 Rescuers Attack Debris

NEW LONDON, Tex., March 19—(AP)—Crushed and torn bodies of virtually all the countryside's younger children—one official said 388 and another 500—came slowly out of the blast-shattered London schoolhouse in a rainstorm today as a military inquiry was quickly set in motion within the ruins.

Rain slowed workers who had reached the basement of one wing, piled high in the middle of the 130-yard long structure were bricks, steel beams and roofing. Workmen admitted it was under that pile up that they expected to find many more bodies. How many more no one could say.

It was the worst schoolhouse disaster in United States history. Some estimates of the ultimate death toll ranged above 600.

There were 700 students and 40 teachers in the two-story London Consolidated school, unit of a $1,000,000 block of educational structures, when an explosion yesterday near dismissal time showered brick and steel upon screaming victims.

Three Found Alive.

Eight hours after the blast, a jumble high school boy and girl were pulled alive from the ruins as more than 1,000 men from the rich East Texas oil fields attacked the wreckage. The two, sobbing hysterically, were clasped in each other's arms under a protecting arch formed by falling debris.

A woman teacher was removed alive but injured after being buried nearly six hours.

Frantic mothers and fathers spent last night speeding by motor car from town to town attempting to find their children in the more than a dozen improvised morgues.

Tons of debris remained to be removed on ground and basement floors, feared the tomb of scores of bodies.

Dead Taken to Six Towns.

Dance halls, roller skating rinks, churches, hotels, hospitals and morgues in six nearby towns were filled with dead.

Workers wearied as they bored into an almost impregnable mass of ruins. Calls for replacements echoed over the vicinity from a powerful, public address system. Some fell exhausted, others stripped to the waist stumbled out of dust clouds for fresh aid and plunged back for more digging.

Born of oil, many authorities theorized the $150,000 structure, show spot of the cornfields of oil belt, met destruction in the same manner.

Superintendent W. C. Shaw, who stood outside on the grounds and barely escaped death from debris that hurled 300 yards in all directions, said it was "quite possible" unburned gas from the nearby field had accumulated in basement crannies and hollow tile and finally gave way to spontaneous combustion.

The odor of gas had been strong for weeks, he commented, and several survivors of the tragedy said gas fumes had bothered them recently.

Forty-five minutes proved the difference between life and death for the students.

Plans had been made originally to dismiss the entire student body that early for a track and field meet. Later it was decided to release only the participants early. They were among the few survivors.

Rumble Heard 12 Miles.

J. Mahaffey, of Selma City, said: "I heard the rumble" of the blast while he was 12 miles away.

"When I got there more than 40 bodies had been laid to one side," he related.

"One body had been blown through the roof and was lodged on top of the section of the building left standing."

E. J. McGee, of nearby Gaston, arrived in time to see "about 50 or 60 scared and bloody children running to their homes."

TRUSTING SYSTEM DONE AT GUELPH NIXON ANNOUNCES

Guards Added — Fence To Come, But "Show-Place" Aspect Will Be Kept

SO WILL DR. HEASLIP

TORONTO, March 19 (C.P.).—Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon announced to-day the system of "trusting" prisoners at the Ontario Reformatory, Guelph, would be gradually abandoned and far more rigid custodial precautions imposed.

Mr. Nixon said many recommendations made in the report of Judge James Madden, who investigated the January riot at the Reformatory, would be carried out. The report was tabled in the Ontario Legislature last night.

The dormitory system will be done away with gradually, Mr. Nixon said. Construction of a new cell-block will be started almost immediately and the department will provide single cells for prisoners as quickly as possible.

Mr. Nixon said certain recommendations in the report have been put into effect. Twenty guards have been added, all outside guards have been armed, adequate supplies of arms and tear gas have been stored where prisoners can't get at them.

The "show place" aspect of the Reformatory grounds, criticised by Judge Madden, will not be destroyed, Mr. Nixon said.

Staff Changes Secret

Mr. Nixon said he was withholding details of staff changes at the institution until reorganization was complete. He indicated certain recommendations of Judge Madden concerning this would be carried out.

The provincial secretary was favorably disposed toward the abolition of the five-man parole board and the substitution of a full-time official as suggested by Judge Madden but legislation for the purpose will not be introduced this session.

Mr. Nixon said the evidence against rioting prisoners of the Reformatory would be given to the Wellington crown attorney for his action. Judge Madden recommended the prosecution of 28 prisoners who escaped, of three on charges of arson and of others on charges of illegal assembly and rioting.

It will be up to the crown attorney to decide if prosecutions will be launched.

Amnesty Promise Good.

Mr. Nixon emphasized the promise of amnesty to escaped prisoners who had returned voluntarily

24 Dresses For The Season Is Queen Elizabeth's Order

Most Difficult Task Is Arranging Colors To Avoid Clashes With Uniforms Or Furnishings

LEANS TO BLUE AND PINK

By Mollie McGee
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, March 19 (C.P.).—Queen Elizabeth is spending busy mornings with her dressmaker and has ordered 24 dresses for the approaching season from Norman Hartnell, young London designer much in vogue with the young smart set.

The Royal order includes day dresses, afternoon dresses, full Court dresses, special gowns for Ascot and the Buckingham Palace garden party, tea gowns, evening coats and fur capes which are to be remodelled from valuable furs.

The selection of colors has been found a difficult task. Her Majesty and her designer have spent a great deal of care so that there will be no clashing with uniforms or furnishings.

During a fitting, which may last for three hours, the Queen keeps beside her the Orders and Ribbons she intends to wear with the gowns so that there may be no uncertainty or mistakes in the blending of the shades. She has shown a distinct preference for blues and a blooming pink.

Train Passengers Get Fright As Convicts Fight To Escape

Passenger, Conductor Rush To Aid As Mountie Tackles Wildly-Firing Desperado

SHOVEL DOES THE TRICK

SASKATOON, March 19 (C.P.).—Two convicts were lodged to-day in Prince Albert Penitentiary while Joe Parr related how he helped Constable E. Davis of Royal Canadian Mounted Police prevent escape of the dangerous pair from a railway train.

Conductor L. D. Goldsworthy, father of Leroy Goldsworthy, of Boston's National Hockey League team, was credited, too, with courageous action in helping overpower the thugs.

"You've got to hand it to that Mountie," Parr said last night when located by newspapermen after an all-day search for the passenger who went to Davis' assistance as the constable was attacked by his prisoners. "He's the bravest man I've met for many a day."

Davis was wearing Clarence Roy Nolan and Paddy Sullivan from Edmonton to Prince Albert to serve seven and five year sentences for safe-cracking at Mirror, Alta., early yesterday. Near Cranders, 30 miles west of Saskatoon, the prisoners attacked the constable, snatched his revolver and fired several shots in attempting a getaway.

Davis had been sitting in the smoking compartment of a coach, with his two prisoners, leg-ironed,

Two Guards Blamed For Riot At Guelph In Madden's Report

Judge Proposes Turning Reformatory From "Show-Place" To Fenced-In Prison

WITH ARMED GUARDS

Would Punish Convicts Who Escaped—Substitute Cells For Dormitories

TORONTO, March 18.—(CP)—Without delay the Ontario Government was expected to-day to act upon recommendations by Judge James Madden for turning the Ontario reformatory at Guelph from a "show-place" into a fenced prison guarded by armed officers.

Report of the Nagane Judge, appointed to investigate causes of a fire in the reformatory January 17 when $32,000 damage was caused to reformatory buildings and 23 convicts escaped, was tabled in the Ontario Legislature last night by Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon.

Indecision and inefficiency by two senior officers—Sergeant William Maxwell and Sergeant Alfred Maguire—were an immediate cause of the riot, the Madden report found. Neither of them had appreciated the seriousness of the Dunnes strikes by 26 or 30 prisoners, failing to report on that and subsequent developments to Superintendent D. D. Heaslip.

Retirement of Maxwell and Maguire was recommended in the report, which suggested augmenting the reformatory staff, arming outside guards, abolishing dormitories in favor of individual cells, making attendance at school classes compulsory for illiterate and near-illiterate convicts.

No Sign of Conspiracy

No evidence was found of a conspiracy to riot. The jurist reported Maxwell and Maguire had proven themselves unqualified to hold important posts in any way they handled the situation developments when 29 to 30 prisoners refused to eat noon dinner Jan. 17 and barricaded themselves in a dormitory.

Maxwell failed in his duty here, which Judge Madden said was to look the strikers in. He told Dr. Heaslip "some of the boys" had refused to eat dinner, failing to say how many left the dining room and that they barricaded themselves in a dormitory.

Called from his residence on the grounds, Maguire promised the striking group "no one would be punished" if they returned to their cells. Yet Judge Madden said Maguire selected two men he considered ringleaders and took them to the tower to be locked up. A third was locked up at his own request.

Then the trouble started. "Owing to the indecision and vacillating attitude of Sergeant Maxwell" and the conduct of Sergeant Maguire "who did not know what he was doing," the charged the officers with "unanswerable neglect of duty."

Judge Madden was not impressed by the scenic beauty of the reformatory grounds, dotted by picturesque artificial lakes and streams. It was a "show-place." Escape was easy—56 had escaped in the last three years, though nearly all were recaptured.

Charge 23 Who Escaped.

Recommending that the 23 who escaped during the riot be charged in Criminal Court along with three other unnamed convicts who set fire to bed clothing and books, he said:

"No institution for detention for crime should be attractive, either to the public or the inmates. The effect is bad, material beauty of grounds is not reformative and certainly tends to make the place look inviting. It should be the reverse, rigidly plain, to inculcate a wholesome fear on the part of both the public and the inmates."

Complaints against quality of the food were unjustified, in the Judge's opinion. But he found that dormitories in which 30 and more men lived were "schools of crime." As soon as the Government was able it should install individual steel cells.

Fault with the parole system he held was founded on fact. The report suggested abolition of the existing Parole Board and appointment of one full-time official. In the same part of his report, the Judge urged that magistrates refrain as far as possible from giving indefinite sentences.

FEDERAL WHEAT POLICY APPROVED IN COMMONS VOTE

Leader Of Portage La Prairie Bolts To Join Opposition In 119-48 Ballot

DUNNING BLAMES POOLS

OTTAWA, March 18 (CP)—If the Dominion Government failed to foresee the advance in wheat prices and take steps to ensure the producer full benefits from such improvement, the co-operative wheat pools of western Canada were equally negligent, Finance Minister Dunning told the House of Commons yesterday.

Mr. Dunning and several of his colleagues advanced this argument in opposing a want-of-confidence motion by E. E. Perley (Cons. Qu'Appelle), regretting the government's action last August in making the operations of the wheat board conditional upon the price falling to 90 cents. The amendment was lost on a vote of 119 to 48 with Henry Leader (Lib., Portage La Prairie) voting with the combined opposition forces.

In explaining his stand, Mr. Leader said he had not lost confidence in the government and did not regard his vote as registering want of confidence in the government's other policies.

All the Social Credit and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation members lined up with all the Conservatives to support the Perley motion.

Two other Liberals, W. A. Tucker of Rosthern, and Gilbert Weir of MacDonald, voted with the government but declared they regretted the action the government had taken with respect to wheat. They were not prepared to vote want of confidence because they disagreed with the government on one issue.

"Joseph was a piker compared to the government of Canada," said Finance Minister Dunning as he told the liquidating of the heavy wheat surplus held by the wheat board as a result of several years' accumulation. The government was in the wheat business to a greater extent than any other organization in the world.

Claimant of the world's crown for speed typing in her class, seven-year-old Reta Louise Elder, of Raymond, Alta., pictured here at her machine, has already won international fame through her ability to type 120 words a minute without effort. The young typist had her first typing training with a number of other children in a kindergarten experiment which included spelling and writing. The young Alberta miss recently made a tour of the United States where she was hailed as a marvel, but though she practises regularly at her typewriter, her general education is not being neglected. Her general average is 91 per cent.

Reach Island In Time To Finish Supper With Timber Cutters They Thought Hurt

ROW-BOAT BEAT THEM

TOBERMORY, Ont., March 19 (C.P.).—All's well with the inhabitants of Yeo Island, and they don't need to be rescued, thanks, but even so Captain John Amsbury and the doughty crew of the steam tug John and Alex were heroes of sorts to-day in this little Lake Huron fishing town.

For Captain John and his men struggled for 18 hours yesterday to reach Yeo, 15 miles out in ice-filled Lake Huron. Four other men who set out in a rowboat to aid five timber cutters thought to be in need of help on the island came in for a share of the acclaim, too.

Flashing fire signals from the island on Wednesday night meant only one thing to the fishing folk here. The wood-choppers, Percy Spears, Bill Robbins, Ivan Robbins, Bert Hartley, and Bill Lowry, were in trouble. "Rescue" efforts got under way immediately.

But when the tugboat crew reached the island last night, they found the four would-be rescuers who had preceded them grouped around the campfire with the "rescued."

Supper was being served, so the captain and his men cleaned up what was left. Then they returned to Tobermory, towing the rowboat.

MONTREAL DOLE CLEAN-UP BEGINS TEN HEADS FIRED

OFFICES RAIDED

MONTREAL, March 19—(C.P.)—Entire clerical staff of the Montreal unemployment relief commission, distributors of the dole in Montreal for more than two years, were to be called back to work to-day as provincial government authorities pressed an investigation into what Premier Maurice Duplessis termed "ruinous and intolerable abuses."

Re-establishment of the staff of about 500, all but the three commissioners, the comptroller and nine department heads who have been dismissed, will permit administration of relief to the needy while the probe is underway.

The government's probe, Premier Duplessis said at Quebec last night after a conference with Montreal civic heads, will be carried out in co-operation with city authorities.

"Justice will be done; and those found guilty will be punished," the premier declared, adding no question of the relief commissioners' integrity existed. They could not be expected to know everything going on, he said.

Since provincial police, acting on the premier's orders, made a swift midnight raid on the offices Monday night, business has been conducted under supervision of an official from the attorney-general's department.

Chairman of the commission, Brig.-Gen. E. de B. Panet, ejected from the offices yesterday after being allowed in for a time, announced he had requested a royal commission, with a superior court judge presiding, be appointed to probe charges against the commission.

In his statement from Quebec, Premier Duplessis declared the province was capable of conducting the probe and no judge would be appointed.

Deputation Asks Minister To Take Over Cobourg Road

EARLY DECISION

Assumption by the Ontario Government of the road from Norwood to Cobourg through Hastings and Roseneath as a provincial highway was sought by a large deputation of men from Northumberland and Peterborough Counties in an interview with Hon. T. B. McQuesten in Toronto on Wednesday morning.

More than one hundred men crowded into the office of the Minister of Highways, reminded him of the similar request that was made a year ago, and appealed for an early decision to be followed by actual work on the road. Hon. Mr. McQuesten's reply was to the effect that he would discuss the subject of the petition with engineers of his Department and also with the local members of the Legislature, and he hoped to be able to announce a definite undertaking in the near future.

The speakers for the deputation were: Harold N. Carr, M.P.P., Northumberland; T. P. Lancaster, M.P.P., Peterborough; Reeve Howard G. Fairman, Hastings; Bork S. Ferguson, M.P., Hastings-Peterborough; Mayor Maurice Booth, Cobourg; Reeve Cecil G. Mercer, Hope Township, representing the special roads commission of Northumberland and Durham; M. Davey of Roseneath, and Walter M. Foskin of Hastings, representing the Kawartha Lakes and Haliburton Tourist Association.

Cottagers Present.

Among those with the deputation were twenty Toronto residents who have summer cottages in the Trent area; representatives of the Brethaupt Leather Company; Reeve Thompson and the other members of the Norwood Council; fifteen men from Hastings, including Reeve Fairman and Councillors Lou Kelley and Stanley Stevenson; Reeve Brisbin and other members of Hamilton Township Council; Reeve Deviney and others of the Haldimand Council; Reeve Wesley Pacey and a group from Alnwick Township; Mayor Booth and Reeve L. H. Wilson, with several others from Cobourg.

"I think we impressed Mr. McQuesten with the importance of the Norwood-Cobourg road," Reeve Fairman told The Examiner to-day. "There is a lot of through traffic over it, especially during the tourist season. By going back this time we showed that we were serious in our appeal, and it was certainly apparent that Mr. McQuesten was impressed. He suggested that the Department might compromise by assuming at least the Cobourg-Hastings stretch to begin with, and we are hoping that work will be started this season."

78 Years In One House

Records stand only until they are broken. The Examiner in its quest for the individual who has lived the longest period in one house is called upon to again revise its findings. We were sure we had a record in Peterborough of a man living 77 years in one house, but Karl E. Monk writes from Bethany in Durham County to tell of Mr. Richard Wilson of Lifford Line near Bethany. Mr. Wilson has lived for 83 years on the same farm and 78 of these years in the same house, a substantial structure of stone which was ready for occupancy in 1859.

So that one will have to stand for the present. It started with 72 years on the same street and 55 years in one house; then it went to 77 years in the same house and now it has grown to 78 under the same roof. People who move frequently have no opportunity of gaining admission to this particular honor roll.

What Mr. Rickard Said

In an Ottawa despatch carried by the Examiner it was stated that W. F. Rickard, Liberal M.P. for Durham, was a free trader of the out-and-out variety. Mr. Rickard has written from Ottawa asking that this matter be put right. He referred us to the record of his speech as contained in the unrevised edition of Hansard, and we consider that fair enough, as the unrevised edition is likely to be more accurate than the revised, because in the latter edition members at times take opportunity to touch up certain spots in their addresses which do not look quite right in print.

Mr. Rickard had been speaking of conditions in his own riding; he had been dealing with the pure joy of living in Durham, "famed for its fruit, its Devonshire cream, its pure-bred stock and its fertile fields." There may have been a longing to be back home again as Mr. Rickard told of "strawberry short cake made with Durham strawberries, and apple pie and Devonshire cream still taste mighty good to the people of that county."

Coming to the tariff business the member for Durham made it plain enough he was not in favor of high tariffs and high protection; he preferred a more open sort of trade bargaining, and was certain that if the United States markets had not taken 160,000 head of our cattle the farmers would have been hardly able to give them away. On the matter of free trade, we quote what Mr. Rickard said as recorded by Hansard:

> "I would not have it understood, however, that I am an out and out free trader. I refuse to subscribe to the principle that it is always best to buy in the cheapest market."

The Examiner is ready at any time to accept Hansard as an authority on what has been spoken in the House of Commons, and we apply the same ruling in this case. We published the Ottawa report just as it came on the wire, and we presume other papers in many parts of the country did the same thing. We are pleased to make a correction and thank Mr. Rickard for having called our attention to it.

The Spoon In The Tea Cup

There was a sample service sent to this office today on how people should behave; what they should do on certain occasions, and how they should eat. All of it came under the general title of etiquette and good manners.

The first question discussed was "Should a spoon ever be left in the tea cup?" And the answer was provided saying such a thing should never be done. It was considered bad manners, poor taste, a clumsy and clownish sort of thing. Truth is there was not anything evil or bad left unsaid about the habit.

We are not minded to argue that point at length, but we are certain as could be one could never have convinced the hired man on Lot 4, Concession Ten, that it was wrong or not in good taste to leave the spoon sticking up in the tea cup. The cups used there on week days were big fellows and white and deep and strong. The saucers were fashioned on similar lines. If one drank from the saucer then it was possible to get a good and great drink. But it is the spoon which is under review at the moment.

The hired man sat on the corner of the bench along one side of the table—that is the kitchen table. To be more accurate, he would be occupying the northeast corner, and he always left the spoon in his cup, and he always doused in two good spoons of sugar which he stirred with a degree of vigor not often seen. Not he was never in any danger of having the spoon stick in his eye when he drank from the cup, nor was there the least chance that he would swallow the thing. He had rather a deft sort of technique for managing the spoon and making it stay put. When he took hold on the handle of the cup he managed to twine one finger about the spoon. He must have practised the thing for quite a long time as he was very smart at it. He never had to go looking to see where his spoon had gone because it was always standing up in the cup right there beside him, and he might well have advanced that fact as one of the reasons for justifying his method.

We don't know what the hired man would have said if he had read a piece about leaving the spoon in the cup being bad table manners. Possibly he might have regarded it as a reflection upon his bringing up and would therefore have resented it.

The Same People Will Have To Pay The Bills

Trying to Shift a Burden From Here to There Does Not Diminish the Size of the Burden.

MAYORS from a wide range of territory gathered in Ottawa for a conference, and chief end of it all seems to be to tell the Government the municipalities want to be relieved of the cost of dealing with unemployment through relief payments. It was even suggested that a Dominion-wide referendum be taken to see what the people wanted. If there was a vote taken it would result in a verdict "Let the government attend to it;" but the vote will not be taken.

Reading some of the statements by delegates one gets the impression that if the municipalities were relieved of making payments toward relief they would be relieved of all responsibility. The one point which the mayors can present is that municipal taxation being levied chiefly against real estate, too much is being dumped on the door step of the home owner. He is being charged too much for owning a home. We hope the mayors do not allow their enthusiasm to lead them to making the claim that if the municipality as such is relieved of making payments then the people in the municipality are entirely exempt.

THEN THERE was an address by W. A. Dickson, M.P.P. for South Perth, in which he showed in detail just how much the people of Perth riding were saving under the present government. He cited the reduced cost of Hydro for rural sections and the elimination of the service charge to certain urban users, also the lowered interest rate on farm loans. Such decreases are actual savings.

Mr. Dickson also included in his compilation the government taking over the municipal portion of old age pensions and mothers' allowances. Also there was the one mill which was being handed back to municipalities. There was also the increased grant to townships for road purposes and the assumption by the Highways Department of the cost of provincial roads. All such items when added together made a pleasing and impressive total.

But surely Mr. Dickson does not believe that the residents of his South Perth riding will not in future make any contribution toward these payments. He knows sufficient of public life to realise there is no mint at Queen's Park, and that the government there must take its money from the people, otherwise it would have none to spend. There may be a difference in the method and personnel of the collection agency, but we are quite certain the people in Perth will continue to pay for these expenditures. Right now the Provincial Government spends just about twice as much as in the days of the Drury Government.

IF THE municipalities were to succeed in having the Federal government take over the entire cost of relief the people in the municipalities would continue to pay. Perhaps in a different way, but they would pay just the same. They might see their municipal tax bill grow a little less and they would be pleased. They might never think to look for all the other collectors which the government has working for it, but they would keep on collecting, and they would have to collect more because the municipality was collecting less. The collectors for the government are behind counters in the stores; they sell stamps to put on cheques; they pass on to the consumer the sales tax and all the other taxes.

If the mayors gathered at Ottawa believed they should suggest to the Federal government more spending by that body, it might be well for them to take a look at the increases shown in the Dunning budget speech. The table shows the increased taxation in a four-year period:

Customs import duties	$ 70,072,000	$ 81,500,000
Excise duties	37,834,000	45,500,000
War tax revenues:
Banks	1,826,000	1,338,000
Insurance companies	826,000	762,000
Income tax	92,097,000	102,500,000
Sales tax	36,814,000	113,500,000
Manufactures, importation, stamp, transportation, etc.	20,370,000	28,100,000
Total tax revenue	$264,319,000	$384,618,000

That table shows a straight increase of $130,299,000 over four years ago. Politicians like to refer to such a showing as buoyancy in revenue, but the blunt fact remains that it means 130 million more dollars taken from the people than was exacted four years ago. The trouble with a good many speeches and a good many financial beliefs is that they are based on the assumption if we can take an obligation from here and place it there we have become rid of that obligation. But we can't do it. It never has been done and it never will be accomplished. The people will pay no matter which government or which taxing agency comes to get the money.

Our Modern Way

Oshawa branch of the United Automobile Workers have called a strike in one of the plants in that city which makes parts for General Motors. The trouble seems to be that 100 workers were laid off, but the explanation coming from the manager of the plant is that every year a night shift is employed for two or three months, and when the extra work period is over the night shift is discharged. There will be no more work for these people until the busy season comes next year.

And at best that is not a satisfactory way to do business. The plant gets busy beyond its day capacity for three months, and then extra workers are engaged. When the rush is over the night shift is discharged, and that leads to the very natural question: What do they do then? They cannot earn enough in three months to keep themselves and families for the rest of the year, and as they are laid off at a time when industry has passed its peak point they cannot all go and find work elsewhere? As things are managed today, the chances are a good many of these men who work for three months at nights would gradually find their way to the relief office, and the municipality or the government would become responsible for looking after them. And there is little enough in that of which one can approve.

NOTE AND COMMENT

At any rate the United States had a lot of practice writing notes to Germany during the early years of the great war.

Automotive engineer says the present trend is toward four speeds. We presume he means fast, faster, fastest and into the ditch.

Sam Lawrence the C.C.F. member of the Legislature has been defending sit-down strikes. Apparently he goes on the theory that the end justifies the means.

Anti-gas classes are to be started in Winnipeg. We would have thought Ottawa would have been the first place selected for that kind of training.

The municipal subsidy act was passed in the Legislature by a vote of 53 to 0. Evidently no one was anxious to appear hostile to Santa Claus.

Communism is described by Premier Duplessis as Public Enemy No. 1, and we imagine he will get a lot of letters from people who will tell him that title should be given to Fascism.

A census is to be taken of the picks and shovels used in a Northern Development branch operation. We presume a deduction will have to be made for the handles the boys broke leaning on them.

It is claimed that Toronto has one gas pump for every 20 cars. If competition is the life of trade the gas business in the Queen City should be about the liveliest in the country.

United States producers are experimenting with yellow popcorn. The trouble with that variety is that you would not be able to tell without tasting it whether it was buttered or not.

Winnipeg police are now gunning for folk who promote whist drives for gain. There seems to be a general agitation to stop gambling everywhere except where it flourishes the most—at racetracks and in the stock and grain markets.

Any claim the Nazi administration may have been wanting to make to the rating of supermen must vanish in the face of the confession that like the rest of the world they do not know what to do with old razor blades.

The suggestion has been made by the Hotelmen's Association that a special tax be tagged on to tourist trailers. When Ontario is seeking to develop tourist traffic it would perhaps be as well to give this proposal a six months' hoist.

ON STRIKE

(By A. O.)

¶ So many people go on strike, I long to know just what it's like, if it brings pain or luck; I've argued and protested too, that I was never paid my due, but I have never struck.

¶ And there are times when bills grow great, and I chant then my hymn of hate, my ducats seem to fade; and by the time I pay the skates, and settled at their gouging rates, it takes all I have made.

¶ And after I have paid the rent, for days I never have a cent, and I must charge the coal; the grindstone's took my nose near off, and I rebel at times and scoff, when I get in the hole.

¶ There's lots of times I'd like to strike, to see just what the thing was like. I'd join with other men; I'd strike against the hopeful jay, who stops me as I go my way, and wants to borrow ten.

¶ I'd like to strike when weather's fine, then I would stay in bed till nine. I'd soak up rest within; no more I'd struggle like a slave, nor would I scrub my ears and shave, have whiskers on my chin.

¶ But I don't think I'll strike just yet, because the days are cold and wet, they seem that way to me; I'll hold my strike off yet a bit, until warm days when I can sit—beneath my basswood tree.

Mr. Rickard Tells Glory of Durham

From Parliamentary Debates

Mr. W. F. RICKARD (Durham): The people of Durham county are satisfied with the budget, as are the people of most counties throughout Canada. The agricultural vote is the largest in point of numbers and financial importance in my riding. The farmers are satisfied that last year's budget, and this year's budget too, are well calculated to widen their markets.

It has not been our experience in Durham county that there has been a falling off in the price of cattle and live stock generally during the past few months. We do not find that the importation of vegetable fat has cut into the dairy market to any great extent. Up our way I am confident that good cooks will continue to use a good deal of old-fashioned lard and butter for their cooking. The county of Durham is famed for its fruit, its Devonshire cream, its pure bred strawberry shortcake made with Durham strawberries, and apple pie and Devonshire cream, still taste mighty good to the people of that county. No amount of advertising could induce the cooks in my riding to abandon their tried and proved methods of producing these things or to jeopardize their family reputations by introducing into their cooking too much vegetable fat instead of lard and butter.

Next in order in my riding must be considered the manufacturing interests. In the town of Port Hope a new industry has grown up as the result of a geological find in the Great Slave Lake district. During last year we produced 28 grammes of radium, and thanks to the cooperation of our representative in London who is also a Durham boy, a market has been found for this commodity, which sold for $25.00 a gramme or a total of $700,000. This is one industry that is not clamouring for protection. In addition, the revival in the motor industry seems to assure a steady market for the important rubber factory at Bowmanville, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Limited. The file factory at Port Hope is the only factory in Canada producing files, and that plant is doing a bigger business than ever before, notwithstanding the fact that during the last election the men were told that if they voted for King and the Liberal candidate the doors of the plant would be closed the next morning and the men would be out of work.

We have other industries in Durham county as well. For instance, there is the Ideal works, which makes bathtubs, et cetera, and is working at full capacity, and we also have several foundries which are doing a good business. In the village of Newcastle, where I live, we have a small cabinet factory employing twenty-five to thirty men and women, which is working overtime, with orders for many months ahead. That plant is located in part of the factory where the Massey-Harris company started years ago.

In the county of Durham we have that desirable state of affairs of which the hon. member for Huron North (Mr. Deachman) spoke in his splendid address on Thursday last—the opportunity to work and to live in clean, healthy surroundings. The towns are not large but they are prosperous. I should like to be able to speak on this subject as Hon. Edward Blake was wont to speak. I cannot match his eloquence, but in love of the county and devotion to its interests I do not yield even to Hon. Edward Blake.

There is another section of the community about which very little is heard in parliament. I refer to citizens who, either by their own thrift and industry or as the result of those qualities in their ancestors, are possessed of a modest competency which they have invested in stocks and bonds. They are the financial backbone of the community, and they are glad to see that the Dunning budget does not indulge in any sensational or freak attempts at financing. They feel certain that their investments will not be jeopardized by any action of this government. Ours is an old, settled community, and during the course of the past four or five generations many small private fortunes have been made. I can remember, in my boyhood days when the merchants of Bowmanville put on special sales for the days on which the interest on bonds was paid. "Coupon day" in Bowmanville was a big event. For the past six or seven years coupon payments have been slim, but now they are growing in importance again, and I hope "coupon day" will again return to all the towns in my constituency.

I am surprised when I hear farmer members of this house talking in favour of high tariffs and high protection. Surely they must know that our market in the United States during the past year has been of great benefit to the farmers of this country. What would the farmer have received for his cattle if it had not been for the United States market, to which we shipped 160,000 head last year? I venture to say that we would have been hardly able to give them away. I would not have it understood, however, that I am an out and out free trader. I refuse to subscribe to the principle that it is always best to buy in the cheapest market. If the advantages of free trade simply mean the progressive and well-considered relaxation of restrictions on commerce, then I am for it. The industries that are carrying on in Durham county are well established, and by this time they have realized that they need not fear the competition of other countries. With growing markets they feel that they can carry on without asking for contributions from their fellow citizens.

THE DEPUTY

—London Opinion.

Showing Lack of Courtesy.

(From the Galt Reporter.)

A CABINET minister was speaking in the House of Commons one evening recently. Members, particularly those of the government party, were in their seats in large numbers and the address was received with attentive silence, broken only by the desk-thumping of the speaker's colleagues every time he paused.

The minister finished and resumed his seat, and away down the Chamber, on the Opposition side, another member rose and started to speak. A more finished speaker than the minister whom he followed, the new man presented his arguments in a series of clearcut pictures that really formed a pleasing contrast to the cut-and-dried talk that had elicited so much perfunctory desk-thumping.

But how was it received?

The new speaker was just a nobody from the far end of the Opposition benches, just one of those members belonging to a small group whose strength means little when the House vote is polled. So out they went, government members and Opposition members, stealing quietly away from the chamber as if fearful lest they be contaminated by the speech of the man from "the group of unorthodoxy."

The robed Speaker disappeared and in his place lolled a deputy whose chief interest appeared to lie in the fact that the large throne-like Speaker's chair was a comfortable one in which to doze. Only a handful of members remained behind to hold the fort and they, with studied indifference, began to paw through papers, read their newspapers or chat in undertones with each other.

And all the while the orator drove home his points—for the audience of Hansard alone. True, in the galleries there was a good-sized crowd of people who listened and appeared to like the speaker's style of oratory, whether they agreed with his subject or not. But of course, they formed no part of the House and didn't count. They were only the taxpayers who foot the bills.

Somehow, it seems that if members of Parliament will persist in making speeches on the slightest provocation, it would be only fair that they should be obliged to stay around and furnish an audience when the other fellow wants to make his.

Too Much For Municipalities.

(From the Niagara Falls Review.)

THE MAYORS of Canada are in session at Ottawa and many interesting suggestions are being made. As was to be expected, in the forefront of the discussions is the question of unemployment and unemployment relief. Undoubtedly as proposed, and long urged by the Review, the whole problem should be a Dominion matter. Under present circumstances it is impossible or at least impracticable to draw up a long term policy for unemployment. The present system is merely a dole with not much to show in return.

There is this to be said for the Works Progress Administration in the United States, large bodies of men are gainfully employed, in receipt of wages on useful work, which will become permanent improvements. In Canada the problem is that of every municipality, small or great, and each has to fit into it as into a huge sort of patchwork quilt. That there should be difficulties and overlappings and added cost is inevitable. That unemployed should be pampered in some places and half-starved in others also is inevitable.

Fortunately, in most communities, a real effort has been made to strike a middle-of-the-way system, with an eye on the necessities of the unemployed as well as the capacity to pay of the taxpayers. The time has come when a clear division must be drawn between those capable of doing useful work and those who are unemployable by reason of infirmity and age. Obviously for the latter some sort of system, a compromise of the mothers allowance and old age pensions measures must be adopted.

It is impossible to take a long view of the situation when so many public bodies are involved, all handling relief. The federal government should take control of the whole problem. Municipalities would like to be able to provide worthwhile work for all the unemployed within their boundaries, but it is impossible to pay the added cost of materials. In every part of Canada there are improvements which could be made, utilizing the labor which is everywhere available. And the great bulk of the men who are out of work would welcome the opportunity of accepting jobs which would make them self-supporting and self-respecting.

If the federal government refuses to accept its manifest duty, the whole responsibility for relief, then the provincial government, perhaps with federal grants, should undertake it in the various provinces. Municipalities have reached the end of their taxing powers; practically all their revenues being from real estate. In Niagara Falls and elsewhere, one finds once valuable and tax-paying properties being razed so taxes on vacant land only need be paid. The problem is known and our legislators at Ottawa and Toronto, must long ere now, have realized it is too great for the municipalities.

IT IS SPREADING

(L'Evenement, Quebec)

IT IS SAID that this social pest (Communism) is spreading rapidly among the unemployed single men in Quebec. It is probably a passing crisis, explicable enough, because of the industrial depression which is prolonged in this city and because of certain thoughtless propaganda by some politicians who indulge in prodigality of language and even go so far as to recommend violence as a cure for the long bill. The grosbeaks travel in flocks, sometimes as many as fifty to a flock.

According to a local bird authority the Evening Grosbeaks winter in the north with an occasional migration in search of food, which consists of various kind of seeds. They are not vociferous songsters but have a note like the robin. They are gaily apparelled with splashes of yellow, black and white and sport a rather long bill. To The Editor

REGULATIONS OBSERVED

Editor Examiner,

Sir: There was a letter in your paper dealing with what was termed "the extraordinary procedure" followed at the inquest of the poisoning tragedy in Otonabee, and among other things it made reference to the "complete disregard for the provisions of the Ontario Cemetery Act."

I consider this letter an unwarranted attack on all those, including myself, who had anything to do with the case. I conduct an undertaking business at Keene, and application was made to me by telephone for the production of the body in question, and I promptly refused to have anything to do with it until the proper papers were presented. These were forthcoming later, and were in order, being signed by the acting Medical Officer of Health, and he attended at the time the casket was removed from the grave, after which the casket was placed in my hearse and removed to Peterborough where the autopsy was performed. To the best of my knowledge I complied with the provisions of the Cemetery Act. The papers were in order and signed before there was any work done, and it creates a misleading and entirely false impression to have it stated there was a complete disregard of the official regulations.

HIS PRIVATE LIFE.

(New York Times)

AS FOR the Duke of Windsor, people may differ about his course of action while he was Edward VIII, but from the instant of his abdication there can be no disputing that his conduct has been admirable. Perhaps it is best summed up in the words so dear to the British heart, a gentleman. He has stepped down from a throne and into private life with a perfect unpretending simplicity.

When a man has put aside the most splendid imperial crown in history it would be easy for him to go into a melodramatic retirement that would keep the world agog.

Instead of so behaving, the Duke of Windsor lost no time in getting down to the vicinity of Vienna, donning some sport clothes, shooting some golf, buying himself a camera, and going out to the cafes and theatre, like everybody else. This is the most effective way in which a former king and emperor can efface himself and leave the centre of the stage to his brother and successor.

It costs money to raise HOGS

—and then if they die you take a double loss—even if you did use your own feeds.

If you are not getting them off at six months you are losing money again. But Marmill Bacon Hog Concentrates are just what hogs want and need. They grow like shrry and are often off to market in five months, bringing you many extra dollars as extras.

Marmill Feeds are possibly not the cheapest per bag—but they are cheapest in the long run because it is the balance of minerals, vitamins, proteins, etc. that gives low production cost.

By using Marmill Bacon Hog Concentrate you can produce quality bacon in a minimum time with or without milk—at lowest cost. Instead of having one hog why not raise two with the same amount of feed or less, in which you have mixed Marmill Bacon Hog Concentrate.

84 RECIPIENTS ROYAL MAUNDY

Distribution Will Take Place Next Thursday In St. Paul's Cathedral

LONDON, March 19—(CP)—At Westminster Abbey is closed in preparation for the Coronation custom of distributing the Royal Maunday will take place a week from Monday at St. Paul's Cathedral. Last year former King Edward attended the distribution in person.

The number of recipients of both sexes corresponds to the number of the king's years. As the king is in his 42nd year there will be 84 recipients this year.

The coins distributed are silver pennies, two-penny three-penny and four-penny pieces, all specially struck for the occasion. The recipients, who are all old and infirm, find a ready sale for a set of Maunday money, which is much prized by collectors.

In addition the pensioners receive certain gown worn on the day of distribution, with other allowances in place of old-time gifts of clothing.

The Maunday money will be distributed by the Archbishop of Canterbury in his capacity as Lord High Almoner, who will be accompanied by the Bishop of London and other ecclesiastics.

The ceremony is a relic of the ancient commemoration of Christ washing the feet of the disciples and the clergy and girl with towels.

The great alms dish, containing the little bags of Maunday money, is borne ceremonially by a yeoman warder from the Tower of London, in full picturesque dress of the Tudor period.

most drivers and it could not be lessened by abolition of the limit.

"The bill would pin traffic officers down to one charge, reckless driving and no two persons in the world agree on what that is," said Mr. McQuesten.

"What are you going to do with the man who drives 35 miles an hour?" asked Mr. S. Colter (Lib., Haldimand-Cayuga). "You'll drive him off the highway."

Mr. McQuesten declared if the speed limit were abolished the man who drove 35 miles would become guilty of reckless driving.

"I'm getting up and about 35 miles is my speed," said Mr. McQuesten. "I can't trust you (Mr. Clark) with a license much longer if you're going to go along at 60."

The highways were built for the average driver and he was not a skilled driver, said Mr. McQuesten.

"We're not going to build highways for these speed fiends," declared Mr. Colter.

Thomas Kidd (Cons., Kingston) declared protection for pedestrians was a great need to-day.

Mr. Colter moved the bill be not receives. This was defeated 16 to 12.

Morning Sittings Will Speed House

TORONTO, March 19, (C.P.) — Morning sittings of the Legislature will be started next Monday in an effort to reach prorogation by mid-Thursday, Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced to-day.

The Premier said the House would sit to-night until the members were "talked out" in the Budget debate. He will insist the debate be concluded to-night by division or otherwise.

It was doubtful morning sessions would enable prorogation by Easter. Several important pieces of legislation have not been debated and there are scores of lesser measures to go through committee stage.

Bust Of Victoria For Senate Alcove

OTTAWA, March 19 (CP)—The Royal Family will be represented by still another carving in the Parliament Buildings here when the bust of Queen Victoria is erected in the alcove above the Speaker's chair in the Senate.

The bust, work of the widely-known sculptor, Coeur de Lion MacCarthy, is completed, and when the stone arrives it will be copied and set up in the Senate between the Lion and the Unicorn which were placed a few weeks ago.

The model was carried from the underground work-room of Mr. MacCarthy and Leo Soucy, famous for his work in the memorial chamber, and placed in the alcove for a few minutes to discover the general effect.

Mr. MacCarthy has portrayed the Queen as a girl, her eyes slightly lowered, looking down on the Senate.

ROBERTS' PROBE GETS INDEFINITE HOIST IN HOUSE

up. You were in the House when the prime minister said he had a $7,000,000 surplus and we want to spend some of it and spread prosperity among the members of the legislature."

William A. Baird (Cons., Toronto-High Park) declared it was not British fair play for Dr. Roberts to delay the taking of evidence that might clear him.

"This is a political move," he said. "It is a family quarrel within the Liberal party and should have been settled in caucus."

"If it is a family row, you'd keep out of it if you had any sense," H. S. Colter (Lib., Haldimand-Cayuga) told Mr. Baird.

"Nobody asked you to help us wash dirty linen," Mr. Croll told Mr. Baird.

Entitled to Action.

"Here is Dr. Roberts, accused of blackmail and entitled to a hearing as soon as possible," said Mr. Baird.

"The motion in the Legislature to call the committee forthwith was accepted by the Government," said Dr. Roberts. "The Minister (Mr. Croll) knows what this delay means. Yet he comes here to-day and says put it off two, three, four, five or six weeks—for God knows how long. I have a living to make and a family to support. I'll have to leave everything and come down here at your convenience."

"If you can't finish what's the use of hearing some witnesses now?" asked Fraser Hunter (Lib., Toronto-St. Patrick's.)

"There has been no suggestion until now the whole thing be postponed," insisted Dr. Roberts.

"Here is a man with his character impugned in Parliament," said Wilfred Heighington (Cons., Toronto-St. David's). "There should be a speedy trial. If you adjourn without hearing witnesses, it will be a great injustice."

"Dr. Roberts should have the assurance of no undue delay," said Joseph Crawford (Lib., Fort William).

"The minute the witnesses are available the committee will be called as quickly as possible," said Mr. Croll.

Evidence Not Available.

"We could be here for two or three weeks and we couldn't clear him because we wouldn't be able to hear all the evidence," added Mr. Croll.

"The announcement of the ore bounty was made at the Sault Ste. Marie banquet on February 16," said Mr. Heighington. "Sir James Dunn (Algoma steel president) was in the country for two weeks after that. Then when Dr. Roberts speaks in the Legislature, it suddenly develops Dunn has booked his passage overseas."

"That remark is not becoming to you," said Mr. Croll. "Sir James Dunn was in Montreal to take a train for New York to sail for England before this thing broke."

"Can't a man cancel a passage?" asked Mr. Heighington.

"There was no suggestion of an inquiry then," said Mr. Croll.

"The resolution for one passed Monday, March 8, and Dunn sailed the Saturday before."

"I have Melville Boulton's word he had his original passage postponed two or three days and he could have postponed it again," said Dr. Roberts.

"When will he be here?" asked Arthur Ellis (Cons., Ottawa South).

"It will be approximately a month," said Mr. Croll.

"He's getting a great benefit by this ore bounty," said Mr. Heighington. "He owes us an obligation."

"Steamroller" at Work.

"We shouldn't be a party to this delay," declared Thomas Kidd (Cons., Kingston.) "Dunn's interests are no more at stake than the honorable member. There is no reason why we can't go ahead and hear witnesses. The Government steamroller is at work. Dunn requires no more consideration than anyone else."

"Mr. Croll says we will meet in a month," observed Mr. Baird. "The Prime Minister will be on his way to the Coronation. It will be the middle of June before the committee is called."

"You have no authority to say where the Prime Minister will be" Mr. Croll told him. "If the Prime Minister's wanted he'll be here."

Mr. Baird said Dunn had sent telegrams extremely sympathetic to the Premier. "Undoubtedly he'll be a friendly witness," he added.

"A nasty imputation," said Mr. Croll.

"Not at all," insisted Mr. Biard. "He'll be a friendly witness."

"You're suggesting he'll lean toward the Prime Minister," said Mr. Croll.

"Put it this way: He won't be a hostile witness," said Mr. Biard.

Mr. Schwenger put Dr. Roberts' motion for the calling of certain witnesses at the next session of the committee. Liberals were solid against it. Dr. Roberts was supported by the Conservatives.

AFTER THE TRAGEDY.

NEW LONDON, Texas, March 19 (A.P.) — As workmen pulled debris from the London Consolidated School to-day a blackboard was exposed showing this in a scrawl:

"Oil and natural gas are East Texas' greatest mineral blessings. Without them this school would not be here learning our lessons."

in the seat opposite. To obviate trips to the drinking fountain, he had filled a bottle with water.

In an unguarded moment he was slugged over the head with the bottle and collapsed temporarily unconscious.

The thugs slashed the policeman's revolver lanyard with the jagged edge of the bottle and took the weapon. One started to shoot while the other grasped the Mountie's crop and began flailing the policeman across the head.

Parr said he was in the main coach when he heard shots. He edged along the passage to the smoker, where he saw the constable dazed and leaning against the door frame. The man with the crop was slashing the policeman across the head.

Davis gave Parr his keys, including keys to the leg-irons, and said "hang on to these no matter what happens to me."

The constable, bleeding from scalp wounds, turned again to the prisoners, exclaiming "you'll have to be tough to get me boys."

Women Get Hysterical.

"There were about 15 persons around the door of the smoker by this time and several women had become hysterical," Parr said. "There were shouts of 'murder' and 'help.'"

Conductor Goldsworthy brought a fire shovel and as he handed it to Davis in the corridor a short fired by one convict crashed through thin panelling in the compartment, whizzed between Goldsworthy and Parr and lodged in the end wall of the coach.

Davis again entered the smoker swinging the shovel and floored the convict with the gun while the other prisoner lashed out with the crop.

"The Mountie managed to get the gun away from the first thug," Parr said. "The conductor and another man and I then entered the compartment and overpowered the second man. We took the riding crop from him and struck him across the head several times."

would be kept. Judge Madden's recommendation was for prosecution of those who were picked up by police or guards.

Sergt. Maxwell, one of the two senior officers whose retirement was advised by Judge Madden, has already been retired, said Mr. Nixon. He did not say whether Sergt. Maguire would be retired.

A fundamental change in the reformatory system is already in progress, Mr. Nixon said.

"The tendency to-day is away from the old system of trusting such a large number of prisoners," he declared. "People to-day won't stand for escapes and the emphasis must be placed on safe custody. The swing of the pendulum is away from opinion popular when the Guelph reformatory was created that the prisoners had to be trusted to be reformed. I imagine the 'Red' Ryan case had much to do with the present attitude."

Mr. Nixon volunteered an opinion that large central area of the prison, including all custodial and industrial buildings should be fenced with mesh wire, barbed wire topped.

Mr. Nixon said Dr. Heasip would remain as superintendent of the reformatory. He had proven himself a capable administrator.

"There is better discipline at Guelph to-day than for many years," he said.

"Modern conditions demand stern measures in such places. There has been a complete change in the type of inmates. To-day they are largely young devil-may-care chaps who don't respond to the trusting system we found so successful 20 years ago."

Parachutes and parts shipped from America to other countries last year were valued at $298,358, or nearly twice that of 1935.

Zeller's Store Holds First Fashion Parade With Success

Models Show Spring Styles On Second Floor Of Establishment

LARGE CROWD

The word 'artistic' seems to describe very well the Parade of Spring Fashions on the second floor of the Zeller Store on Thursday evening, when over five hundred women packed every available inch of space to watch mannequins parade on an obliging elevated platform, long, green and narrow, that was just right for a proper view of every item of the outfits of the ladies who modelled the pretty things. One could see their trim shoes in gleaming patent and soft suede, their chiffon hose, their bags, in colors and black, their pretty hats, their gloves that matched other details in smart ensembles. Spring flowers in a huge basket and soft music played at the piano by Miss Dorothy Whatley, added a decorative note to the setting.

D. J. Fitzgerald, the store manager, acted as announcer, describing the models as they were paraded by the mannequins: Mrs. James Price, Mrs. N. Edgar, the Misses Dorothy Buchanan, Pauline Collins, Peggy Cooney and Alberta Wright, with small, graceful Isabel Carey wearing things for small girls.

The evening things were gorgeous examples of a romantic mode, in printed chiffons and sheers, in nets that floated diaphanously over taffeta foundations. Opalamen pink in Second Empire style, with various-colored sprays of lilac printing its soft surface, the square neck and wasteline outlined by soft blue satin that also made the narrow collar and tab bow.

Color combinations were effective. A frock of rose beige crepe and a bolero with an entire back and part of the front developed in dark brown. It was worn with a loose little basket of the beige cloth and a little dark brown hat. Rough crepe in tearose shade trimmed with brown taffeta; a black bolero dress with Paisley blouse and sash; a navy redingote with pleated scarlet crepe in the front opening and pointed revers of scarlet, worn with blue suede shoes and little blue hat; a navy rough crepe with 'umbrella' pleated skirt and white lace ruching, all these were pretty examples of the Spring modes.

The suits, two and three piece in style, were very attractive also. Sand crepe in Coronation green shade used a brown scarf and brown hat with veil, as accessories; a "jigger" suit of extreme chic had a waistcoat of honey beige; a three-piece outfit was in grey-blue flecked wool.

Grey-Wine Combination

A stunning ensemble that caught the attention was of steel grey wool, fashioned on princess lines, with double-breasted effect and three-quarter length. It had a modified Queen Anne collar and the accessories were in wine shades; suede shoes and purse, kid gloves and a round sailor with upturned brim in 'off the face' mode.

Coats came in dark and bright shades. A little 'mooded' hat of black straw accompanied a coat of Coronation red wool, belted in red suede, and worn with black purse, shoes and gloves and a white Ascot scarf.

Another coat of fleck wool was of bright green with wide revers and leather belt, while a third, still in the bright red of this regal year, was semi-fitted, with squared shoulders, deep wide lapels, outside pleats and slashed pockets. It was effectively styled with a grey and rose Ascot scarf and a shaped hat of grey straw.

As for the dainty little girl, she displayed things for junior wear; a primrose yellow frock of petal crepe opening over a brown front panel, with brown collar and cuffs on her elbow sleeves and a gay yellow band in her hair.

A pale green crepe frock with pleated skirt and little black tie and buttons, was a smart bit of apparel. She wore also a pretty suit of rose flecked wool and a dark sand semi-fitted coat of wool that had 'just right' accents in a printed scarf and a brown felt hat of the 'Wanabond' type.

The pretty coiffures for the mannequins were done at Wright's Beauty Parlor and the miniature piano played by Miss Whalley was a "34inx" model, courtesy of the R. Simpson Company.

Talks on the Grenfell Work

Mrs. W. R. Morris Describes Impressions On Trip To Labrador

Mrs. W. R. Morris, describing a cruise last Summer along the coast of Labrador, was an interesting guest speaker at the meeting on Thursday afternoon of the Local Council of Women, in the green room of the Y.W.C.A.

The meeting was largely attended. The president, Mrs. C. M. Scott, was in the chair and detailed for the ladies the tentative arrangements which have been made for the forthcoming Coronation ceremonial and asked for further suggestions.

Brief talks on the endeavors of their departments were given by two convenors, Mrs. B. P. McNeely (Citizenship), and Mrs. K. Simpson (Cinema and Printed Matter).

It was decided to hold a tea on April 16 with arrangements in the hands of the Program committee and Mrs. F. M. Somerville, assisted by the Telephone committee.

In dealing with correspondence a communication was read, saying that the annual meeting scheduled for Vancouver this year had been postponed. In its place, a statutory executive meeting will be held in Ottawa in May.

Mrs. Morris, outlining her trip to the Labrador, spoke of her visits to the Mission bases of the Grenfell Association, and the splendid work that has been done through the untiring efforts of Sir Wilfred Grenfell. With a band of workers, he went there forty-five years ago, and, realizing the great need of a people dwelling in a vast area without any medical supervision, returned to England to gather money and workers. On his return he treated over 900 patients in the first year.

Encouragement Given

He felt that he was confronted by an opportunity for an application of the principles of practical Christianity. He saw that these people, if transplanted from their native soil, might die, and the objective therefore was to make their existence less dismal and enrich their lives as much as possible. And this said the speaker, is what the Grenfell Mission does. It encourages handiwork among the women, and the workers, when the goods are sold, benefit by the money and the widening of their outlook on life.

The sick are cared for and the healthy are aided to live and dress better, through the efforts of many volunteer workers and those who receive pay for their work in the Labrador. This pay is not very large, as $25 a month for the nurse in charge of a station is an example.

Mrs. Morris paid great tribute to the wonderful support given this work by citizens of the United States. Many of their undergraduates—men and women—spend their long vacations there and give their services gratis.

The speaker asserted that the visitor finds many Americans, English and Scottish people as volunteer workers in the Labrador, but rarely is a Canadian to be found.

C.D.S. Spring Fashion Revue Is Gay Event at the Capitol

Mannequins Display Coats, Suits, Dresses And Knitted Goods

JUNIOR MODES

A woolen wool fleece suit of three-piece fashioning the long coat semi-fitted and the jacket trimmed with tailored buttons of old gold glass. And with this a jaunty little felt beret with rolled bumper brim and band of soft satin ribbon, in dark brown shades. . . .

These were some of the outstanding ensembles of the mode as interpreted on the stage of the Capitol Theatre on Thursday evening at the annual Spring Fashion Revue of the Canadian Department Stores, by a bevy of mannequins: Mrs. Lillian Brown, the Misses Helen Dawson, Violet Davidson, Betty Wolfe, Dorothy Marshall, Mabel Brown, Geraldine Campbell, and three tiny tots: Joan LeBarr, Joan Flies and Bobby Hyde.

The stage was attractively arranged with flowers and the Revue was done in sections, with Miss Campbell as page. Music was rendered by Mose Yekom and his orchestra. During an intermission a tap dancing and singing specialty was presented by the two juniors, Sylvia Duisman and Irving Parnell, who were winners in a recent contest sponsored by the Capitol when they were awarded a trip to Toronto and were guests at Station CFRB.

The coats shown were especially interesting. English tweed in a navy and green blend of soft suiting fabric, made a garment with side fastening of large black buttons. And shades of brown and yellow appeared in a smart model with dark brown suede belt and natural wolf collar. A navy blue in "nubby" weave had a little collar that expanded into wide notched revers, on dressed grey lamb, and a narrow belt of elastic metal. Herringbone in mustard shade and fleece weave made a coat with plea[ted] skirt and black belt and buttons.

One of the "three-quarter" coats in yellow flan[nel] was combined effectively with [green], in skirt and soft tailored [hat] and bag.

Beige and Blue.

Two and three-piece tailored suits were smashy [examples] of the Revue. Navy tricotine [jacket] flared at the back under [belt] had a collar with wide re[vers] was worn with a navy petal [hat] and a forget-me-not [boutonniere].

[Three-piece] suits were in beige and blue. The [jacket] two-piece suit had a three-quarter length coat [lined] and styled with "umbrella" back. A very smart hat of black [and] fur mannish block and black [accessories] completed this outfit. Navy blue and beige were combined in [a] three-piece ensemble showing a [tailored] beige waistcoat worn with a navy skirt and coat, a navy hat and green accessories. And a grey suit of severe type was in mannish finish, the skirt displaying three pleats at back and front.

Knitted suits were also in two and three-piece styles. Three-piece effects were developed in robins' egg blue and also in olive green, with lacy wool blouses, the olive green worn with a Fedora hat of dark brown felt. Two-piece outfits were in paddy green (trimmed with lacy wool edging), deep coral with "cavalier" neckline and wool tassels, and honey beige, the latter with a "crew" or boat-shaped neck.

With these were worn smart little hats of beret, halo, mannish and "off the face" types, in straw and felt, in dark and light colors, smart bags of suede and leather and the 'Avenue' shade of hose which has a light sand transparent charm. All from the store stocks. The suit blouses showed the season's liking for matching or contrasting hues, in crepes and sheers and silks. And on many of the suit lapels were the twin boutonnieres which is a fad of the moment, and lets you wear on both lapels of the garment, those bright flowers or equally bright vegetables of the mode.

Leisure Hour Gowns.

Afternoon dresses were shown in the varying sizes which distinguished the other apparel. The favored black and white combination was demonstrated beautifully in a black crepe with short sleeves banded with white braid in a floral design, the same trimming accenting the wide revers. A trio of gardenias closed the V-corsage. Another gown of black crepe had its bolero jacket edged solidly with tiny self-covered buttons, and a blouse of Paisley silk with sash ends tied at the left side, in Spanish fashion.

A new material called "sugar and spice" with silk and linen blending in its shades of navy and silver grey, was interesting. Tassels of navy suede decorated the front and pleated ruching edged the front closing from neck to hem and extended all around the skirt.

Printed silk in green and rust shades was collared and cuffed at the short elbow sleeves with bands of white silk pique and was worn with a green hat. Navy blue featured two gowns, one a lovely sheer pleated vertically down the front from neck, under the belt, to the hem, with a flat tailored collar in wide descending points, squared shoulders, to elbow sleeves, and three dainty cellophane posies adorning the bodice front. The other, of navy tricotine, had appliqued flowers extending across the upper bodices to the shoulder line.

There were three evening gowns which were similar in treatment and looking extremely sweet. Posed over white taffeta, with high necklines and short puffed sleeves, one of white, the second in forget-me-not blue, the third in cerulean pink, they were banded narrowly with ribbon in horizontal style encircling the very full and flaring skirts. The white had bands of white velvet ribbon ending in flat bows, the blue and pink were trimmed with wider bands of taffeta in self shades. They had contrasting flowers at the left side of the waistline.

Junior Things.

A patriotic flag ensemble featured the trig attire of the tiny girl when she stepped out in a knife-pleated navy skirt worn with a red and white sweater of fine wool with matching scarlet beret. She wore a "Little Miss Marker" frock of brown crepe with collar of pique and lace, on another appearance with matching coat and hat, while a party frock was of sky-blue silk crepe with pink French tiny bouquets embroidered on its deep pleated collar and streamers of pink velvet ribbon. A coat of sky blue flannel with matching hat was another charming setting for this blonde little lassie.

The dainty older girl modelled a fetching outfit of scarlet and white, showing a flannel pleated skirt of the brighter color, with scarlet cross-stitching on the pockets of the white broadcloth blouse with short sleeves and frilly trimming. A red beret was worn with this pretty ensemble.

She had a striking little Scotch cap with streamers, in dark and for the suit of the same material worn with matching flared coat. Her "Shirley Temple" daytime frock was of red and white printed cotton and her "dream" gown was of palest pink georgette with a deep knife-pleated collar and pale green and pink satin ribbons.

The small boy was a trim and jaunty little figure in his tiny suite. He showed a flannel suit of dark hued with a short-back coat of Clark Cable type, which was worn with a broadcloth blouse of warm beige, brown tie and dark sand beret.

Another outfit used light brown tweed for the suit of tailored type, a dark brown woollen sweater, and a "skullcracker" hat. And his "church-meeting" attire was of deep yellow silk broadcloth piped with brown to match his tie.

The many coiffures for the ladies who acted as mannequins were done by Alfhouse, and the evening lapel flowers in the basket were from the Turnbull Flower Shop.

WARKWORTH IRISH NUMBERS MARK PROGRAM

Young People At Warkworth Fittingly Observe St. Patrick's Day

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WARKWORTH, March 19. — The weekly meeting of St. Andrew's Y.P.S. was held on Monday evening with a fair attendance. The president, Mr. Johnston, opened the meeting, and Mrs. C. McKiejohn, as educational convenor, gave a suitable program for St. Patrick's Day. Her splendid paper on "Old Ireland," interspersed with Irish jokes, was very interesting. The community singing of old Irish songs and the contests suitable for St. Patricks Day were enjoyed by old and young. The closing hymn and benediction brought the meeting to a close.

The Y.P.A. of St. Paul's also celebrated St. Patrick's evening with a suitable program of Irish songs and readings, and Rev. Dr. Cooper gave a very interesting paper on "Ireland" and Miss Alice Allen gave a paper on "St. Patrick."

St. Andrew's Y.P.S. have accepted the invitation of the Campbellford Presbyterian Y.P.S. to be their guests on Monday, April 5. A committee was appointed to arrange for a program. This is an annual outing and is looked forward to with much pleasure.

Fashion Service

Here are two little aprons borrowed from the peasant fashions. They're very comforiable besides being new and smart. They're becoming to youthful and larger figures.

You'll note both of them have the non-slip shoulders, which are so important for home tasks.

The basque bodice apron has a flattering flared collar that extends over the shoulders and down the back to the waist. This gay apron combines a peasant cotton print with plain cotton. The deep armholes and the edge of the flared skirt are finished with bias binds of the plain cotton.

Both aprons are made with the same pattern which also includes an illustrated Sewing Chart. It shows step-by-step how to cut and stitch them.

Style No. 2826 is designed for sizes Small, Medium and Large. Medium size requires 1⅞ yards of 36-inch material with ⅛ yard of 35-inch contrasting and 2 yards of binding for the basque apron; tyrolean apron requires 2¼ yards of 35-inch material with ⅝ yard of 35-inch contrasting and 3¾ yards of binding.

He who knows not and knows not that he knows not is a fool: beat him.
He who knows not, and knows that he knows not is ignorant: teach him.
He who knows, but knows not that he knows, is asleep: wake him.
He who knows and knows that he knows, is a wise man: follow him.
—Arabian saying.

Dear Friends:

Do you think you know about a lot of things? If so, how do you use your knowledge? Do you keep it hidden do that neither you nor anyone else gets any benefit from it, or do you use it for your own good and to help others. Knowledge must be used before it is any good to anyone.

Or have you acquired a little knowledge and treat everyone you meet as if they were dunnicells, treading on everyone's toes and making yourself a blasted nuisance wherever you go? Wake up to yourself.

Maybe you think you will never need any more than you have now, but that is foolish, for knowledge is not a hard load to carry, and you are prepared for whatever life may send you in a way, and the curious thing is, that the more you learn, the more you realize that there is much you will never be able to know.

But of all the aggravating people one can meet up with, I think it is the ones who know little, and do not know it. "Fools step in where angels fear to tread," and that is what the know nothing does all the time, and oh what a pain in the neck they can be. So if you have anyone like that in your family or friends, try to beat some sense into them for everybody's sake.

Then there are some who crave knowledge but have never had the opportunity to learn, so don't be stiff-necked and shut your lips tight and not tell them things. If everyone who knew had kept silent in speech or writing, you would not know so much yourself.

And there are some who are gifted but do not know it, some who could be of so much help if only they knew their own capabilities, and those are the ones whom we must wake up to the heritage they have, who must be made to realize that they have something that others don't have, and be shown how to use it.

We are all inclined more or less to doubt our own abilities, to do less than we are able to do, to only half live when we could live so grand and gloriously once, we know what we can do. Sometimes God has to take a hand in this waking up of our dormant energies before we dominate our circumstances.

And there are those who know, and know that they know, and they are the salt of the earth, the leaders for betterment, the entertainers, the beauty makers for our pleasure, the ones who make the wheels of life go round, and it is a pleasure and a profit to follow them.

What about your leadership only lies in a kitchen or an office or a factory or workshop? You cannot expect to run the whole world, but if you lead the world will be better for you being in it, and you will be an inspiration to all whom you meet.

Seeing what you can, will make them want to do their best also. It takes a lot of little streams to make a river, and they must each run in their own course else the earth would be in a mess all the time because these same little streams will not stay within bounds, so if you think you are only a little stream feeding the river of life, do your best within your own boundaries.

But get to know your own possibilities, and never be content with less than your utmost. The true artist is never really satisfied with his or her work, but keeps striving to do better, for they know that better can be done. Do not disparage yourself nor your work. Your little

Norwood Planning Big Day To Loyally Mark Coronation

Parade, Field And Track Events And Other Features Are Billed

ASSOCIATION FORMED

NORWOOD, March 19.—Plans are under way for a gala celebration which will be held in Norwood, May 12th, in honor of the Coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth. The day has been proclaimed a Dominion-wide holiday and all over the British Empire, loyal subjects of the King and Queen will commemorate the occasion.

A well attended meeting of interested citizens was held recently and an association was formed. Officers appointed and committees were selected to take charge of different phases of the day's activities.

Suitable decorations will be purchased for the occasion and it is hoped that every householder will co-operate in the demonstration of patriotism by displaying flags and emblems.

The plans as they now stand include a parade, commencing early in the day, a program of field and track events including horse races, motorcycle races, stunts and games. It is expected that the local High School and rural schools of the district will participate in the celebration also. The evening will also be provided for with some sort of entertainment, the exact nature of which it has not yet been ascertained.

A deputation was also present from the Havelock Albion Club, namely, Messrs. Hagerman, Ferguson and Chiles.

The proceeds of the day, it has been unanimously decided will be divided equally amongst the Women's Institute, the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire and the Athletic Association.

OCCUPANT TRAPPED

fought the blaze with utter disregard for their own safety. While smoke billowed out from windows on the main floor and darkened the street firefighters who had made their way into the cellar beat a hasty retreat as part of the floor caved in with a loud crash. Four men stood on a ladder and on the cornice at a second story window attempting to remove an expensive piece of machinery from the Aber-Knit factory before it fell prey to the flames. Members of the staff of Craighead's Book Store were forced into the street by the smoke which penetrated the fire-proof wall which separates the two buildings.

An Emergency Call

An emergency call was sent in to the Water and Light Commission who soon had a man on the scene to cut the wires leading into the fire-swept structure. The smoke had begun to lessen in quantity and the flames had disappeared when the sirens of the Peterborough Department were heard. After making a survey of the building the Fire Chief gave his men instructions to return.

It was nearly 2 a.m. before firemen finally left the scene after placing men on guard for the balance of the morning. Mr. J. D. Mills, manager of the bank stated that the bank would immediately seek temporary quarters as it is expected that it will take six months to recondition the building. The opinion is expressed that the Bank may temporarily occupy the building on the opposite corner known as the Wallace Block which Campbellford citizens will remember as the scene of the town's last serious fire seven years ago. This fire smouldered in the partitions of the building for two days before it was finally brought under control and extinguished.

The fact that the caretaker of the bank left the building at 9.30 after fixing his fires reported that there was no sign of fire when he was there, left the only possible cause for the fire with the rats which are said to infest the basement and may have got some loose matches or there is also the possibility that defective wiring may have been the cause.

Read this! Mrs. William Roy (16 Pelham Road, St. Catharines, Ont., said): "I was all rundown and seemed to be 'all nerves.' I did not feel at all well. I decided to use Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it strengthened me and set me on that run-down, tired condition." Buy now!

Now She Sleeps Like a Top
Tonic Way Re-makes Tired, Depressed Sufferers.

Why envy people who can relax, take a bath and sink quickly into deep, restful slumber every night? You can do it, too, instead of tossing and turning, vainly wooing sleep while each tick of the clock seems like a minute, and minutes drag as slowly as hours. PHOSPHERINE, the great British tonic, will help you.

"When I feel washed out," writes Mr. L. Norriman, Dunston-on-Tyne (England), "all I have to do to feel fine again is to take two tablets of PHOSPHERINE. A friend of mine, who seldom sleeps well, finds that by taking one tablet she sleeps like a top."

PHOSPHERINE'S great success is due to the fact that it nourishes starved nerves. And when your nerves are in sound normal condition, you drop off to sleep as nature intended you to. What's more, you wake with a feeling of renewed vigor each morning. Start taking PHOSPHERINE to-day. Get it from your druggist, 50c, $1.00 (it contains six times as much), $5.00 (it contains over six times as much—get this large, economical size). 60 done a great service for western farmers.

Those who criticised the government were doing so because the price had risen, he said. It was easy to be wise after the event but the price had gone up largely because of the wheat selling policy of the present government.

Wheat pools Mr. Tucker declared had missed a "golden opportunity" of re-establishing themselves in handling the 1936 crop. They could have formed voluntary pools, made a down payment of 80 cents a bushel and operated under a guarantee that if the price fell to 80 cents at Fort William the wheat board would assure a fixed minimum of 87½ cents.

He would like to see the western farmers handling their own marketing machinery and hoped a guarantee price would be provided for this year's crop so that the pools would have a second chance to organize.

The wheat amendment was disposed of at a late hour in the afternoon and the evening session devoted to discussion of the Canada-United Kingdom trade agreement. Joseph Harris (Cons. Toronto-Danforth) opposed items which permit free entry of vegetable oils from empire sources on the ground they compete with animal fat products in Canada, production of which exceeds normal food requirements.

Little progress was made on the tariff items in the agreement in the three-hour debate and Finance Minister Dunning observed that at the present rate of progress it would take six weeks to pass the agreement.

Today the House will consider the government's foreign enlistments measure and possibly some other bills before returning to consideration of the Canada-United Kingdom trade agreement.

the Filgate Tire dump, and the Fire Department carried out more than 30 bodies.

A military investigation was instituted and another promised by the state railroad commission, administrator of gas and oil laws.

Checkup Difficult.

The scattered destinations for the recovered dead made checking difficult. Late last night checks placed the number at 320. Rechecks later indicated the figure was slightly higher.

Many sobbing parents waited to claim their dead in the morgues of 5,000 ringing the smoking pile where only a bare split wall was left standing of the three-winged main building, "richest school in the world."

Efforts were concentrated at the site of the auditorium, where most of the 700 high school students were gathered when the walls shook, the tile roof rose, then fell back with crushing force upon the collapsing structure. Hundreds of grade students already had been dismissed from a nearby building.

Roosevelt Speeds Aid

At Warm Springs, Ga., President Roosevelt, appalled by the news, urged the Red Cross "and all of the government agencies" to speed aid.

Texas National Guardsmen, under martial law orders from Gov. James V. Allred, patrolled the horror-swept scene.

"This is the worst I have ever known," said Joe Davidson, 54-year-old Great War aviator who twice experienced having a plane shot out from under him. Three of his four children perished.

Kids were blown out through the top onto the roof," said 15-year-old Martha Harris who witnessed the explosion from the Home Economy Building 60 yards away.

"Some of them hung up there and others fell off to the ground . . . I saw a girl fall out of the top down through a big window which opened to the outside. The glass cut her leg off just like a knife would."

The force of the blast, which hurled bricks a quarter of a mile and was heard for nearly three miles away, was terrific.

As flames from gas pipes, leaping 30 feet into the air, lighted the scene, screaming cranes lifted huge chunks of concrete and acetylene torches bit into twisted steel to release the crushed victims.

Find Child's Hand.

One recognizing mother fractically snatched at a hand with two rings on it, found yards from the building. She cried and hurried away.

Mrs. W. R. Phillips' five-year-old son had run ahead to meet his brother and sister at school. He was killed with them.

R. K. Carll, oil employee, was one of the first to reach the scene after the explosion. He pulled out the bodies of his daughter, Mary Ann, 14, and son, Robert, 12.

"It was nearly seven minutes before time for dismissal," said L. J. Barber, 16, in the study hall.

"Suddenly the floor rose up. There was a terrible blast. It sounded like dynamite. I was not badly hurt. I was hit on the back of the head by something. I jumped out the second floor window."

Wildest disorder followed. As the reports spread, roads became clogged with frantic parents racing to the school in automobiles.

called for him to stand after Sir Donald finished his application on behalf of the proctor.

"I'd like to say just this, my lord," he said, rising slowly from the seat where he had heard himself referred to throughout the hearing as "Mr. Stephenson."

"The facts as put before your lordship by the learned attorney general are substantially correct and that applies to any steps taken by me and anything that may have been said by me since."

No Special Treatment

Before he issued the order winding out Stephenson's intervention, the president said he had exercised his own power because "of the importance there should be no legitimate grounds for suspicion in the public mind that this case is being treated differently from any other case."

Pointing out further objections could be filed up to the last moment before the divorce was made absolute, the president directed any further proceedings be held in open court.

Stephenson, the Attorney General informed the court emphatically, had withdrawn his intervention without "pressure of any kind or from any source."

Norman Birkett, K.C., who appeared for Mrs. Simpson at Ipswich, and Walter Frampton were present in her interests.

Sir Donald announced to the court Stephenson had withdrawn his intervention on the collusion charge through regard "to the events which happened in December, 1936 and which are now matters of history."

But notwithstanding the withdrawal of the charge, the Attorney General said the Proctor had thoroughly sifted the evidence for "there were circumstances connected with this case which made it, in my opinion, a proper case for investigation."

Three Questions

The King's Proctor, the Attorney General continued, "had three matters in mind:

"1. Whether the case was an arranged or collusive one.

2. Whether petitioner (Mrs. Simpson) was an accessory to or connived at adultery.

"3. Whether there had been any conduct on the part of the petitioner which made her not entitled to relief."

Stephenson, it was disclosed, had failed to comply with the law by backing up his intervention last December with affidavits.

"Mr. Stephenson," the attorney-general said, "told the king's proctor he was not possessed of any evidence to support his allegations and they were based on rumors which he had heard from friends and news which he had seen in the press."

The attorney general said the proctor, Sir Thomas Barnes, had received a vast number of letters "based for the most part upon merest gossip and rumor."

Many of them, he said, emphasized the fact, however, "that a case which might ordinarily have been expected to come up in London in fact came up in Ipswich."

The same question was raised by Sir Boyd, who questioned, Birkett on the basis for placing the original application in the ancient Suffolk town.

"It was a matter that troubled the learned judge who tried the case," Sir Boyd said. "I want to know something about it too."

Birkett paused for a moment, then declared the responsibility rested with him as Mrs. Simpson "in all matters of procedure acted on advice."

Under Great Nerve Strain

He added she was "then suffering and was now suffering great nerve strain," and in the circumstances he thought best to deal with the case as quickly as possible.

He referred, he said, to the crowded condition of the London court lists and emphasized Mrs. Simpson had intended to reside in Felixstowe—in the Ipswich jurisdiction—for a considerable time.

"Certain conditions" arose, however, he declared, which made it impossible for her to maintain that residence.

Referring to "rumors and gossip," he added "the petitioner can not expect to be free from these things."

The application, Sir Donald said, was made because he understood that as long as the intervention remained on file the divorce could not be made absolute.

He wanted it cleared up, he told the court, because of a letter which the King's proctor had received from the senior registrar pointing out Stephenson had failed to comply with the law by not filing affidavits "setting forth the facts upon which he relies within four days after entering an appearance."

CIVIC GATHERING IN THE ARMOURIES CORONATION DAY

Parade Of Decorative Floats And Singing By Massed Choirs Also Suggested

WITHDRAW PAGEANT

Plans in connection with Peterborough's observance of the Coronation were advanced another step on Thursday night at a meeting of the general committee under chairmanship of Alderman James Dutton.

A tentative program as suggested by the Rev. P. J. Kelly, which makes provision for a big civic gathering in the Armouries on the morning of Coronation Day, and which also includes singing by school children and massed choirs; a program of entertainment and a monster parade of decorated floats and bands, was endorsed by the meeting.

Details in connection with a big celebration worthy of the historic occasion were left in the hands of the executive, and sub-committees, the members of which were named as follows:

Executive—Alderman James Dutton, chairman; the Rev. P. J. Kelly, Al. Sharpe, R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson, Mrs. C. M. Scott, D. A. Loomis, Inspector A. Mowat, John T. Hornsby and Fred J. Overend.

Finance Committee — R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, Alderman James Juby, and Fred J. Overend.

Music Committee — Miss M. R. Bannie, Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, Miss T. J. Hurley, Martin B. Chenhall, A.R.C.O., Lieut. W. Feryer, director of music Prince of Wales' Peterborough Regiment Band; Bandmaster R. G. Routley of the Salvation Army Band, and Harry Prevey, conductor of Peterborough Orchestral Society.

Entertainment Committee—D. A. Loomis, Miss C. F. Littlefield, the Rev. P. J. Kelly and John T. Hornsby.

In addition to the representatives named to the general committee at the organization meeting held the previous night, the following were added: Red Patch Club—W. Morrow; Girl Guides—Mrs. R. Whalon; Prince of Wales' Peterborough Regiment—Major R. T. E. Hicks-Lyne, M. C.; Knights of Columbus—E. O. Hiland; Masonic Order—V. R. Henry.

The general committee gave unanimous endorsation to the religious side of the Coronation observances, and left arrangements in this connection to be carried out by the various churches of the city.

As representative of the Lion's Club, J. A. Deyell announced that the club had decided it advisable to withdraw the proposed historical pageant in connection with which co-operation of the general committee and of other service clubs in the city had been sought.

In expressing the opinion that the club had done the wise thing in abandoning the proposed pageant on account of the probability of running into adverse weather conditions at such a time of the year, and because of other considerations, the general chairman expressed appreciation to the members of the club and to Mr. Turner, representative of the Rogers Production Company, London, Ont., for their courtesy and consideration in dealing with the civic committee.

With the purpose of discouraging itinerant traders who might swarm into the city peddling Coronation souvenirs in opposition to local merchants, the committee went on record as recommending householders to deal only with bona fide local merchants. The resolution is to be passed forward to the city council.

LAKEFIELD Y.P.S. FAIRVIEW GUESTS

Fifty Young People Entertained At Enjoyable St. Patrick's Party

(Examiner Correspondence.)

FAIRVIEW, March 19. — The Young People of Fairview entertained the Young People of Lakefield United Church at a jolly St. Patrick's party at the church on Tuesday evening. There were about fifty young people from Lakefield.

Lakefield Y.P. had charge of the devotional program, which consisted of a hymn and responsive reading. Mrs. (Rev.) Kelly gave an interesting paper on Evangeline.

Solos were given by Mrs. Young, Mrs. Millage and Rev. Mr. Kelly, and a comic duet by Mrs. Young and Rev. Kelly. At the close of this part of the program, the Fairview president, Miss Ferne Armstrong, turned the remaining part over to the recreational convenor, Miss Anne Franks, who had arranged a splendid program of contests and stunts which were very much enjoyed by all.

A delightful lunch was served and a pleasant half-hour spent, which brought a delightful evening to a close.

Personals.

Mrs. Walter Board spent a few days last week the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Gilbert Bullock, of North Smith.

Mr. Roy Franklin and his bride of Lakefield have moved to their new home on the Jones farm, Fourth Line of Smith.

$1,000,000 BREADLINE

German City to Receive Large Legacy to Aid the Poor

FRANKFORT, Germany, March 19—(AP)—This city's Lord Mayor was "enlightened" to-day to hear an estimated $1,000,000 was coming to Frankfort under the will of a United States convict.

The convict, Alphonse J. Steinand, put his whole estate to the city he visited in the 1890's when he died in the Dannemora, N.Y., State Prison for the criminal insane in 1936. He said the funds should be used to establish numerous breadlines.

Yesterday the Appellate division in Albany, N.Y., held the will valid.

30-MINUTE TRIP.

Fire Chief George Gimblett revealed today the heavy pumper of the Peterborough Fire Department made the 28-mile run to Campbellford in 30 minutes after it left here at 11:40 o'clock Thursday evening. As it turned out, the fire was under control by the time the pumper reached Campbellford, but Mayor Frank Long used very good judgment in calling for Peterborough aid, he said. Two or three blocks in the business section would have gone if the fire had got away, he declared. "I would like to say Fire Chief Charles Davidson and his volunteers did a remarkable job in putting it under control. It was a dirty fire."

The Rambling REPORTERS

WERE THEY CHEATED?

As the story goes to-day, a number of Lakefield residents are wondering whether or not Fate cheated them out of skins of the great Grand National Sweepstake pay-off. If so, Fate took the form of a Puritanically-minded housewife.

They bought their chances on the sweepstake some weeks ago from one of the servants about the town. Shortly, the seller of the tickets made the rounds the other day refunding the money the purchasers had paid for them. His wife had thrown the booklet of stubs into the fire, its contents C.P.R.

MISSION WORK OF INDIA DESCRIBED

Miss Eleanor Simmons Addresses Mission Circle Of Murray Street Church

Along the east coast of India is the Canadian Baptist Mission. There left the Ramachandrapuram field of that Mission not long ago, after a term of almost seven years, a young missionary enroute to her native land. On Wednesday evening in Murray Street Baptist Sunday school hall this young missionary, Miss Eleanor Simmons, whose father is a Baptist minister and who was pastor of the First Baptist Church, Cobourg, a few years ago, told a large audience of eager listeners how the Christian gospel was winning its way into the hearts and minds of the people of India and how, in a most wonderful way, the greatest barrier to Christianity the caste system, was being broken down. She paid great tribute to the pioneers who had labored so indefatigably in establishing the Christian cause and who had seen so little accomplished by way of visible results, making special reference to the life and labor in India of Rev. John E. Davis, father of Mrs. H. H. Graham, of this city, who worked in that area and whose name is indeed a revered one to the christians there. Miss Simmons' presentation of the progress of the christian religion in India, especially in the place where she was privileged to work, was vivid, graphic informing and challenging. Her address was marked by deep sincerity and singleness of purpose. Not a little of the rapt attention of the audience was due to the speaker's keen sense of humor. While in India Miss Simmons was the manager of the Rajah — Cockshutt Girls' School and she also supervised the work among women in 113 villages. Thirty native Indians assisted her in this work.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Mary Nicholls' Mission Circle of Murray Street Church of which Mrs. Sidney Malson is the president. Rev. J. H. Sutcliffe, the pastor of the church presided. The ladies' quartet of Park Street Baptist Church sang "How Can I Help But Love Him" in a manner that delighted the hearers. Prayer was offered by Mrs. J. U. McIntosh, of Norwood. A very fine piano duet, "Barcarolle", was rendered by Mrs. P. W. Johnson and Miss Pearl Smith. The guest speaker was introduced to the audience by Mrs. H. H. Graham. At the close of the meeting the young ladies of the Mission Circle under the supervision of Mrs. Sven Valentin served refreshments.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Saturday, March 20

A day on which to "expect the unexpected" is read from the influential positions of the planets of progress, change and innovation. While this may necessitate changes of a minor order, yet they promote eventual benefit and satisfaction. The judgment will be found sound in most matters.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of happy change, with much progress and gratification in the offing, although there may be perplexities and unsettlements to be adjusted at first.

A child born on this day, while cheerful, good natured and fond of change and novel or romantic adventures, may be studious and serious-minded, probably with inventive and revolutionary tendencies.

MUSKRAT SEASON CLOSELY WATCHED BY ALL TRAPPERS

Season Scheduled To Open March 25—Hoping For Cold Weather

STAY IN MARSHES

Trappers in the district are watching the weather a little anxiously hoping it won't turn mild and stave the run of the muskrats before March 25, the date the season opens in this part of the province.

L. J. Lyons, local game inspector, said there was no likelihood and no need of any change in the date fixed by the Department for the opening of the trapping season.

While the nights remain cold, rats stay in their marsh houses, but with the first noctural warmth they begin their wanderings to the open water of creeks and bays. Mr. Lyons said the probabilities indicate that the season would officially open in time for this movement.

From other sources it was learned that the fur market is strong and steady, and that trappers would get a favorable price this season.

MEMBERS SLEEP AS HOUSE DRAGS THROUGH SESSION

Hepburn Forced Into Another Day As Budget Division Fails To Arrive

ROSIERS ATTACKS DREW

TORONTO, March 19 (C.P.). — A sitting of the Ontario Legislature so wearisome it caused Premier Hepburn to abandon his decision to sit through to a division on the Budget ended shortly after one o'clock this morning when the Premier announced George Henry, Conservative House Leader, had agreed to a night session to-night to wind up the debate.

Eight hours of talk, with few exchanges to liven it, with members sleeping in their seats, with fewer than 23 members in the House at times, was Thursday's sitting.

Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon and Mr. Henry will wind up the debate to-day. The private members have finished.

Mr. Nixon has said he will announce the Government's decisions in respect to recommendations in the Madden report on the Guelph Reformatory riot when he spoke. The report was tabled last night.

"I think this debate has gone on long enough," said Fraser Hunter (Lib. Toronto-St. Patrick's) shortly before one o'clock.

"I know it has," said Dr. Arthur Des Rosiers (Lib. Russell) as he disputed the floor with Col. Hunter and caught the Speaker's eye. "Everybody's gone to sleep, but I'm going to wake them up."

Doesn't Like Drew's Stand.

"I have something under my skin and I can't go home without getting it off my chest," said Dr. Des Rosiers. He read a clipping from a newspaper quoting Col. George Drew Ontario Conservative organizer, as saying the French in Canada were a defeated race.

"I don't like that," said Dr. Des Rosiers. "Anybody in Ontario knows the first pioneers were French-Canadians. If this fellow Drew ever comes to Russel County, he'll get the biggest barrel of eels he ever saw."

The Legislature adopted a motion by Premier Hepburn to authorize the Committee on Privileges and Elections to investigate any charges that might be laid against Dr. A. D. Roberts, Sault Ste. Marie member, expelled from the Liberal party by the Premier, touching his position as a member.

Dr. Roberts said he had had intimation from the Sault of what the Premier was aiming at, and he waived his right to two days' notice of the motion. The committee originally instructed to investigate charges of "blackmail" and "conduct unbecoming a member" against Dr. Roberts by the Premier will meet today for organization.

MEDICAL SERVICES CHARTER ASSURED

Members To Pay $2 Monthly For Care Possibly Needed Later

SIMCOE, Ont., March 19 (C.P.). —Charter of the Ontario Medical Services, incorporated, for which $1,500 was appropriated on Wednesday in Toronto by the Ontario Medical Association, is expected to be issued within two weeks after consideration by the Departments of Insurance and Health. The organization will give medical care of a pre-payment plan.

"Medical Services, Incorporated, will not interfere with any other agency," said Dr. Alan B. Jackson, one of the petitioners of a charter for the organization, which will work in Toronto and Norfolk County. "We are not in competition with anyone but we believe the public of Ontario should have some way of pre-paying for medical treatment.

The organization's plan is that members shall pay $2 each month for medical care he may later need. Any member may select his own physician whether or not the physician is a medical member of the association. Hospital bills will be paid up to $3.50 a day. In Norfolk County the organization's work would largely be with individual cases and in Toronto with industrial groups.

To Address Meeting Of Fish And Game Association And Boy Scouts

COACHED OLYMPICS

An outstanding figure in the field of Canadian athletics, Captain J. R. Cornelius, is to address a joint meeting of Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association and Boy Scouts in the Collegiate auditorium this (Friday) evening.

The members of Peterborough Boy Scouts' Association are to receive honorary memberships in the Fish and Game Association, and will doubtless find inspiration in the address to be delivered by "Cap" Cornelius on the subject, "A Regular Fellow."

Famous coach of Hamilton Central Collegiate, "Cap's" track and field team has aversaged in the neighborhood of fifty members, yet no incentive is thrown out for them to join.

His team has competed annually at Pennsylvania Relay Carnival, where contestants from all parts of the United States, the Phillipine Islands and Hawaii are represented.

With a small team of from seven to ten men, "Cap" on several occasions equalled the track record of two firsts and a second, but it was not until a few years ago that his life's ambition of three firsts was realized.

Competing against the finest schoolboy athletes on the continent, his small contingent opposed monster teams from outstanding schools and won the highest number of points ever awarded a single team in the long history of America's biggest relay meet.

Coached Olympic Teams.

"Cap" Cornelius was coach of the Canadian Olympic team in both 1928 and 1932 when Percy Williams walked off with double honors in the sprint events. The British Empire games are the result of long years of planning by "Cap" who worked with members of the British Olympic executive and brought the first of the games to his home city at Hamilton in 1930.

In addition, "Cap" has coached the rifle team at the Collegiate, and has taken teams to Bisley for the British Empire meet, where they were invariably victors over the English university teams, and won high awards in open competition.

Probably his best-known shot was Bud Matchett. In Dominion competition at Toronto and Ottawa, and on indoor ranges, the fame of the school has no equal.

In still another field has Captain Cornelius been outstanding, as instructor of a large school orchestra and choir which has won Dominion-wide acclaim on many occasions.

Johnny Fitzpatrick, Harold Adams, Harold Carson, Eddie Dyer, Earl Lewis and Mickey MacBeth are some of the outstanding men he has trained. Perhaps his greatest athlete was young Shaver, brilliant half-miler who set a Dominion mark for that distance, and was a member of some of "Cap's" greatest teams.

In the hearts of hundreds of young men today, the name "Cap Cornelius" holds an honored place. Of all the athletes he has trained, every one has a deep respect for him that never seems to die with the passing of the years.

(By Andy Rutter).

At the executive meeting held on Thursday night it was decided that the club jumping championship should be held this Sunday afternoon at Nassau ski jump. It will be necessary to have a group of workers Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning to shovel a little snow and get things in shape. Transportation has been arranged, and will leave from the Duffin Garage at 1.30 sharp Saturday afternoon and 10 to 10.30 Sunday morning. Persons driving to the jump are asked to pass the Empress Hotel Sunday afternoon to pick up any stragglers. As an added attraction, a Norwegian strong man will give a swimming exhibition, offering $25 to anyone who will stay with him in the water. R-r-r-r-r—not for me, although the weather points more toward the bathing season than ski-ing at the present time. With all arrangements made, the only Ethiopian in the winter fuel supply is the lack of snow, but with a few shovels and a dozen willing workers, this should soon be rectified. The club treasurer has asked me to remind all those who have not paid their fees to bring them up to date as soon as possible so as to remain in good standing. It is possible that the executive may decide that part of this year's fee will be applied to next year's dues.

BROOKLYN STILL LOOKS 2ND RATE DIVISION OUTFIT

Grimes' Two Shrewd Deals Fail To Bolster Team Except In Pitchers

LACK PUNCH, FIELDING

By Paul Mickelson
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 19.—(AP).—It looks like Brooklyn will be stuck in the mud of the second division for the 16th time in 17 years.

Although Burleigh Grimes, successor to the charitable Casey Stengel as helmsman of the Flatbush crew has improved the club on paper with two shrewd deals, the team rates only an outside chance to land in the upper bracket when the line forms at the pay-off window late in September.

Led by Van Lingle Mungo, the fire-ball ace, the Dodgers should have one of the strongest pitching staffs in the majors. But the rest of the line-up is disjointed and stocked with question marks. Punch and fielding shape as the two greatest shortcomings.

For pitching, however, the Flatbush boys shouldn't have any worries, except for errors behind the fine hurling. Van Mungo is full of that college try this year and predicts he'll win 25 games. With him as probable starting regulars on the mound will be Fred Frankhouse, a 30-year-old veteran capable of getting very hot or cold; Luke Hamlin, former Detroit Tiger; Ralph Birkofer, obtained from Pittsburgh to give the team a good southpaw, and Al Butcher, husky 25-year-old right hander whom Mungo predicts will win 20 victories in '37.

Infield Some Better.

The infield should be an improvement over last year with Buddy Hassett back on first; Cookie Lavagetto, famed Pittsburgh bench warmer, at second and Joey Josephs at his old third base stand.

The shortstop job is open to either Woody English, another bench warmer from the Cubs, or Tony Lazzeri of Louisville with Englich the probable winner.

"Patty" Phelps plans to do most of the catching though Randy Moore has been switched from the outfield for a try behind the plate.

Burleigh himself is flidsety about the outfield, usually the funniest trio of the old Flatbush follies. He's got outfielders galore on the lot, but it's going to be tough picking out a trio that field and hit. Right now the prevalent guess of the starting outer garden is Ed Wilson, who showed up well late last season in right; Johnny Cooney in center field because of his fine fielding, and Johnny Winsett in left.

MELBOURNE—(CP). —Mr. and Mrs. E. Manifold seek to administer their 13-year-old son's intestate estate. The boy left personal property valued at $82,365 including a $50,000 life insurance policy. The remainder was given him by the father.

DOWN AT the Y.W.C.A. gym tonight, three Ladies' Basketball League games are listed. "Y" Quakers and Westclox Juniors tangle at 7.45, Marconi Radio meets U.C.E. Seniors at 8.15, and it's C.G.E. Juniors 'gainst St. John's at 9.00. Should be lively tussles and worth seeing. The junior P.C.I. boys meet Meaford this eve in the Ontario school cage playdowns in Toronto. Men's City League hoop tilts tomorrow e'en in the Y.M.C.A. are: Nell's vs. C.G.E. at 8.15, and P.C.I. vs. Dominion Life at 9.15, followed by a dance. These games should decide the playoff squads. "Y" volleyball tomorrow afternoon: Spartans vs. Terriers at 2.00, Bulldogs vs. Rockets at 2.45, Indians vs. Sharks at 3.30, Hawks vs. Wildcats at 4.15, Gunners vs. Cardinals at 5.00

THE CITY 5-Pin League did things up brown the other eve with a nifty banquet and presentation of the prizes. They combined business with pleasure and held their annual meeting, too. And they decided to run a post-season series, starting next week. Entries must be in by Monday evening. Scotty McGrath donated a fine silver trophy for the high average bowler, and it was taken this year by Bud Weese who knocked the pins over at a 238 clip for 66 games. Nels Routley had high single, Jack Playford high three and the C.G.E. squad —which won the league—had high single game for teams. Swarts, Grafton's and Brinton No. 2 also copped some prizes. A good season.

IN ANSWER to a flock of queries re the last Senior City Puck Loop game, we know of no reason why a team can't take out the goalie and put six players on the attack. It has been done in the N.H.L. this winter and, unless the O.H.A. has some rule to the opposite—which we do not know of—then it is okay. Just to be positive, of course, it would be better to wire the O.H.A. secretary, if the matter is that important. Even Referees Lou LeBarr and Herb Payne took opposite views on the matter, the latter refusing to permit the goalie to be taken out. It's worth checking on.

PLENTY OF seats available at the Oshawa Arena and lots of room on the special C.N.R. train tonight for that Barrie-Colts' playoff tussle. The train leaves here at 6.30 and gets back about 1.00. Return fare for adults is $1.25 and 75c for children. Seats at the rink are 75c and 50c. A big crowd from here will be making the trip. Period scores will be phoned back tonight to the Brock St. rink (call 3005) and this office (call 1800). Barrie will run a special train, too.

* * * * *

BOTH SQUADS will be starting all even. While Barrie may like the bigger ice, our squad is speedier and can turn it on better on guaranteed fast ice. They won't be jittery in Oshawa as the lads were in the hostile Barrie building—and they'll have all kinds of vocal support. If the Colts play anywhere up to form at all, they should win by three or four goals this p.m., and we'll be very disappointed if they don't. We'd bet all the spare cash we can scrape together on Coach Buckland's boys to blast Barrie out of the running tonight—and there'll be plenty of local money in sight. Should be a swell scrap before a big crowd in holiday mood and it looks to us like ye Colts will be bringing home the bacon before the milkman makes his rounds!

* * * * *

BILL PRINDIBLE informs us that arrangements have been made in Oshawa to have street-cars meet the excursion train from here to transport Peterborough fans to the rink and then back later to the train. Gordon (Beef) McKay of Hamilton, former Hamilton player and later a referee in the Toronto Mercantile League, will handle this game. Dunno what he's like. The local club was willing to have Mike Rodden or Pearcy Allen referee but Barrie didn't want either for some reason or other. Johnny Mitchell was then named but couldn't make it. Northern Vocationals move to Niagara this p.m. in the first of the round-robin junior "B" playoff series.

* * * * *

QUINTE SCRIBE says Oshawa was dissatisfied with their hockey layout the past winter and would like a senior "B" group around Central Ontario next winter. Taking in probably Oshawa, Peterborough, Fliers and Kingston. He suggests also Gananoque and Brockville, but doesn't mention a squad from Greater Belleville. By the way, the Redmen from the latter town and suburbs eliminated some place called Sutton last night and will meet either Clinton or Thorold in intermediate "B" finals next week. Can any bright pupil tell us offhand where any one of these three villages is located?

* * * * *

C.G.E. SHOP Hockey League winds it up tomorrow afternoon @ 2.30 o'clock in the Brock St. rink. Wire Dept. clash with Fractionals in the second of the two-game series, and the Wiremen have a one-goal lead from the first fracas. The ice may be heavy and the checking even more so in this windup number. A slim lead like that shouldn't mean much and we expect quite a battle between the well-matched squads. No admission is charged and the game ought to draw a flock of followers of both outfits.

ROYAL MAIL IS NATIONAL WINNER

1 and 100 to 6 respectively.

The course took such a terrific toll only 12 horses were on their feet after completing half the long trip. Royal Mail was clocked in 9:58.8, far behind the record of 9:20.4 made by Miss Dorothy Paget's Golden Miller three years ago.

Winter-Book Favorite

Royal Mail was winter-book favorite for the famous jumping classic and held that position in the wagering until three weeks ago when he made several bad performances in trial races. The gelded son of My Prince is a roubst, beautifully proportioned horse of perfect jumping type. It was a great triumph for his noted trainer, Ivor Anthony.

Golden Miller, well up the first time over Becher's Brook, refused at Anchor Bridge. It was the third year in a row that Miss Paget's gelding had started well backed by the bettors and failed to complete the heart-testing course.

The rain had stopped temporarily when the 33 jumpers, well behaved and beautifully groomed, paraded to the starting post. They were off at 3.17 p.m. (10.17 a.m. EST) and Tapnois lead Ready Cash, Ego and Dicoric over the first fence.

First To Fall

The first to fall was the 11-year-old belly chestnut, Don Bradman, who later was remounted and went on to finish seventh and last.

Read Cash led over treacherous Beeher's Brook, with Sunspot II, Golden Miller, Delaneige, Pucka Belle, Drax and Royal Mail close on his heels in that order.

Before Anchor Bridge was reached What You Have and Ready Cash had fallen. At Anchor Bridge itself Golden Miller went out and his thousands of backers had been let down again.

Only Seven Left.

As the leaders reached Valentine's Brook the second time, only seven of the 33 starters were on their feet.

Royal Mail still was in front and therewas not threatened. It was the first time Thomas, eight-year-old had started in International although he had previously carried his owner's black and white silks to victory in minor races over the Aintree country.

A quarter mile from home Golden, a little famed nine-year-old mare by Loch Lamond out of Trim and Tidy, looked as if she would pull a surprise. She challenged Royal Mail at that point but Evan Williams had plenty of horse under him. After taking the final obstacle, Royal Mail pulled away and won much as he pleased.

The King and Queen watched the race from Lord Derby's box near the winning post. They watched the running enthusiastically and saw Royal Mail led in after the race. The Queen had talked with Thomas in the paddock before post time.

Royal Mail had last favor in the betting market after running two poor races within a week. Everywhere the comment was heard: "I won because I couldn't get out of my bet."

These Maroons Will Head The Red Team's Playoff Drive

Rated by hockey experts as the "dark horse" of the N. H.L. playoffs Tommy Gorman's powerful Montreal Maroons machine rides into the post-season schedule with plenty of backing for their attempt to dethrone Detroit Red Wings as holders of Lord Stanley's coveted cup. Successful in a stiff pull to nose out Toronto Maple Leafs for second place in the Canadian section, Maroons are considered rated dangerous when the checks are down by reason of their power and experience. Big Lionel Conacher (RIGHT) will be on the defence and the Big Train is still a second goal-keeper behind the blue line. Not that Bill Beveridge (CENTRE) is needing any twine-tending help. The pudgy ex-Ottawan is playing the finest hockey of his career right now when Maroons need it most. Up front Lawrence "Baldy" Northcott (LEFT) will lead the sniping troops. The flashy forward can be depended upon to head the drive for Maroon tallies.

FATHER AND SONS ALLOWED $5,000

Damage Suit Followed Accident When Auto Hits Street Car And Then Bicycle

TORONTO, March 19.—By terms of a settlement between counsel and confirmed in judgment by Mr. Justice McEvoy in Supreme Court, Robert Van Hunt, 10, and his father, Charles H. Hunt, are to receive $5,000 and costs from the Rev. Francis Whalen and the Rev. W. J. Kinlin as damages for injuries received by young Hunt in a motor crash on the King Edward Viaduct April 9 last.

The motor car, driven by Father Whalen, crashed into a street car and then ran backwards, hitting the motorcycle ridden by Hunt, who received a broken arm and ankle.

Settlement was reached after a two-hour discussion between Gordon Shaver, K.C. and W. E. Rosen, counsel for the two plaintiffs, and J. W. Pickup, K.C., counsel for the defendants.

Hunt, Jr., asked for $25,000 and his father $5,000.

Mr. Shaver referred to evidence for the plaintiff that Father Whalen had been drinking prior to the accident.

"It has been drawn to my attention," said Mr. Shaver, in announcing settlement, "that the evidence for the plaintiff's case has been more or less of an attack on Father Whalen. I want to say that I have treated it as the usual automobile action.

Father Whalen has constantly denied that he had taken any drink on the day in question, so I feel it my duty to add to the evidence I have already read into the record several questions I asked him in my examination for discovery.

"'And did you have any of the liquor that was found in the car?'

"Answer—'No, I did not.'

"'Did you have any drink of an intoxicating nature on the day in question?'

"Answer—'I did not.'"

Counsel also read from Father Kinlin's examination statements that Father Whalen had not had any drinks.

"In view of the fact that Father Whalen is a parish priest, I wish to add what Judge Parker said in giving judgment on November 3, last year when Father Whalen was tried on a charge of criminal negligence," said Mr. Shaver.

He quoted from the judgment as follows: "I accept the evidence of Father Whalen that he had not taken any liquor. I find him not guilty on the charge of criminal negligence and discharge him."

Mr. Shaver said that evidence had been given by a doctor and hospital officials to prove that what Father Whalen said as to not drinking was true.

REPLAY HOCKEY GAME

Disputed Goal Results in Third Campbellford-Kingston Game.

CAMPBELLFORD, March 19. — The Campbellford Juveniles will replay their game with Kingston in the local arena on Friday night, according to a ruling sent out by the O.J.H.A. Thursday. The controversy arose over a disputed goal in the third period of Tuesday night's game when the local authorities sent in the results of the game claiming a 12-7 victory while the Kingston team claimed the score to be 11-7, which would mean that they had won the round. Although the Kingston team wanted the game played off on neutral ice it was arranged that Campbellford should get the benefit of another game since the game here had been disallowed leaving the score as it stood in Kingston 8-2. The winners of this game, which should be a lively one, will play in Oshawa on Monday evening.

CHINA CLIPPERS DEFEAT PIRATES

Upset Dope With 8-2 Win To Sew Up Southend Intermediate Playoff Series

China Clippers showed a big reversal of form last night at the Brock St. rink to hand Pirates an 8-2 defeat and tie up the Southend Hockey League intermediate playoffs. The first game ended in a 7-1 nod for Pirates but last night's win for the Clippers forces a third contest, which will be played at the Brock early next week.

Heavy ice made last night's affair strictly a shinny match with the Clippers going best in the rough going. Led by Hunt who slammed in five goals they earned the verdict all the way. Callum tallied twice and Jamieson once. For the losers, Fleming and Tranter got the only markers, but only flew were by Castle in the other net kept the P... sies scoring down. Eight penalt... were dished out in a hard-check... tussle. The teams:

Pirates: Goal, Beavis; defence, Bailey and Hobbins; centre, Fleming; wings, J. Bailey and Tranter; alternates, Thomas and O'Brien.

SUDBURY TIGERS PUT PT. COLBORNE OUT OF RUNNING

4 Win Gives Northern Seniors Round 7-5--Dewey Scores Four Goals

THREE IN RACE YET

PORT COLBORNE, Ont., March —(CP)—A hockey team that came from under a blanket of misery for a single series was out of the Allan Cup competition to-day—but Port Colborne fans still affected their Sailors were among the season's great senior clubs. Meanwhile the Sailors' conquerors, Sudbury Tigers, prepared to carry on in playdowns.

Tigers eliminated Port Colborne here last night in a torrid battle that ended in a 6-4 score. A 1-1 tie in the opener at home gave the northerners the round 7-5.

Unable to gain a grouping in the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A series last fall, Sailors were declared the O.H.A.'s only Senior club and given a bye. They journeyed the United States and played a few exhibitions, but the season was a cruel disappointment to backers, who contended strong opposition was necessary to prepare the team for playoff tests.

The result of the first game at Sudbury heightened Port Colborne hopes, however, for the Sailors excelled to have an advantage on their narrow home ice. The heights their sensational young goalie, Alec Brownlee, had attained made their chances seem brighter.

Dewey Stars

But no one figured Jim Dewey would be as good as he was last night. The former Moose Jaw star gave the Winter's greatest performance in amateur hockey as he led Sudbury to victory, scoring four goals; three of them unassisted.

The club which won the Northern title as Wood Mine was behind twice in the dine-dame battle that thrilled a packed arena. Tigers held a two-goal lead after two minutes of the second period, but the home six scored three straight goals to null Dewey tied the count at 3-all before the end of the middle session.

Again Sailors forged to the front in the third when Red Reynolds beat defenceman Charlie Teno. But back came Dewey to pull his team up again and after Don Grosso gave Tigers a 5-4 lead the Westerners broke away to make triumph sure.

Last season Sudbury Falcons, including several of this year's Tigers went to Dominion finals only to be beaten by Kimberley Dynamiters. Tigers meet the winner of the Toronto Dominions-Goodyears series for the right to continue in playdowns.

TORONTO LEAFS BEAT CANADIENS IN 2 TO 1 VICTORY

Penalty To Buswell Gives Smythemen Their Chance In Last Two Minutes

DRILLON SCORES

FORUM, Montreal, March 19. —(CP)—A penalty to Walter Buswell enabled Toronto Maple Leafs to score a late third period goal last night and take a 2-1 victory over Montreal Canadiens, newly crowned champions of the N.H.L. Canadian section.

The teams had played through all but two minutes of the game before 4,000 fans, when Buswell went off for spilling "Hay" Day. Four Leaf forwards went on the attack and on the second face-off Jack Shill slapped a pass to Gordon Drillon.

Canadiens had come from behind to tie the score in the second period on Rod Lorrain's goal, made at the eight-minute mark with the help of George Brown. Rookie Syl Apps scoring a goal that gave him undisputed possession of the league scoring race, shot Leafs ahead on Day's pass at 11.04 of the first period.

For the first half the teams played at a slow pace, then it quickened and for the last period the attacks were ceaseless at both ends. Cude was particularly good, holding Charlie Conacher in check as he stopped the big Leaf winger time and again.

Remember When—

Johnny Risko, Cleveland baker boy, started Paul Berlenbach, world's lightheavyweight boxing champion, on the road down by defeating him in a 10-round newsie bout at New York 12 years ago tonight. Four months later Berlenbach lost his title to the Canadian Jack Delaney in a 15-round decision bout.

Bad Boy Mungo Signs Contract

The great holdout that was giving Manager Burleigh Grimes bad attacks of palpitation is over. Here is Van Lingle Mungo, star pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, affixing his signature to his 1937 contract. Van signed after a workout at the Dodgers' training ground at Clearwater, Fla. His salary is to be $15,000 for the season.

Youthful Curlers Have Fine Record Sedgewick Quartette Wins 21 Games

EDMONTON, Mar. 19—(CP)—One of the longest winning streaks in the annals of Western Canada curling was brought to an end when the Sedgewick Alta., quartet skipped by youthful Billy Rose was defeated in the 22nd game at the annual bonspiel of the Alberta Curling Association.

The Rose rink really had a winning streak of 21 if 10 consecutive victories counted at Sedgewick immediately before coming to Edmonton are added to the 21 straight wins at the northern Alberta meet.

The 22nd game defeat of Sedgewick was at the hands of Cliff Manahan, who later won the 1937 Dominion championship in Toronto. It was Sedgewick's fifth game in one day. The boys had motored 110 miles that morning to Edmonton and started play at nine a.m.

Rose was edged out 12-11 in a 13-end classic, but he said having to play five games in one day had nothing to do with his defeat. "You've got to play often if you keep on winning," he said.

The feat of Frank Cassidy's rink in the Winnipeg bonspiel of 1910 in scoring 35 straight wins was believed to be a world record.

Achievement of youthful Jimmy Welsh's Winnipeg Deer Lodge rink in winning 20 straight at the 1937 Winnipeg spiel was regarded as the second best mark with Rose ranked third with 21.

Other western bonspiel records were believed to be:

Saskatchewan — 16 straight held jointly by Dick Ross of Regina, and Abe Brower, of Langham, Sask. Ross went through the 1929 Regina meet unbeaten. Brower chalked up his mark at the 1931 Saskatoon spiel.

British Columbia—10 straight by Bill Finlay, a member of the famous Cassidy rink of Winnipeg, at the 1936 Pacific spiel.

Manitoba—20 straight by Frank Cassidy.

Memorial Cup Survivors

Because the Winnipeg Monarchs-Portage La Prairie game last night failed to produce a winner, the number of teams seeking Dominion junior hockey honors and the Memorial Cup was still 14 today. The cup field including seven teams in the East and seven in the West, follows:

East.
N.B.—Amherst; Quebec — Montreal Victorias; Ontario— Ottawa Rideaus; Perth, Copper Cliff, Toronto St. Michael's College, Stratford.

West.
Ontario—Port Arthur; Manitoba —Portage La Prairie, Winnipeg Monarchs, St. Boniface; Saskatchewan—Saskatoon Wesleys; Alberta —Edmonton Rangers; B.C.—Trail.

Strike Lucky

The Thompson brothers of the National Hockey League, Paul and "Ting", have been offered $50,000 for the oil rights on their 3,000 acre Alberta ranch land, according to a report. They have decided to wait and hope for a higher price. Paul is the speedy winger of Chicago Black Hawks, while "Ting" is the chap who looks pucks out right and left from the Boston Bruins' goal.

'PEG MONARCHS MEET TERRIERS IN FOURTH TILT

Manitobans Battle To Tie After Game Each In Memorial Cup Struggle

NO SCORE TILL 3RD CANTO

TORONTO, March 19.—(CP)—Southern Manitoba hockey addicts agreed today if their zone could only declare a junior champion it would be halfway toward winning the Memorial Cup, emblematic of Dominion supremacy. Followers of other contenders might offer forceful argument but the fact remains Southern Manitoba has been producing a flock of youngsters for professional ranks of late years.

The bitter fight Winnipeg Monarchs and Portage la Prairie Terriers are waging for district honors has worked up the constituents. Looking for all the world like miniature editions of the New York Rangers who train in their midst each autumn, the two rivals have put on a classic final series.

The opener was one-sided—a 9-1 victory for Portage—but Winnipeg took the second game 3-2 and last night they played a 1-1 overtime tie in the rubber match. A fourth contest, to be played Saturday, was made necessary.

There was no scoring until the final period last night. Then Johnny McCreedy of Monarchs and Jim Brownie of Terriers got goals that forced extra time. There was no further tallying before a halt was called.

Midgets-Mikes Game Saturday.

An eastern series that has rivalled the Winnipeg-Portage affair in intensity will be concluded tomorrow at Toronto, when St. Michael's College will be at home to Stratford Midgets. Both traditional producers of great junior machines, St. Mike's and Stratford have broken even in four games for the Ontario Hockey Association title.

Ottawa Rideaus and Perth will begin a total-goals round for the Ottawa and district championship tonight. The winner will play Amherst St. Pats, victors in the Maritimes.

Last night Sudbury Tigers, successors to Sudbury Falcons who won the Eastern Canada senior crown in 1936 eliminated Port Colborne Sailors from Allan Cup playdowns. The teams tied 1-1 in the opener of the total-goals series and Tigers won the second game in Port Colborne 6-4. Jim Dewey, former Moose Jaw luminary, led Sudbury with four goals.

N.B.—Moncton; Quebec—Hull Volants, St. Jerome, Quebec Aces; Ontario—Sudbury Tigers, Toronto Goodyears and Dominions.

West.
Ontario—Fort William; Manitoba —Winnipeg Packers; Saskatchewan—North Battleford; Alberta—Edmonton Dominions.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By the Canadian Press)
Scoring a goal, Syl Apps of Toronto took undisputed possession of the National Hockey League's scoring leadership last night but the feature of the evening was the hat-trick performances of Americans' Dave Schriner and Nels Stewart and Chicago's Paul Thompson. Schriner, last season's scoring champion, moved into a three-day tie for second place with Larry Aurie and Marty Barry of Detroit, one behind Apps' 44-point total. Meanwhile, Thompson came into the big seven for the first time this season.

LOU GEHRIG SIGNS

Will Get $36,000, or $4,000 Less Than He Asked.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 19.—(AP).— Lou Gehrig, durable first baseman of New York Yankees, has come to terms for the 1937 season.

Gehrig to-day advised Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, he would sign a one-year contract for a salary of $36,000 at the club's camp here. The star first sacker will leave New York for St. Petersburg at once.

The $36,000 salary is $4,000 less than Gehrig was demanding for the 1937 season and $5,000 more than the club's original offer of $31,000.

"HUH" ON REFEREE PLAN.

DEAN SIGNS UP AS BREADON O.K.'S HIS RETIREMENT

Card Holdout Believed To Have Accepted Club Top Offer Of $25,000

HALF HIS DEMAND

BRADENTON, Fla., March 19 —(AP).—Dizzy Dean abruptly ended his wordy holdout siege early today and accepted salary terms, a few hours after St. Louis Cardinals approved the pitcher's application for voluntary retirement.

Provisions of the one-year contract were not disclosed, but the generally accepted figure was $25,000—said to have been the Cards' top offer and just half the price the right-hander insisted his services were worth.

"I'm glad this thing is settled and I can devote all my thoughts to the business of helping the Cards recapture that National League pennant," commented Dizzy.

Dizzy said he had a long talk with Mrs. Dean last night, and they reached the conclusion, "It would be foolish for me to stay out of baseball at a time when I've just reached the peak with years of good pitching still left in my arm."

Dean's retirement application reached the Cards late yesterday, and Breadon promptly approved it and mailed it to the National League headquarters in New York.

Sam Breadon, club president said he would telegraph Ford Frick, National League president, and ask him to disregard the request.

WORKMAN SUFFERS ELECTRIC SHOCK

Bulb On Extension Breaks In Workman's Hands—Taken To Hospital

Suffering from electrical shock and burns to his right hand, Norman DeLong, 193 Auburn Street, was admitted to Nicholls Hospital shortly before eleven o'clock this (Friday) morning, following a singular accident at the Auburn plant of the Dominion Woollens and Worsteds, where he is employed. He was removed to hospital in Bellefeiem's ambulance and was attended by Dr. H. M. Yelland.

According to plant officials, DeLong, assistant foreman in the finishing department, was working with an electrical extension cord, when the light bulb burst in his hand and he received a severe shock and burns from the 110-volt line.

The Day That I Forget

By MARIE BLIZARD

CHAPTER 39

MRS. JOEL PAYNTER crossed one silken knee over the other, perused the columns of her newspaper with some show of boredom, yawned and dropped the paper to the floor.

It was Sunday and Joel was enjoying the funny papers.

"Nothing to interest you, Mrs. Paynter?" he asked lazily.

"Nothing at all," she said, and picked up her knitting. "Except that I am shirred out of my ennui to read about Ervine St. James. The critics seem to be really excited about his performance. I always thought he was a competent screen actor but he has had no experience at all in the theater. After all, the theater is art and the screen is not."

"Umm," Joel answered and rattled his papers.

Janet peered at him from under her lids.

"I think it's a great mistake for screen people to try and storm the theater."

"Why?"

"Well, why not let well enough alone?" Janet saw that Joel had put down his paper. "Why not be satisfied with making a lot of money and doing it easily without any worries, any temperment? I mean, why not be satisfied with something that makes no demands—like the screen? All you have to have to be successful is a face people like."

Whee. I caught a nice big fish that time, Janet thought as Joel swung around on the lounge so that he could regard his wife.

"What are you getting at?" he said.

Janet picked up a dropped stitch counted the ones on her needle and replied after a while. "What do you mean, getting at what? Can't I give you an opinion without your getting energetic about it?"

"You seem to be running down your husband's profession."

"I'm doing nothing of the kind! I'm trying to point out how lucky we are. Some people don't know when they're lucky. Screen actors wanting to rush right into the theater when a little success goes to their heads!"

"What's wrong with that?" Joel inquired heatedly.

Janet sighed, loudly. "Nothing, dear, nothing. Only you, your very own self, have said time and time again that the theater required more than picture actors had to give it. I'll bet you've forgotten how you used to feel about the theater."

That brought no response so Janet tried again.

"I'll bet you've even forgotten your theater technique."

"How many times have I told you not to call it 'theater technique'? It's an art, not a technique!"

"Pardon me," she said flippantly. "I hadn't forgotten but I thought you had."

"Me?" he asked ungrammatically. "I'll never forget. I've wanted to be an artist ever since I can remember."

Janet put down her knitting and her voice was very gentle. "I know you have, darling. And you've been so unselfish all these years."

"You've always wanted to be in the theater and you've had to keep through hoops doing the antics that the box office demands of you. Do you know, Joel, I think about that often and I tell myself—if Joel hadn't married me and had financial responsibilities, he wouldn't have to do this. He might still be in the east and doing great things, things that really mean something, in the theater."

"Kitten, you just forget about yourself being a responsibility. I guess I can afford the luxury of a wife. But in a way you're right, Jan."

"Yes?" Janet answered attentively with an inflection at the end of the word. She waited Joel to go on.

"I mean about the things I have to do. Haven't I told you how many times I've felt like a fool hanging on to some girl's hand with a hang-dog expression in my eyes?"

"Certainly," she said soothingly with no recollection of any such assertions.

"Why, long before we were married I told you why I wanted to be an actor, I told you how I felt about art. Don't you remember?"

Janet could have said that she'd have to dig a long way back in her memory, that she'd heard little of that these last years. Instead she said, "You're always talking about it. But I suppose now it is too late."

"Too late!" Joel fairly exploded.

"Calm yourself, darling. I was only going to say that you couldn't be expected to pull up stakes and go east, and start all over again. That would be ridiculous."

"Now, you're being ridiculous. If I wanted to get a play on Broadway, I could do it easily. I could get a release from the studio. As a matter of fact, they're way ahead of my schedule and I'd probably be laid off for a month or two until my option is picked up. It might be a good idea at that."

"What might be a good idea?" Janet asked innocently.

"If I were to try a season on Broadway."

Jane laughed and laughed and then she said. "If you aren't the contrary one! I believe you've just said that because I said we ought to stay here.

"Janet, you're wrong! I'm fed up to the teeth with this ham acting. I want to do a play in New York. And by jiminy, I'm going to see Hyman about it tomorrow."

"Oh, I meant to tell you about that," Janet said as an afterthought. "Hyman was telling me the other day that Hubert and Jaffe"—one of New York's leading producing teams—"were looking for someone to do their new Dunsany play. I told Hyman that I knew you could do it but I didn't think you'd be interested."

Joel had a feeling that there was more to what he heard than Janet said. He had had that feeling a time or two before and he shot a suspicious glance at his wife. He saw that she had wound her slim ankles around the legs of her low rocking chair and that she bit her lip in a peculiarly childish way she had as she unwound her wool. His glance softened and the suspicion went out of it.

Janet was usually right, he thought, but it was an instinctive rightness, not a calculated one. He decided to buy her the little diamond watch set in a clip he had seen at the jeweler's the day before.

"I think I'll ring up Hyman," he said, getting up.

When he was safely down the hall, Janet permitted herself the luxury of an explosive "Whew!"

When he came back from the telephone, Janet was in the garden. He said that Hyman hadn't been in. Janet said something about her blue spruce trees.

All the next fortnight, Janet never once said anything more about the thing that was uppermost on her mind, the thing that made her heart do elevator dives to contemplate. If Joel were to get out of pictures and return to the stage and she were to get away from Hollywood and lead a normal, sane life as she knew it, she might even find a place in Chester. So many theatrical people did have homes in Connecticut.

Her hopes were beginning to thin away when Joel came home to her, nearly a month after her conversation on that Sunday, with the announcement (intended to startle her completely) that the studio had released him from his contract for the season and Hyman had arranged a contract for him to star in the new Hubert and Jaffe play.

It was summer then and it was nearly four years since she and Joel had come to Hollywood after a brief six months of marriage. Yet she left it—the white house which had cost so much and which was such a jewel box of a house, the cars, the hundreds of people that she knew—with no regrets. She didn't know that she was never to go back.

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S WISH

Clinging to a branch in the tree through which the strong March wind was blowing, Uncle Wiggily was saying over and over:

"What shall I do? How am I to get down without hurting myself? If I jump I may spill the pinkie off the end of my twink nose."

As soon as he had said that Uncle Wiggily knew it was wrong.

"That isn't right," he murmured with a little laugh. "I have a pink nose and it twinkles. I meant to say if I jumped out of this tree I would spill the twinkle from my pink nose. So I had better not."

Uncle Wiggily was standing on one branch with his hind paws and was clinging to a branch above that with his front paws. His paws weren't as good as those a monkey has for clinging to jungle trees and vines. Neither did Uncle Wiggily have a long tail like a monkey.

No Help at All

The tails of nearly all monkeys can be twisted around a tree branch or a trapeze and they can hang that way. It is like a fifth paw to them. But Uncle Wiggily's tail, being very short and stubby, almost like the Bob Cat's tail, the rabbit gentleman couldn't use it in the least to help him to hold fast to the tree into which the March wind had blown him.

"Oh, dear me!" sighed Uncle Wiggily again. "What am I to do? How am I going to get down out of this tree without hurting myself?"

For a moment the only answer he had was a howl from the March wind. It was almost like the howl of the Wolf and Uncle Wiggily hoped none of the Bad Chaps would come along now.

Looking down out of the tree he could see neither the Fox, the Wolf or the Bob Cat.

"That's good," said the rabbit gentleman to himself. "I hope they stay away until I get down out of this tree. But, oh, dear!" he sighed again. "How am I ever to get down?"

All of a sudden a voice asked: "Why don't you make a wish?"

"A wish?" exclaimed Mr. Longears.

"Certainly, a wish," said the voice. "Always when you are in trouble you must make a wish to get out. Go ahead now. Wish!"

"Say, who is talking?" asked Uncle Wiggily, still seeing no one.

"Oregonout! I should say not!" answered a laughing voice. "I'm just a sparrow bird. I saw you up in this tree and at first I thought you were a hawk or eagle. But since you are a rabbit and don't belong in a tree, why don't you make a wish? Then, maybe you could get out."

Why Not Try?

"That's a good idea," said Uncle Wiggily. "But I don't see what good wishing will do if you aren't a fairy. Anyhow fairies always give you three wishes."

"You may have three wishes for all I care," chirped the sparrow. "But I am not a fairy. I don't know that even one of your wishes will be granted. But why not try it?"

"I shall," said Uncle Wiggily. "There is no use making three wishes for I want only one granted—that is to be down out of this tree safely. Oh, I wish," he exclaimed, "I wish to be out of this tree!"

All of a sudden along came walking Mr Bushtail the big bear performer. On his shoulder he carried a ladder he was taking home to use in climbing his roof to mend a leak. As soon as the bear gentleman saw Uncle Wiggily up a tree, Mr. Bushtail put the ladder in place. Uncle Wiggily climbed down the ladder and he had his wish.

"You are welcome," growled jolly Mr. Bushtail.

And if the gold fish doesn't park his auto in the canary bird's cage, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's welcome.

After all had partaken of a sumptuous supper a short program was enjoyed. Mr. Jack Staples, pianist of the church, rendered two violin selections, accompanied by Miss Helen Howson on the piano. Master Kenneth Patton sang "When It's Lamplightin' Time in the Valley," playing his own accompaniment. Misses Beth and Jean Monerief gave a pleasing Irish number (dance and song), and Miss Mary Sharpe two readings. Before the singing of the National Anthem, the chairman, Rev. E. M. We couple the best collection of styles and the most colourful group of weaves we've had for years with the great advantage of hand-cutting. Checked and re-checked against your individual measurements, we promise you as easy-fitting and good-looking a suit as you've seen at this price.

There is, this Spring, a very definite trend to a more generous use of colour in men's clothes. We went to England and to the great woollen mills in Canada. We chose the colouring that seemed most authentic to us. Alternate stripes are definitely in the lead. We have them in blue, garnet, light grey, fawns; on grey, blue, brown backgrounds. All the checks and plaids, too, reflect this new freedom in colour. Still, there's no flight from standards of good taste. You'll find them deepened and enriched by a fine use of colour.

See our new fabrics. Go through our style book. Make your choice and leave us your measurements. We will do the rest, quickly, efficiently and to your taste. The man with luxury tastes and the man of moderate income will find it true economy to let EATON'S make his clothes, cutting them by hand, to his measurements.

These suits may be purchased on EATON'S Budget Plan if you desire.

EARHART CRACKS UP IN TAKE-OFF AT HONOLULU

BODIES OF 455 FOUND IN RUINS TEXAS SCHOOL

Casualty List Shows 94 Injured, 2 Missing—Remains 3 Young Girls Unclaimed

MILITARY PROBE STARTS

Oil Field Workers Claim Signs Of Nitro-Glycerine Found In Shattered Pipes

NEW LONDON, Tex., March 20—(AP)—Toll of the London community school blast was boosted to 455 by latest checks today as a military court of inquiry convened to hear contrasting theories of the cause—one, accumulated gas as a result of inadequate radiator vents, another, a nitro-glycerin explosion.

The casualty list, showed 94 injured and two missing. The list, exhaustively as relief workers checked it, still was subject to revision.

The military court was convened while this stricken community and the surrounding oil country prepared to bury its dead.

Dr. E. P. Schoch, University of Texas chemist, held out a belief the explosion Thursday was caused by gas forced into cells of the hollow tile school room walls by lack of proper vents for gas-fired individual radiators.

Signs of Nitro-Glycerin.

The Tyler Morning Telegraph quoted Captain Z. E. Coombes, member of the military court, as saying two oil field workers, W. L. Thompson and Jess Vaugh, turned over to him short pieces of sewer pipe from the blast ruins which they said would show traces of nitro-glycerin. The pipes, they contended, had been blown to bits by a terrific explosion within. The captain explained other witnesses discounted the men's theory but he said he would call them, as witnesses and show their exhibits.

Only three bodies—all young girls — lay unclaimed in a Henderson mortuary. Yesterday as many as 13 unidentified had been laid in rows in improvised morgues at one time.

The state department of public safety aided in the difficult task of identification by sending a finger-print expert here.

New London and surrounding oil communities ceased work to attend the funerals set for today.

Vents Ended in Wallst

Vents from the radiators in the building, used as independent units "simply end in the walls," said lanky, greying Dr. Schoch.

His contention, based on his reported finding of intact radiators "without proper flues" in the ruins placed him in disagreement with another expert, who with Dr. Schoch was called as a witness to-day at an inquiry of military authorities.

"It is my opinion that the explosion was caused by gas accumulating beneath the building," asserted E. M. Roberts, electrician on construction of the building.

"I don't think there was any defect in connection with the gas radiators which would allow such an explosion."

Search for the all-important cause of the explosion shared interest with plans for both mass and individual funerals of the victims.

The radiators, one to a room, were individually fired with gas.

TWO-STOREY LEAP SAVES SIX PEOPLE

Youths Hold Mattress To Break Fall As Family Flee Fire —Tailor Loses $120

HAMILTON, Ont., March 20. —(CP)—Flames which broke out in an apartment building on Barton street here to-day endangered the lives of six persons and caused several thousand dollars damage.

Steve Kuryliw and his wife and four children had narrow escapes. The flames drove them to the window ledge of the second storey apartment. Kuryliw, director of the Ukrainian National Home, tossed his wife and four children into a mattress held by ten youths and then jumped to safety as the flames licked the ledge.

Larry Nuzick, tailor, former magician, suffered slight burns to face and hair before awakened by the flames in his store. Police are attempting to solve disappearance of $120 Nuzick placed in a cash drawer a few hours before.

Nuzick was surrounded by flames when he awoke and only managed to save a trunk of costumes he used for his magician act. He exclaimed of the $120 missing. $100 was borrowed from a friend to help him meet his rent.

Bill Kirstew said the building shook violently during the fire. Paul Compass and George Lane, hearing screams, rushed to the fire and held the mattress as the six persons jumped from the second storey.

ROME.—Italian officials today characterized a purported telegram from Premier Mussolini to Italian "Legionnaires" on the insurgent side in Spain as a "fake" and a "poor trick." Hockey Fan Falls Over Port Hope Viaduct

James Platt Steps Off Train Drops 40 Feet To Pavement Below

SEVERAL GOT OFF

Eye-Witness Saw Platt Suddenly Disappear Over The Side

(By A Staff Reporter)

PORT HOPE, March 20.—James J. Platt, 485½ Bolivar street, Peterborough, for many years a lineman with the Peterborough Utilities Commission, fell 40 feet to his death early this morning from the Port Hope viaduct a few moments after the Peterborough hockey special C.N.R. train had pulled into Port Hope from Oshawa.

Platt who was one of the 500 fans who travelled to Oshawa by train to witness the Barrie-Peterborough game got off the train with several others when it backed on to the viaduct near the station prior to moving from the main line to the Peterborough branch. It was evidently the intention of the party to walk along the train and get in one of the coaches ahead but they had not gone far when Platt toppled over the side of the bridge and fell head first to the ground beneath. It is thought that he was killed instantly.

An Eye-Witness' Story

T. Clarence Starr, 170 Albertus Ave., Peterborough was an eye-witness of the accident and notified the train crew.

"I was on the platform of the second coach from the rear of the train," said Mr. Starr, "and saw the whole thing. Platt was not the first off the train. There were several others ahead of him and one of them must have opened the door. At all events they were walking up toward the next coach when I saw them and I heard some one shout a warning. A moment after Platt yelled 'I'm going' and I saw him fall over. I could see the light of his cigarette as he went over the edge and then I heard the heavy thud as he struck the ground beneath."

Mr. Starr immediately reported the accident to Jack Ashmore, who was assisting the train crew and the conductor was notified that some person had fallen from the viaduct. Trainman R. C. Willis of Lindsay went down below the bridge and found Platt badly injured about the head and apparently dead. Medical aid and the police and coroner were notified and the excursion train was held an hour before permission to proceed to Peterborough was given. The accident happened at about 12.30 o'clock.

Son On Train

A particularly sad feature of the tragedy was that the victim's son, Jack, an employee of Dominion Woollens and Worsted Limited, was on the train and the news had to be broken to him that his father had met with an accident. The boy remained at Port Hope.

According to the train crew the doors of all the coaches had been closed on leaving Oshawa and they had not been opened by the crew after that time.

Mr. Platt had been a lineman in Peterborough for over thirty years having been employed with the Canadian Machine Telephone Company before entering the service of

LABOR TROUBLE IS SAID BREWING AT BRINTON PLANT

WALK-OUT STAGED

No official statements could be obtained by The Examiner from the plant management or workers' representatives relative to persistent rumours of developing labor trouble at the Brinton Peterborough Carpet Co.'s plant. However, from unofficial sources The Examiner learned that the female workers in the setting department staged a walk-out Friday afternoon when a five per cent. increase in wages promised to them the week previous was not forthcoming.

Pay envelopes contained a printed card, it was stated, in which employees were asked to "kindly acknowledge a five per cent. increase."

Subsequent to the walk-out of about one hundred employees, it is believed the workers generally are demanding a full restoration of the twenty-five per cent. deductions effected during the depression period.

The demand, it is said, was placed before the management this morning at a joint conference of plant officials and workers' representatives.

Melville Holden, president of the Canadian Brussel Carpet Weavers' Association (Local No. 3), who was reported to have been one of the spokesmen for the workers lately refused to discuss the matter. "I am not opening my trap," he declared to a reporter.

The plant at the present time is providing employment for 200-250 hands and conditions during the past six months are said to have been the best experienced in the past six or seven years period.

ALLIGATOR IN SEWER

Thought To Have Escaped From Its Winter Home.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., March 20.—(CP) — A live, 47-inch alligator, lastly wailing for winter to pass, was discovered here by a crew of men engaged in storm sewer work. The reptile was turned over to a taxidermist. The creek where the alligator was found is continuously receiving warm water from a laundry plant. It is believed the reptile was brought back from Florida by a tourist and escaped.

Skull Of True Missing Link Said Found In African Cave

250,000 YEARS OLD

By Howard W. Blakeslee
(Associated Press Science Editor.)

PHILADELPHIA, March 20 (A.P.) —A report the true "missing link," a two-legged animal part way between man and ape, has been discovered in South Africa, was made to the International Symposium on Early and To-day by Robert Broom, of the Transvaal Museum, Pretoria, South Africa.

Broom discovered the head, except the lower jaw, in a cave at Sterkfontein last year. It was, he said, about 250,000 years old. The head showed it to be an animal of about the size and proportions of a chimpanzee.

But its teeth, Broom said, "were almost entirely human." No ape has ever been found with teeth like this animal. Its brain capacity was only that of a good sized modern gorilla.

The belief that this animal was a descendant of the first human stock, a cousin of the branch of the family which developed into human beings, is based, Mr. Broom said, not alone on this new discovery.

A similar animal with virtually human teeth was discovered in another cave 300 miles away 12 years ago. It was a five-year-old "baby."

Professor Raymond A. Dart of Johannesburg immediately identified it as a new type of two-legged creature, probably sub-human. But Mr. Broom said, the scientists of Europe declared it could only be a young chimpanzee. He said they did not look at it and its classification remained unsettled.

Since the new discovery, he said, there is no longer any doubt both creatures are different than chimpanzees. The first one lived 750,000 years ago, or about 500,000 years earlier than last year's find. Professor Dart thought there were indications in the shape of the creature's skull that it had learned to talk.

Toronto's Sunday Dignity To Send Police Snooping

Old Blue Law Will Bring Fines For Buyers And Sellers Of Cigars Or Cigarettes

FIRST VICTIM PEEVED

TORONTO, March 20.—(CP)— In defence of Toronto's famed Sunday dignity, unsullied by non-essential business, police constables are under orders to snoop briskly and as thoroughly as possible tomorrow around drug stores and restaurants.

An ancient blue law forbids Sunday sale of anything but drugs in drug stores. Restaurants are permitted to serve only meals. Since this statute was uncovered the other day, Toronto has worried about the cigarette problem.

To-morrow it is going to be well-nigh impossible to buy a cigarette or a cigar. The storekeeper who takes a chance will be fined $5 if a vigilant policeman catches him. The man who buys one is liable to a $2 fine.

So far only Captain Archibald S. Pitten has been caught purchasing illegally. He was caught last Sunday and fined $2 greatly to his disgust. Refusing to pay the fine he reckons he'll go to jail for one day in protest against what he regards as Toronto's "narrow-mindedness."

There the matter rests, but Chief Constable D. M. Draper warned last night: "Police will continue to enforce the law against Sunday sales."

OLD MAN WINTER GIVES LAST KICK

Mixture Of Snow And Rain Slushes Entire Province Last Day Of Season

TORONTO, March 20.—(CP)— Winter's farewell today included a mixture of snow, rain and sleet which turned Ontario's city streets into slush-laden thoroughfares, slowing up traffic and making walking difficult.

When Spring makes its official appearance tomorrow there will be a blanket of snow stretched over most of the province. Windsor area suffered snow, sleet and rain, residents donning the rubbers and goloshes, discarded with yesterday's sunshine.

Traffic Hazardous

A blinding snowstorm, whipped by a strong wind, piled snow from one and a half to three inches throughout Essex county. Sleet made traffic conditions hazardous.

Two inches of snow fell overnight at Stratford while Brantford received an inch and a half and more still falling. Snow started to fall in the Kitchener district at seven o'clock this morning with three inches appearing in less than two hours. Driving was treacherous in Galt.

The Niagara Peninsula folk recalled a year ago today the greatest snowstorm in 20 years struck their area, blocking highways for days and stranding hundreds of autos, finally released when large snowplows were brought down from the north to fight the drifts. Today the Peninsula residents viewed similar conditions with the fall measuring about three inches. A brisk east wind whipped Hamilton from the lake and traffic was slowed down due to slush.

FRENCH WOMAN'S DIARY STARTLING TO PARIS OFFICIALS

Find Gun-Toting Beauty Had Affair With An Ex-French Premier

BESIDES MUSSOLINI

PARIS, March 20.—(UP)—The case of exotic Madeleine de Fontanges, who shot the Count de Chambrun because "he ruined my idyll with Mussolini," threatened last night to become an international scandal when she was revealed to have been friendly with a former Premier of France.

Police revealed her friendship with the former Premier, said to have been famous in international affairs, but refused to identify him. Nor would they say whether his name was contained in a lurid diary seized from Mme. Fontanges's apartment, the walls of which were covered with photographs of Premier Mussolini.

Italian Envoy Seeks Data.

The Italian Ambassador, Vittorio Cerruti, conferred tonight with Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos at the Quai d'Orsay, supposedly to ask what had been learned from the diary.

Police said the woman formerly was a stenographer at the Foreign Office.

Influential quarters were said to be exerting pressure to hush up the shooting of Chambrun, former Ambassador to Rome and a descendant of the Revolutionary War hero Lafayette.

Efforts to suppress information regarding the activities of the 29-year-old actress and newspaper woman followed linking of her name to the former Premier, who remains prominent in French political affairs.

Count Is Recovering.

The 62-year-old Count de Chambrun is recovering from a bullet wound in the thigh after being shot by Mme. Fontanges in the Nord Railway Station Wednesday.

Reports in the corridors of the Palais de Justice said the examining Magistrate hesitated more than an hour before searching Mme. Fontanges's luxurious flat, fearing that the police would find papers compromising the French statesman.

Mme. Fontanges, who first told police she shot de Chambrun because he violated her confidence and caused her to lose the love of a man "too famous to be mentioned by name," told newspapermen in her tiny cell at the Petits Roquette prison:

"I don't regret having shot the Count, because he ruined my idyll with Mussolini."

SECURITIES BILL SPEEDED DESPITE TORY OPPOSITION

WANT EASTER CLOSE

TORONTO, March 20 — (C.P.) — From one storm to another the Ontario Legislature rode in the sitting that ended early to-day.

Speeding up legislation so as to get through by Good Friday, the Government just before midnight pushed through second reading a bill to extend the power of Ontario Securities Commission to retrospective investigations into the financing or financial operations of any company in Ontario.

"We're going on tonight and that settles it," said Premier Hepburn when George Henry, Conservative House leader, asked him to leave the bill over to Monday when more members than the 30 or so then on hand would be present.

"Nefarious operations" of various companies would be exposed to the searchlight when the bill became operative, Attorney-General Roebuck said.

Purpose of the bill was defined by Leopold Macaulay (Cen., York South) as the setting up of "star chamber court methods" for "getting" Senator Arthur Meighen to whom the government had lost two lawsuits.

One Reason Says Hepburn

Premier Hepburn said this was one reason for the bill. He intended to investigate the companies with which Meighen had been associated.

Mr. Roebuck, answering a question, said he was willing to have

Agnes Says Lunch Dates Fine But Balks at Being Lobbied

OVER LOAN BILL

OTTAWA, March 20—(CP)—The House of Commons last night voted 81 to 32 to give second reading to a small loan company private bill after Miss Agnes Macphail (UFO-Lab., Grey-Bruce) declared in debate: "I don't mind being taken out to dinner but I do object to being lobbied."

Miss Macphail was registering her disapproval of any further legislation for small loan companies and declared there were "people now in the gallerie, who are spending a lot of money buying meals for members."

If the legislation was good it would stand on its merits and there would be no need of the efforts of lobbyists.

Mrs. George Black (Cons., Yukon) second woman member of the House, said she was not sure she approved the measure but even a criminal has a right to trial before judge and jury" and she would vote to send it to committee.

"While I had a luncheon with a so-called lobbyist in the gallery," Mrs. Black said, "I did not feel that the luncheon purchased me."

FLAMES DIE OUT

Will Ship Craft Back To Factory—Mean At Least Two Weeks' Delay

HONOLULU, March 20.—(AP).—Amelia Earhart's around-the-world $80,000 plane skidded and crashed to-day while she was attempting to take off for Howland Island on her world flight, but she and her two men companions escaped injury.

The plane skidded on the wet concrete runway and the left tire blew out, wrecking the undercarriage.

There was a burst of flame from the engine and the ambulances raced to the scene.

"Something must have gone wrong," she exclaimed.

Companions Unhurt

The fliers' companions, Fred J. Noonan and Captain Harry Manning, also escaped injury.

The attempted takeoff was made shortly after dawn for the second stage of the world flight, a hop of 1,532 miles to tiny Howland Island, south-west of here.

Miss Earhart entered the plane at 11.10 a.m. E2ST after Manning and Noonan had taken their places in the craft.

The motors were given a final warming up and then Miss Earhart "gunned" them as she headed down the concrete runway at Luke Field at high speed.

The plane was about half way down the runway when the accident occurred.

Officials said the tire on the left wheel blew out.

A scattered crowd of about 75 watchers, mostly United States Army men, saw a burst of flame spurt from the left motor when the plane crashed, and then the fire died out.

The left wheel snapped off and was hurled 40 feet from where the plane came to rest.

Miss Earhart stood in the cockpit

C. G. E. STARTING GROUP INSURANCE FOR EMPLOYEES

1,300 Employees of Pererborough Plant Are Immediately Eligible

TWO CATEGORIES

A group life insurance plan that will provide protection for the families of employees and become effective April 1, 1937, was announced by the Canadian General Electric Company today.

The plan includes two certificates of insurance, one of which is paid for entirely by the company and is offered in conjunction with additional insurance on a contributory basis.

This insurance is available to all employees when they have completed one year of continuous service, regardless of age and without medical examination, and will cover approximately 4,000 of Canadian General Electric Company employees in the various works and offices.

Of the 1,700 employees in the Peterborough works, it is estimated that about 1,300 will be immediately eligible for this insurance, which is being underwritten by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The free insurance, which is fully paid for by the company, is available only to those employees who subscribe for the additional insurance. If 75 per cent. or more of the eligible employees subscribe, the plan will take effect April 1.

Two Categories.

For the purposes of this insurance employees are considered as being in two categories, those who have dependent beneficiaries, and those whose designated beneficiaries are not their dependents.

The amount of free insurance applicable to employees who completed one year of continuous service on or after September 1, 1939, is set forth in a schedule of ages and periods of service.

For example, an employee 26 years of age or younger receives $1,500 free insurance if he has been continuously employed for five years; and if the period was for one year his free insurance is $500. And so on up the line. A man of forty years of age who has been with the company five years gets $1,200 free insurance. This schedule of insurance applies to employees who have dependent beneficiaries.

Another clause explains that should the designated beneficiary at the time of the employee's death not be a dependent, the amount of free insurance shall be limited to $150.

Additional Insurance.

The amount of additional insurance, and that means the insurance which the employee pays for, is based upon his or her annual earnings, as determined by the company.

Wall of Silence Shrouds Rail Meet

Montreal, March 20—(CP)

A BARRIER of silence today walled the progress of railway labor leaders meeting to decide whether or not Canada's rail transport is to be tied up by a general wage strike.

No word of their attitude came from the representatives of an estimated 117,000 employees as they entered the third day of discussion on the question of a walkout for higher wages. The more than 50 coast-to-coast labor chiefs stayed tight-lipped.

LOST TWO HANDS IN PUNCH PRESS

Canadian General Employee Meets With a Serious Accident

Alex Sjoberg, 21, an employee of the punch press department of the Canadian General Electric Company, suffered the loss of three fingers and part of the thumb on each hand, in a mechanical accident at 5 p.m. Friday afternoon.

The unfortunate young man was just beginning work on the night shift, replacing an employee who had been operating the machine and was still close by. Sjoberg had placed under the die of the punch press a strip of metal, and when the first cutting operation was completed he thrust his hands in the machine to remove the part which had been punched out. The machine was equipped with a safety device, but the Examiner was informed that Sjoberg had not used it. He has been employed with the company since last September, and

Hepburn Flies In Rage Over Reflection Cast On Self and J. J. Glass

Affidavits Charge Premier, Liberal Members Interfered With Liquor Control Board

TO GET HOTEL LICENSE

One Signatory Is Cousin Once-Removed—Blackmailers Says Hepburn

TORONTO, March 20 (CP) — Charges in connection with the issuance of a beer license to a Toronto hotel last night brought new heights of invective to the Ontario legislature, the charges, reflecting on Premier Hepburn and J. J. Glass, Liberal member for Toronto-St. Andrew's, were contained in affidavits read by George Henry, Conservative House leader.

Mr. Henry did not take responsibility for the charges. He refused to do so when Premier Hepburn challenged him with an offer to name a royal commission of inquiry if Mr. Henry should stake his seat on the truth of the charges.

During the debate, Mr. Henry was named by the premier as: "A man quite capable of associating with a man who would steal beer money."

As one for whom the premier could not think "of anything sufficiently insulting to say."

Mr. Henry's answer to all these was a demand the public accounts committee investigate the charges in the affidavits.

The budget debate division went over to Monday. Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon will wind up for the government. He was expected to discuss the Madden report on the riot at the Ontario Reformatory, Guelph.

Two Affidavits

Mr. Henry read two affidavits, the first made by Walter Osborne, Toronto, and the second by his wife, Nina Osborne. Both related to the obtaining of a beverage room authority for the Hotel Dennis, Toronto. It was set forth Mrs. Osborne was "A first cousin once removed" to Mr. Hepburn. The premier said he had no knowledge of the relationship.

The affidavit by Osborne said Beecher Dennis sought Osborne's help in getting a beer license for his hotel. An agreement was made under which Osborne was to be employed by Dennis if the license were obtained.

Osborne and Dennis, the affidavit said, went to Mr. Glass, a lawyer, and he agreed to help them get the license, the fee to be $700; Mr. Glass was to get $200 and "a person unnamed" to get $300.

The license was refused by the Liquor Control Board and on May 17, 1935, a visit was paid to Premier Hepburn by Dennis, Glass and Osborne. Premier Hepburn, it was said promised to see what he could do about it. On May 18 the license was granted.

The hotel opened May 23 and Osborne got a job at $30 a week. He was discharged December 31 last. Osborne did not know whether Mr. Glass got $700.

Sometimes Made Suggestions.

Premier Hepburn informed the House he told Dennis he did not interfere with the Liquor Control Board but "sometimes suggested a

BREWERS' HORSES DRAW CARRIAGE

Speaker's Three-Ton Coach Will Be In May 12th Procession

LONDON, March 20—(CP) — Coronation Day will behold the appearance in the streets of Westminster of the State Coach of the Speaker of the House of Commons.

Believed to have been designed originally for King William of Orange, the Speaker's coach bears a certain similarity to the famous coach of the Lord Mayor of London. It weighs nearly three tons and is mounted on "C" springs, which cause it to rock ominously when descending a hill.

Although the State looks to the upkeep of the Speaker's coach and provides harness, it does not provide horses. For nearly a century the privilege of horsing the coach has remained with the famous brewing firm of Whitbread, since the days when Mr. Speaker Shaw Lefevre married a Whitbread. Prior to the late King's Jubilee, the only time in the last 88 years when the coach had been seen in the streets was at the time of King George's Coronation. On that occasion the journey taken was merely from the Speaker's house to the Abbey, about 400 yards.

NEW ENLISTMENT MEASURE CURBS FIGHTING ABROAD

Amendment However Exempts Canadians Serving In Humanitarian Roles

GOES TO SENATE

OTTAWA, March 20—(CP)—Warlike aspirations of Canadians desiring to fight in foreign lands against countries on friendly relations with Canada or to take part in civil wars would be sharply curbed by legislation adopted in the House of Commons yesterday and sent to the senate.

The Foreign Enlistments Act of 1870, an imperial statute applicable to Canada, is being re-enacted for the statutes of Canada with some alterations incidental to changed conditions. Debate on the measure occupied the House throughout yesterday afternoon but there was no controversy on the principle.

Law lords of the Privy Council should be made aware of the fact Canada has emerged from the colonial status and certain Canadians should rid themselves of a colonial spirit of inferiority in the opinion of Hon. C. H. Cahan, Conservative member for St. Lawrence-St. George, Montreal.

150 Imperial Statutes?

He said it was time all the imperial statutes in effect in Canada were collected, and either abolished or replaced with the Canadian enactments.

The list of such laws runs to at least 150, Justice Minister Lapointe told the House after Mr. Cahan had conservatively estimated it at 118. Justice Minister Lapointe said Mr. Cahan's suggestion these measures be reviewed by competent legal experts with a view to repeal and replacement was a good one.

The new Foreign Enlistment Act replaces a British statute passed at Westminster in 1870 and which has so far been the law of Canada. It makes it a punishable offence for Canadians to enlist in the armies of foreign countries at war with countries friendly to Canada. By order-in-council it may be applied to civil wars.

The measure received third reading after passing through committee of the whole where a few amendments were made, the chief one doing away with power given the government to issue permits for Canadians to enlist where otherwise enlistment was prohibited.

Another amendment exempted from the act Canadian non-combatants serving in solely humanitarian, medical and nursing services under the direction of the Red Cross or any other recognized Canadian humanitarian agency.

The Act applies to non-combatants as well as combatants except

REBEL TROOPS FULL RETREAT 30-MILE FRONT

Italian Volunteers Reported Smashed Back 18 Miles In Guadalajara

200 PRISONERS TAKEN

Drive Puts Socialists Into Fascist Territory First Time Since Outbreak

MADRID, March 20—(AP)—Victorious Government troops last night smashed forward eighteen miles northeast of Brihuega in Guadalajara Province to Navalpotro only 11 miles from the important insurgent stronghold of Siguenza.

Smashing back the Italian "volunteers"—to whom Premier Mussolini allegedly had wired congratulations on their "assured victory"—in a savage assault, the crack battalions of General Jose Miaja plowed through darkness and over muddy terrain, along a thirty-mile battlefront.

The Italian contingents were reported fleeing all along the line, as the militia engulfed town after town which they had yielded at the opening of the Guadalajara campaign.

Hailed Brilliant Victory.

The advance, hailed by the Socialist high command as the most brilliant victory of the civil war, assumed still more impressive proportions, it was claimed, as the first troops alogged into Navalpotro in the early hours of the night.

The capture meant that the Government had not only recovered lost ground, but advanced into Fascist territory. Almost for the first time since the war began, they were in a position to menace a crucial insurgent stronghold.

Gunfire Harasses Retreat.

Government artillery, from regained heights north of Brihuega, about forty-four miles northeast of Madrid, harassed the retreating columns with heavy cannon fire, despatches said.

Most of the insurgents, however, were reported to have escaped capture last night, hastily evacuating under cover of darkness and rain.

Communiques said Government "clean-up squads" captured more than 200 prisoners, many from hiding places in basements of the war-torn village.

UNIVERSITY CITY FALLS TO REBELS

Government Attack Fails And Insurgents Break Through In Retreat

NAVALCARNERO, Spain, March 20 (AP) — Insurgent forces in the university city sector at Madrid's northwest corner were reported today to have smashed through the capital's defenses into northern Madrid.

Word of crumpled resistance and a sudden thrust into the long-besieged city was brought to this insurgent base by persons who said they witnessed the incursion.

The troops of General Franco were said to have battered their way to positions near Calle De Bravo Murillo, a large thoroughfare bisecting the northern portion of city from north to south.

The sudden advance was made possible, it was said, by the failure of a government attack in the university city sector yesterday.

Pressing home their advantage, the insurgents drove their foes back into buildings east of university city and within Madrid's boundaries, it was said.

From this foothold the insurgents were said to have spread out, occupying a large area of Madrid and making the most decisive change in the siege lines in months.

The official insurgent communique last night said only that the government Franco's men had firmly established new, strategic positions. The capital has been under siege four months.

WESTWOOD

BANQUET IS HELD FOR HOCKEY CLUB

Westwood Players Are Feted For Winning Coveted Tedford Trophy

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WESTWOOD, March 20—Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Lobb opened their spacious home on St. Patrick's evening to the members of the Westwood hockey club, when a banquet in the form of a five-course dinner was given them in honor of their recent victory in winning the Tedford trophy.

The tables were beautifully decorated in keeping with St. Patrick's Day, the handsome silver cup occupying a prominent place. Miss Virginia Lobb rendered instrumental music during the banquet hour, playing, "Where the River Shannon Flows," with variations, and a medley of Irish airs.

A very delightful program followed with E. W. Sargent as toastmaster. Toasts were proposed and responded to, as follows: The King, by Jack Graham; the host and hostess, by Walter Mortlock, manager of the team, who voiced the thanks and appreciation of all present for the kind hospitality; St. Patrick, by William Renwick, ex-manager, who still holds a keen interest and encourages the boys; and to the Westwood hockey team, by Mrs. Lobb, who congratulated them and gave them a hearty welcome to her home. Short addresses were also given by Bert Mortlock, captain, and Everett Morris, youngest member of the team. The different toasts were interspersed with a piano duet by S. Ross and Miss V. Lobb; an Irish solo by William Morris; chorus, by the hockey team, and community singing.

An enjoyable part of the evening was the opening of a huge box of chocolates, donated to the team by G. A. Renwick, as a tribute to their successful season.

TARIFF CHANGES GIVEN APPROVAL

Iron And Textiles Held Over Pending Return Of Bennett To House

OTTAWA, March 20 (CP)—Speedy action in the House of Commons last night enabled Finance Minister Dunning to obtain approval of all the remaining tariff change items in the Canada-United Kingdom trade agreement except those relating to iron and textiles. These latter were held over pending return to the House of Conservative Leader Bennett, out of town yesterday.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner declared good results had come from the Government's campaign to advertise Canadian farm products in the United Kingdom and a further appropriation for this purpose would be asked this year.

Millions of pounds of vegetable oils from tropical countries are coming into Canada to cause Canadian animal fats to go to waste, Joseph H. Harris (Cons., Toronto-Danforth) told the House.

Finance Minister Dunning said the subject had been referred to the Tariff Board and Mr. Harris could be assured it would receive full and careful consideration. The discussion arose on the Canada-United Kingdom trade agreement which provides for free entry for cottonseed oil, palm and palm kernel oil, copoanut oil and crude peanut oil.

These oils, said Mr. Harris, were coming into Canada at the rate of 150,000,000 pounds a year at low prices and displacing animal fats equivalent to the produce of 1,000,000 animals. The United States had put a tariff on vegetable oils, thereby throwing more on the Canadian market, but had also placed a duty on processed animal fats from Canada while admitting the raw material duty free.

"I have gained in weight and have more color in my face!"

NORMAL WEIGHT and a good complexion are very closely related to health. Loss of health usually leads to loss of weight and a poor complexion. All beauty specialists agree on this point and many women have learned by experience how important health is to beauty and weight. Miss May W——* of Toronto, for instance, writes:

"Four months ago I was pale and underweight. I started taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and they have done me a world of good. Now I have gained in weight and have more color in my face. Friends tell me how much healthier I am looking."

One of the chief causes of a pale face and thin body is improper nourishment. The blood, glands and vital organs of your body must be nourished with mineral iron and cannot function properly without it.

If you are underweight, pale or sallow and rarely feel rested or really well, strike at the root of your trouble. Build up your health and vitality with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They will supply the iron you need and thereby help you back to normal weight, better health and improved complexion. Price 50c.

Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills regularly for a while; and if you don't feel better, stronger and healthier, your money will be returned to you.

FOR GREATER FREEDOM FROM COLDS

Just do these 2 things!

1 To help PREVENT many colds

At the first sneeze or sniffle or irritation in the nose—quick!—put a few drops of Vicks Va-tro-nol up each nostril. This specialized medication is expressly designed for the nose and upper throat, where most colds start. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off head colds in their early stages.

VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

2 To RELIEVE a cold sooner

Massage Vicks VapoRub briskly on the back (between and below the shoulder-blades) as well as on the throat and chest, for 3 full minutes. Then spread a thick layer over the chest. VapoRub's famous poultice-and-vapor action continues hour after hour. It loosens phlegm, eases your cough, relieves irritation, helps to break up local congestion.

Sabbath Message For the Shut-Ins

THE LORD'S PRAYER (Continued)

"THE LORD'S PRAYER centres around the home and family. We have briefly meditated upon the first part:— "What the father expects of the son" namely, Reverence and obedience. We now consider the second part:— "What the son expects of the father."

WHAT THE SON EXPECTS OF THE FATHER

How simple and natural the requests are.

1. FOOD. "Give us our daily bread." We all have appetites. After your first cry in this world you were fed. The root meaning of the Sanskrit word Pa, translated father, is to feed. We are living in a complex civilization and most of our food is the result of very wonderful co-operation on the part of others, requiring much thought, labour and skill. We are apt, therefore, to forget that behind it all stands God the Father, the All-Provider. Do you give thanks for your food? Do you say Grace, which implies you have a gracious spirit recognising Who is the real Giver? Are you ashamed to say our own Grace publicly when you dine in a restaurant or hotel, or do you bow your head quietly? It is an outward and visible sign of your recognition of the heavenly Provider.

We ask for bread. The necessities of life, not for luxuries. "Thy bread and thy water shall be assured thee" is the ancient promise, and to many of us the Father has added luxuries. But we must also remember that the Lord Himself practiced the deeper truth:— "Man shall not live by bread alone but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." We need our spiritual food which the Father has gladly provided. Furthermore we must not forget the wider request for food for all our brethren:— "give us" Food for the multitudes who are living with hunger the ordinary event in their lives. The Christian who does not think of the poverty of this generation has little of the mind of the Master.

"DAILY" It may surprise you to know that the word translated "daily" was practically unknown to Greek scholars till a short time ago. At the beginning of this century there were about five hundred words which were supposed to be found only in the Greek New Testament. The discoveries of papyri, the ordinary letters and business accounts of that age, have reduced that number to about fifty. Among the discoveries is this word "daily." Modern scholarship is of the opinion that the petition means:— "Give us to-day tomorrow's bread." How beautiful this is when you remember that the Lord taught the prayer to poor people who lived from hand to mouth. They were to fall asleep with thankfulness because in the cupboard there was enough bread for tomorrow; the Father's provision for His children. It was to relieve them from anxiety. How homelike.

2. FORGIVENESS. To many who are in comfortable circumstances this is the important petition. They need forgiveness more than bread. What is forgiveness? Restoration to the Father's love and fellowship. The father always loved the younger son in the far country. The lad asked for forgiveness. He did not expect restoration to the Father's love and family. "Make me as one of thy hired servants." He never had the opportunity to say this. "Bring forth the best robe, ring and shoes" is the father's command. They are the outward and visible signs of restoration to the family fellowship and father's love. As the younger son sat that evening in the family circle with rejoicing all around him his heart went out to his father. It was an eye-opener that he should have such a father. The father's love broke the son's heart. He could never return to the old pleasures. They had lost their attraction because he saw his father in a new light.

But the prayer is conditional:—"As we forgive." That is the acid test of our religion. To be forgiven you must forgive. You must suffer the agony of plucking the evil spirit of hatred and revenge from your heart. Then you can forgive.

3. EDUCATION. Education means building up, developing character. "Lead us not." How many people have stumbled over these words because they have interpreted them literally in modern English. "Allow us not to enter" would be a better translation. God does not lure us into evil. Here "temptation" means test, trial, examination. You are asking that the Father may not give you too hard a trial, examination or test. Temptation has no evil meaning here; it is not enticement to evil. Such a though is horrible.

"But deliver us from evil." What a beautiful supplication if you understand its depth. All education is to lead us to higher and better things by contrast. You will choose the better or the highest because the lower or the highest because the lower has been revealed as evil.

Then, and soon, comes the time when the narrative, prophetic in character, RUNS AHEAD OF EVENTS, and from that point EVERY REFERENCE IS IN THE FUTURE TENSE.

A photographer may come and take a photo of, for instance, the college building in which I am writing this. Years after, the scientist can come, if he so desires, and by comparing the lines of perspective with the course of the sun he can tell where the photographer stood his camera, at which hour of the day he took the photo, and on what day of the year.

So with the lines of perspective contained in the Isaiah literature. By using scientific means we can tell at which point in history the picture was produced, and from that knowledge there is no escape, except by way of SUBSTITUTING FALLACY FOR FACTS AND TRUTHS.

We pass on to the writings of the triangle of prophets, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. By the methods of science we determine where the prophet dwelt when he made his pronouncies. Jeremiah we soon discover, clothed his prophecies with the garments of JERUSALEM environment. This is ingrained in the narrative, and is patent to every observer. Ezekiel spoke from THE HEART OF THE ISRAEL CAPTIVITY, on THE BANKS OF THE CHEBAR. Daniel breathes and depicts the environment of the city of BABYLON. Thus we are given to see the standpoints from which each of the three contemporaries spoke.

National Labor Reserve

If a permanent cure for unemployment cannot be found, then it seems to me that the unemployed should be provided with a more satisfactory status in the community than they enjoy at present. While my plan does not pretend to eliminate unemployment it does, however, answer the main question when unemployment poses, by changing its nature. This is done without additional cost to the State.

If the Government admits, as it does, the presence in the State for a long time to come of a considerable volume of unemployment, we ought to make the unemployed feel more at home in the State than they are made to feel at present. If one regards the unemployed from the point of view of their normal position in the State, they appear not as an unwanted surplus of labor, to be kept at arm's length by the dole, but as a reserve of labor, to be taken on as soon as the processes of recovery allow. Similarly the pay which they receive appears not as a dole but a reserve pay, comparable with the half-pay which officers in the Services receive when there are waiting for a new appointment. As soon as you have recognized this you have gone a long way to rehabilitate the self-respect of the unemployed in their own eyes and in the eyes of the nation.

To give effect to this change, I would propose the organisation of the unemployed into a body comparable with the British Legion, to be called the National Labor Reserve. This organisation would not be in any sense a military or a disciplinary body—unless you are of the type which regards the Boy Scout movement as a military organisation of sinister purpose. It would be an honor to belong. The members of the National Labor Reserve would be encouraged to join in athletic sports, football matches and so forth, in order to foster esprit de corps among the various branches of the organization. Further, the members would be encouraged to make for themselves, under skilled supervision and at cost price, warm overcoats and thick leather boots to protect them, as a whole, against the hardships of winter. Parallel with the National Labor Reserve existing organisations, such as the Personal Service League, should be developed into an official organisation to mobilize all those supplies of food which, although perfectly wholesome, are discarded daily from restaurants, hotels and other sources.

CATHEDRAL MUSINGS

"My son, the wise are few; for Wisdom very seldom pleases, so that they are few who seek her. Wisdom will compel whoever entertains her to avoid all selfishness and to escape from praise. But Wisdom seeks them who are worthy, discovering some here and there, unstamplified and uncorrupted by cant, with whom thereafter it is a privilege to other men to tread the self-same earth whether or not they know it."—(From the Book of Sayings of Tsiang Sam-dup).

Knowledge is not Wisdom. Knowledge can be acquired, whereas Wisdom must be attained. Wisdom is but one of the many voices by which the God of our hearts speaks to us. In a manner of speaking it is a ray from the Celestial Virgin, the Wisdom Aspect of the Logos, the Divine Sophia. Everything that is on earth has its prototype in the spiritual world. "As above, so below," as in the Macrocosm of the Universe, so in Man, the microcosm. As the cross in Man the microcosm. As the cross so also is the cross set up in the heavens and also in the body of man in the wilderness of this world. Man himself cannot truly conceive of God, needs must he make an image of God according to his thought. He who is cruel and unjust in his heart conceives a cruel unjust God, and he who is kind and loving, conceives a loving God, to every man according to his heart. So that although we may not sit in judgment on our fellow men, yet we can gauge the degree of their unfoldment by the kind of God they have created for themselves.

But when man knows the Christ within himself and enters into the communion of the consciousness of Christ, then does he also enter into a true knowledge of God by the Son of God, and that too, no matter what outward form of religion he may profess. Man is the mystical and holy temple of the Living God; man is Holy City, but man does not KNOW this, until the veil of the temple is rent and he enters into the Holy of Holies. The story of the Master is not only the story of Jesus, but also the mystical story of every man who truly follows in His steps. Truly does Jacob Boehme say that it avails nothing that Christ was born in Bethlehem if He be not born in my heart." The way of the Master is not a thing to admire from a distance, but a Way of Life for all to follow. Until we make a real effort to live the life, all our faith, all our theologies are but empty theories. To know the doctrine we MUST do the work, for sound doctrine is based on experience. To worship God in the person of the Master and at the same time repudiate His teaching is an impossible position which the people deluding themselves, think can be reconciled by an affirmation of faith.

But the fact remains that a repudiation of the teaching is a repudiation of the Master, no matter how we may hypnotize ourselves to the contrary by saying "I believe." Say rather, "I serve God by serving my brethren."

National Message

There are, in the Italian literature, lines of perspective which show inevitably when the literature was produced. Every scientist will agree with this statement, because the facts compel such agreement.

Up to a certain point of time every reference to historic things falls naturally into the past tense. For instance, this reference to ..... "In the year that King Uzziah ..... I saw also the Lord high and lifted up...." That was something which had happened in the past.

Soon we come to a time when the narrative denoted CONTEMPORARY EVENTS. For instance, in it is recorded the day-to-day advance of the Assyrian armies against Israel; and the towns and cities which, one after another, fell under the advancing power, are named and lamented over. The staccato sentences remind one of the daily extras in the opening weeks of the Great War.

Then, and soon, comes the time when the narrative, prophetic in character, RUNS AHEAD OF EVENTS, and from that point EVERY REFERENCE IS IN THE FUTURE TENSE.

A photographer may come and take a photo of, for instance, the college building in which I am writing this. Years after, the scientist can come, if he so desires, and by comparing the lines of perspective with the course of the sun he can tell where the photographer stood his camera, at which hour of the day he took the photo, and on what day of the year.

So with the lines of perspective contained in the Isaiah literature. By using scientific means we can tell at which point in history the picture was produced, and from that knowledge there is no escape, except by way of SUBSTITUTING FALLACY FOR FACTS AND TRUTHS.

We pass on to the writings of the triangle of prophets, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel. By the methods of science we determine where the prophet dwelt when he made his pronouncies. Jeremiah we soon discover, clothed his prophecies with the garments of JERUSALEM environment. This is ingrained in the narrative, and is patent to every observer. Ezekiel spoke from THE HEART OF THE ISRAEL CAPTIVITY, on THE BANKS OF THE CHEBAR. Daniel breathes and depicts the environment of the city of BABYLON. Thus we are given to see the standpoints from which each of the three contemporaries spoke.

The Modern Strad

On his twelve birthday Yehudi Menuhin received as a gift the famous Stradivarius violin known as 'Prince Khevenhueller.'

In an attempt to discover what contributed to the exquisite tone of the 'Strad' Yehudi some time later commissioned Francois, distinguished Parisian violin maker, to duplicate the 'Prince Khevenhueller' if possible.

Piece by piece, and with infinite care, the 'Prince' was taken apart and over a period of four months each tiny piece was scrupulously copied. The finest and oldest maple, pine and ebony were used; every detail, curve, line and spot of the original was recreated; the varnish, eighteen layers deep, was copied in all its shades, variations and lustres.

After two years of labor the task was finished and Yehudi drew the first tones from the 1936 model Stradivarius. His reactions were instantaneous and emphatic.

"It is not a modern fiddle," he exclaimed. "The Tones to-day suggested the Governors-General of the Dominions should be called Viceroys. The term would be "more appropriate nowadays," the paper said in commenting on the departure from England of Sir Patrick Duncan, Governor-General - designate of South Africa, and Lady Duncan.

SUGGESTS "VICEROYS."

LONDON, March 19 (C.P. Cable).—"The Times to-day suggested the Governors-General of the Dominions should be called Viceroys. BRITAIN ASKS QUESTIONS.

LONDON, March 19 (C.P. Cable).—The British Government has ordered inquiries into the presence of Italian troops in Spain. The inquiries are now to be limited to investigations on the spot. British representatives, it is understood, are seeking information in Rome itself.

John's Picture of Trial and Crucifixion — ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON — By the Rev. Alvin Z. Hall And Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—John 18:1-19:42

In the Garden of Gethsemane Jesus met the mob headed by Judas, voluntarily yielding himself but lovingly shielding his disciples. In an ecclesiastical trial, he was convicted of blasphemy for claiming to be God's Son.

Civil trials followed before Herod and Pilate. Pilate made numerous efforts to release Jesus, but without success. Repeatedly he said, "I find no fault in him." He suggested Jesus be released but the people chose Barabbas.

Thinking that scourging Jesus would satisfy Pilate and Jesus scourged, crowned with thorns and mocked. He showed them Jesus' saying, "Behold the man." But then they cried, "Crucify him."

Pilate delivered Jesus to be crucified, and he bore his own cross to Calvary. From the cross he spoke seven times. John records his word to his mother, his shout of victory and his dying prayer.

Distance Is No Barrier

New London in Texas is many miles separated from this district, but there is a bond of world feeling that brings the school disaster of that place close home. The children.

How many are dead is not known accurately, but there may be 500. A great school and a new school collapsed or was blown to pieces by a pocket of gas from neighboring oil fields. At least that is the supposition, and it sounds reasonable as explanations go.

We know of no way in which the heart of a community could be reached more quickly than by the death of so many little folk; no way in which the depth of human misery could be so deeply plumbed.

One needs no stretching of the imagination to feel what parents must have gone through as they walked through the night to churches, dance halls, pool rooms—to any place which had been turned into a morgue—looking and searching among battered and broken little forms for one they might recognise. Despair and hope would battle for supremacy and mothers and fathers would indeed be treading the way through the valley of the shadow of death.

Yes, as miles go, there are many of them set up between New London in Texas and Peterborough and its district, but distance is a barrier which moves easily to one side as the hearts of this district and the whole of Canada go out to the heart-broken parents in that community in Texas.

Simple and Effective

There have been a number of actions against slot machines in the province. There are cities where the machines have been taken from business places and smashed by the police. There have been court cases and judgments and appeals from the judgments.

There are communities in which a sliding scale of fees is charged, decreasing with the number of machines allowed.

The council of the village of Ailsa Craig, a tidy little spot in the north end of Middlesex county, met the other evening, and dealt with the reorganization of the fire department; decided to pay the chief 50 cents an hour and members of the department 25 cents per hour for service at fires and during the hours set apart for training.

Next came the slot machine item, and a motion was put through that there should be no slot machines allowed in Ailsa Craig, and the constable was given instructions to see that this ruling was made effective. Simple and effective, with no court case and no argument.

The Star Man Theorizes

The editor of The Toronto Star has been wandering away from his usual range of subjects to devote three-quarters of a column to a discussion of professional hockey, during the course of which he evolves the interesting theory that after a player has been a few years in the monied ranks he learns to save himself and as a result he fails to shine in the goal-scoring department.

Says the Star:

> A man cannot successfully play professional hockey for more than a certain number of crashes into the boards. He begins taking care of himself. He begins to age. He acquires common sense. He seeks to attain a skill that will save his bones from breaking. He is right, of course, and shows his growing intelligence, but incidentally he makes way at the top of the table for younger fellows who score more goals and assists.

That is an entertaining idea, the only defect being that it is not true. All the Star man needed to do was to have turned over to his own sporting pages and he would have discovered that the list of the seven highest scorers in the N.H.L. contained the name of only one very young player, Apps of the Toronto club, while on the other hand it included four men, Larry Aurie, Marty Barry, Johnny Gagnon and Aurel Joliat, all of whom have been at least ten years in the professional ranks, and Harvey Jackson, whose apprenticeship days are now far behind him.

The truth is that while the seasoned player does absorb wisdom and learns to take care of himself, he also learns how to take full advantage of the breaks that come his way and the result is he is up near the top of the scoring list because he has the skill and technique to cash in on the chances he gets.

She's Never at Home

Amelia Earhart Putnam when this was written, was on her way between Honolulu and Howland Island, a bit of a place in the Pacific just north of the Equator. And she is going to keep on flying until she gets around the world.

She is regarded, and rightly enough, as one of the most daring and capable of world fliers, but as a wife for an average man she would not do at all. She would not stay put. She has a husband and he will have to shift for himself.

The average man would not care for such a wife. When he turned home for a bit of nourishment at noon or plodded along toward evening for the time of victuals it would do him no good to find that his wife was in Honolulu or in Timbuctoo. He'd have to have a map with some thumb tacks to keep track of the woman and then boil himself another egg and make a fresh pot of tea, for that is about as much cooking as average man does.

Or if the neighbors came popping in and asked for the missus the husband might be a bit embarrassed if he had to admit he did not know exactly where she was and was not certain when she would be home. If he imparted the information in the right way there might be quite a lot of sympathetic talk in the block and people referring to him would likely say "poor man."

The flying wife would not be home on wash day, nor on ironing day, nor on baking day nor yet on cleaning day, and she might be absent during the pickling and preserving season. Drat such a woman for a wife!

When Spring Comes

From Belleville comes a report of orioles having been seen, and other indications are quoted to show Spring is on the way. There have been fashion shows and merchants having been advertising Spring goods in the columns of the paper. That season does not rush at one, nor does it come with a bound. It seems that in the arrangement of things it has to get itself free from the grip of Winter. Some one once wrote a few lines about Spring lingering in the lap of Winter and in that lyric way of stating the case there is a degree of truth.

There used to be methods on the Tenth Concession which seemed to be more definite. There was nothing fickle about them and it was not necessary to draw on the imagination or look in the almanac. There was the time for dosing with iron tonic and with sulphur and molasses. That season came with precision. One might look out the kitchen window and see a snow drift in the lane, but the tonic and the sulphur and molasses said plainly spring had arrived. And there was generally a refilling of the little bags of camphor which used to be tied around the neck of the smaller folk. It was all part and parcel of the annual campaign against disease, and a token of preparedness against plague or pestilence or even a mild spell of ailing. And when these things came to pass it was spring. It might not look like spring or feel like spring, but it was spring. And when one had taken so much sulphur and molasses that it was possible to shake the socks over the hot kitchen range and see the sulphur sparkle, then for sure it was spring indeed.

There was something else, and perhaps it was more subtle. The hen house was just across the way from the drive shed on the way out to the barn, only the drive shed got the sun first and had it longer during the day. When the doors were open there was a spot where the speckled hens used to line up about this time of year. It was warmer and more comfortable than just standing around in the hen house all the time. And right there was the spot where the hens first dusted in the spring. And when a speckled hen was seen dusting just inside the drive shed it was something to talk about at the supper table. It was spring, and we believe there was more finality about that than anything else that happened on the Tenth. It came a little ahead of the days and evenings when the frogs croaked and about the same time when it was considered all right for the little folk to start off for school in the morning without a scarf around the neck.

Should Look Like a Prison

Judge James Madden has turned in his report on the investigation made at Guelph Reformatory following the riots. He lost no time in getting down to business and saying exactly what he thought was wrong. Apart from internal management and discipline, which he did not find good or sufficient, Judge Madden had opportunity to examine scores of witnesses at Guelph and apparently he found nothing in landscaping of premises which was producing a change in the outlook of the inmates of the place. His report speaks in terms of more grimness in surroundings, more steel cells instead of large dormitories, revolvers and rifles and greater supplies of tear gas. Possibly there are a number of people who will think differently, but it is well to admit that Judge Madden has been taking evidence there for a number of weeks and is in a position to draw well-grounded conclusions.

IMPOSSIBLE

(By A. B. K.)

If I got a catalogue today, the thing is printed bright and gay, it has to do with seed; and on the little plot I own, I find with ease there can be grown, most everything I need.

¶ I saw tomatoes in that book, I turned back there ten times to look, for they were very great; I figured that just one of them, would feed up seven hungry men, and leave more on the plate.

¶ I never had such luck as that, my record always turned out flat, and it was none too good; green worms with horns attacked my stuff. I had to fight them rather rough and whack them when I could.

¶ And then I tried to train the things, and make them grow around on strings, but green was all I got; when they looked how they might get ripe, they turned into a feed of tripe, and then began to rot.

¶ And so I read that catalogue, it left me in a mental fog, it shows no bugs at all; it takes my imagination so, to think such goodly things will grow—I can't believe it all.

LET CHILDREN VOTE.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

THE Ontario Legislature is divided over a provincial floral emblem. We like the suggestion of Hon. George S. Henry that the question be settled by referring it to the school children of the province. A referendum of the pupils in the schools should not be difficult to take nor entail any great cost. It would give the pupils a feeling that they are worthy of being consulted and would have its educational features as well.

Some Farmers Have No Wheat.

(From Parliamentary Debates, March 17.)

Mr. T. F. DONNELLY (Wood Mountain): For the last five or six years there has been a debate each session with regard to the marketing of wheat, and this year is no exception. The question arose back in 1929, when the pools got into financial difficulties and applied to the dominion government for assistance. At that time the pools were condemned for their policies with regard to wheat. I was then a member of this house, and I listened to many hon. gentlemen of the Conservative party expressing their objection to the policy of holding wheat. What was true as regards the pools applied also to every marketing facility employed in western Canada. The banks, those operating the ordinary marketing facilities, and many others, held wheat believing that the price would go up. In 1930 the pools, however, found themselves in such financial difficulties that they asked the then prime minister, the present leader of the opposition (Mr. Bennett) to assist them. Assistance was given.

Mr. BENNETT: The provinces assisted them, I believe.

Mr. DONNELLY: Yes, at first, but afterwards the federal government gave them help.

Mr. BENNETT: Not financially.

Mr. DONNELLY: Well, it assisted them to the extent that a man was put in charge, somewhat in the capacity of a receiver, to try to market their wheat. About 77,000,000 bushels were taken over by this official with the idea of selling it. From year to years we tried to get information as to what disposal was being made of this wheat, whether it was being sold or not, but we had a great deal of difficulty in finding out what was being done. At last it was disclosed that this man, who was supposed to be selling these 77,000,000 bushels, was also buying wheat, and by so doing was supposed to be stabilizing the market. On December 6, 1935, after the Liberal government came into office and a new board was appointed, we found that there were 178,000,000 bushels of wheat in the hands of the board or of John T. McFarland. The policy of the former government as carried out by Mr. McFarland was apparently to set a price for wheat and make the world pay that price whether buyers were willing to do so or not. The result was that year by year our surplus grew, and with every month and year that passed we were losing our markets.

Take the 1932 crop. There was sold at the time, under the Conservative government, 264,000,000 bushels. The next year, 1933, we sold 194,000,000 bushels, and in 1934, 165,000,000 bushels. This shows the extent to which year by year we were losing our markets. After the election of 1935 the Liberal government came into power, with a new policy. As I understood that policy and propounded it from the platform, we were to set a reasonable price which the farmers were to receive, and were to sell at the world price; that is, we were to compete with other nations in the marketing of wheat, to try to hold such markets as we had and get back those we had lost. Following out that policy, under the new wheat board, with James Murray at the head, we immediately began to regain what we had lost. To such an extent was that true that in the years following the appointment of the new board, whereas in 1934 we had sold only 165,000,000 bushels, in 1935 we disposed of 254,000,000 bushels. Take for instance our greatest market, that of Great Britain, where we had been rapidly losing ground. We exported to Britain, of the 1932 crop, 113,000,000 bushels; of the 1933 crop, 80,000,000 bushels; of the 1934 crop, 75,000,000 bushels, but in 1935, under the new board, we sold, 106,000,000 bushels. Under the policies of the Liberal party, week by week and month by month our hold-over diminished and our prices increased. We made it clear that we were growing wheat in order to sell it, that we would clear out our bins and get rid of the accumulation, and that is just what happened.

I have listened for some time to the theories propounded by hon. members on the left. I believe that some of those who belong to the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation have a new policy; I hear the hon. member for Rosetown-Biggar (Mr. Coldwell) and Weyburn (Mr. Douglas) arguing that farmers should get the cost of production plus a reasonable profit. When I hear this talk about cost of production plus a reasonable profit, I begin to wonder what that is. I live in a district where for eight years farmers have had no crops. How much will it cost them to produce a bushel of wheat? Are you going to pay them cost of production where they have produced nothing for eight years?

In my opinion what the farmer in western Canada expects is a reasonable price. It is all very well to talk about cost of production; they are nice words to roll under the tongue; but to carry it into practice is a different thing. I can take you to my own constituency and show you two farmers, a barbed wire fence separating their farms, one of whom had ten bushels of wheat for the year and the other not a bushel. Are you going to give each of them cost of production? Where will you set the price? It absolutely cannot be done. This sort of thing is ridiculous; it is merely something to talk about.

Mr. DONNELLY: No. It cannot be done. What we should talk about is a reasonable price for the farmer, a price that would enable him to make a living. But we find people talking about a higher price.

Mr. QUELCH: Will the hon. member define reasonable price? What is a reasonable price?

Mr. DONNELLY: Some people fancy that 87½ cents is a reasonable price. Personally I do not know how they arrived at that precise figure; I have often wondered how they got the half cent. I thing it should be a round figure, 90 or 85. Perhaps the leader of the opposition will tell us how the 87½ cents is arrived at. I have grown wheat for many years at 87½ cents and made good money, and I have grown wheat at 85 and 80 and done very well.

Mr. BENNETT: I suppose one of those farms was a Liberal and the other a Conservative.

Mr. DONNELLY: Those were the farms one of which I wanted to give you and which you would not take.

Mr. BENNETT: I suspect the farm you wanted to give me had no bushels.

Mr. DONNELLY: I hear a good many people saying they want a higher price. I was one of those who last fall talked about what should be done in regard to wheat, and I maintain that the fixing of a higher price is absolutely wrong. I will show you why. It is the very policy that broke the pool; it is the very policy on which the Conservative government got in wrong, by setting a price that was too high.

Mr. BENNETT: It broke us, too.

Mr. DONNELLY: Yes, that is right, I repeat, it is absolutely wrong. A reasonable price is the thing to expect, and I figure that the price we have here is reasonable. Many pool officials went throughout the country and I met them on the platform and talked with them, and I can say that the policy that broke them was the setting of a price above the world price when they knew that they could not get it. That is what broke them. In my opinion the price should have been left at 87½ cents; it should not have been raised above that figure.

THE VILLAGE SMITHY.

(Kitchener Record)

THE anvil chorus may be growing fainter throughout the country but as long as there are horses to be shod the blacksmith will find work to do. An automobile in front of a service station is a more common sight these days than a team standing more or less patiently in the smithy, but in smaller centres the blacksmith is still a person of importance.

One enterprising blacksmith has deserted his forge and anvil "under the spreading chestnut tree" and now travels from farm to farm in an automobile. He carries his necessary equipment with him. This fusion of the ancient and the modern is evidently satisfactory all round and the veteran worker finds that he has posted a condition that might have proved disastrous to his special trade.

The horse still holds an important position in Waterloo county. Many of the Mennonite farmers still employ faithful Dobbin in place of more modern means of tilling the land. In consequence the blacksmith fills a real need in community life and in some villages who two of the craft manage to make a good living. The smithy is a cheerful place and we should be sorry to see the trade eclipsed by modern ways of living. Mechanical transportation has to some extent ousted the old-time occupation but it will be a long time before an honored institution has entirely disappeared. Horses must have shoes and the combination involves strength, skill, and kindness. Where can we find this except in the expert smithy who has been trained for the job? Echo answers "Where?"

DRAWING THE LINE.

(Vincent Sheehan in Cosmopolitan)

THERE is a sound prejudice among right-minded people against admitting a love of money. It is supposed to be the train of the wicked miser, the slothful banker, the grasping landlord and the villian in the detective story. We ought to be above such characteristics (or at least above such admissions), according to the best opinion now going. We should turn our minds to higher and better things.

Maybe so. But in answer to the question, "What interests you most in the world?" I should say, without a doubt, money. Not, perhaps, money as a theoretical science—although that, too, is fascinating—but the use of money as an instrument of life, money as a practical daily problem. What will you do for money? What will you not do for money? How much money do you think you need? Where is it going to come from, anyhow? In short—in the slang phrase—what are you going to use for money?

What, exactly, would you do for money? Will you steal? Lie? Cheat at cards? Practically everybody would make an indignant reply to such queries; and yet men of high repute cheat the tax collector, and women of unimpeachable virtue tell lies and defraud the customs inspectors at the port of New York.

Obviously the question is not simple. It involves the drawing of a line—which, as is well known, is the most difficult of all operations to the human intellect.

MEN AND WOMEN.

(Lindsay Post)

A MAN distinguishes himself by groping in his pocket for the front door key while still half a block away, while if the woman has the key in her purse she will wait until she is safely on the verandah before starting to search for it.

When a man is being introduced to an audience by a flowery and flattering master of ceremonies, he will twiddle his thumbs, run his adam's apple up and down his neck a few times, yank on his collar and generally squirm about on his chair. A woman regardless of the heights of oratory reached in the introduction has the power to remain calm and serene.

When returning the first visit to a new home, the woman will have noted at least 26 things regarding the get-up of the place, while the man will scarcely be able to recall whether he was entertained in the drawing room or the kitchen.

THE SOO'S WOLVES.

(Sault Ste. Marie Star)

IS IT an odd thing to say that a community of 24,000 hates to admit just how much it will miss the old pack, that never offered to do anybody any harm. So everybody echoes the little girl's question. "Did they have to shoot them,—or as Mae Barney?" The Soo hates to think of the fate of its old friends,—a pack of wolves.

Eggs Down To .20 Butter 26-28 Cents

Eggs sold at 17 to 20 cents a dozen in the largest offering of the season on the Farmers' Market today. Such was the supply that farmers had little hope of any immediate rise in the price to match the rising costs of chicken mash.

Chickens were 16 to 20 cents a pound and butter sold at 26 to 28 cents.

The price of potatoes remained firm at 42 to 42.25 a bag. Beef cuts were 9 and 11 cents and pork 11 and 12 cents. The supply of apples seemed undiminished at prices from 25 to 35 cents a peck. Honey was 13 cents and 9 cents a pound for the light and dark varieties.

"Why not convict Meighen right now without the trouble of setting up this legislative formality," Mr. Maccaulay asked. He said the Premier had spread charges affecting 50 men since he took office.

"Name some," Mr. Hepburn challenged.

"Another."

"Down in Grenville by-election some years ago. I remember you saying you thought Howard Ferguson should have been in jail long ago," was Mr. Macaulay's answer.

"I think he was lucky at that—considering the money recovered from timber concessions he granted," said the Premier.

OBITUARY

PROF. L. B. STEWART

Louis B. Stewart, professor emeritus of Surveying and Geodesy at the University of Toronto, died on Thursday after a brilliant career in his profession. With his father, a noted surveyor, he laid out Banff National Park. Mount Stewart and Stewart Canyon were named after him. For thirty years he was professor of Surveying and Geodesy at the University of Toronto, and prior to that he was for years a lecturer. Prof. Stewart was a son of the late George Alexander Stewart, and is descended from Hon. T. A. Stewart; one of the pioneers of Peterborough. The old Stewart home was north of the Auburn mills, fronting on the Otonabee River.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

Unexpected weakness at Liverpool coupled with absence of export support caused wheat prices to slump 2¼ to 2¾ cents on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange.

Values surged from the opening with liberal profit-taking and general liquidation by nervous holders. Stop-loss selling developed. News from Argentina that the Government there would restrict export of wheat was said by a high official to be unfounded, and this was a major bearish factor along with reports of rain in some sections of the United States winter wheat belt.

Liverpool closed 1d to 1¼d lower, being influenced by larger southern hemisphere wheat and flour shipments, together with let-up in continental and United Kingdom demand for wheat.

The Buenos Aires market was on holiday. Argentine wheat shipments for the week totalled 8,643,000 bushels, compared with 7,238,000 a week ago, and 1,028,000 last year. Australia cleared 3,430,000 bushels of wheat last week, and 2,516,000 the week before.

Coarse grain dealings, including selling of rye credited to Chicago firms. Nearly all commodities followed the action of wheat.

KING SUGGESTS MORE FREQUENT TALKS WITH U.S.

Recent Exchange With Roosevelt Valuable—But No Commitments

FIT AFTER HOLIDAY

MONTREAL, March 20.—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King, after a visit with President Roosevelt and holiday in the south, came back to Canada to-day expressing belief there should be more interchanges of views between the heads of governments in Canada and the United States.

Declaring he considered his talks with Mr. Roosevelt had been "valuable," the Canadian Prime Minister said he looked for more conversations of this kind. "I had long hoped," he said, "that we could have more of these exchanges."

Mr. King, looking fit and rested and asserting himself eager to get back to the seat of government, left for Ottawa after only a few minutes in Montreal. He had come here by way of New York from Virginia Beach, Va., where he spent the last week or so holidaying by the sea.

Though he declined to go into detail on the outcome of his talks with the U. S. president Mr. King discussed them informally and generally with newspapermen. Their discussions, he said, had touched on the St. Lawrence waterway and other questions of mutual interest to the two countries, on the European situation and on neutrality.

Nothing Tied Down.

"All in a general way," he emphasized, declaring no commitments had been undertaken on behalf of either Canada or the United States. "There was nothing that committed anybody to anything," he said.

The Prime Minister said he had obtained much "background" in his talks, though he declined to say how, specifically, he intended to use it. Asked if it was preparatory to anything, perhaps the forthcoming Imperial conference in London, he merely smiled and said, "preparatory to nothing."

In Washington, the Prime Minister said, he found the "friendliest possible feeling toward Great Britain and, of course, Canada." He predicted a fine welcome there for Lord Tweedsmuir on the Governor-General's impending visit to the White House, in return for President Roosevelt's visit to him at Quebec last summer.

IRISH NUMBERS FEATURE PROGRAM

March Meeting Of Percy Women's Institute Is Enjoyable Event

WARKWORTH, March 20.— Over [illegible] members and friends were present at the March meeting of the Percy Women's Institute which was held on Wednesday afternoon in the community hall and was largely attended.

The secretary, Mrs. David Massey, read the roll call, which was heartily responded to by an Irish joke or story which proved very humorous.

Communications were received as follows:

Letters from members and friends were read, showing their appreciation of flowers and treats sent them during their illness in hospital and at home. A letter from the Health League of Canada, organized by Social Hygiene Council, requesting subscribers to their health magazine. No action was taken.

The members donated $5.00 to buy dishes for a friend who lost practically all her kitchen dishes by fire recently.

Mrs. George Partridge, as convenor of the program, which was in keeping with St. Patrick's Day, was as follows:

Community singing of Irish songs by all the members.

Reading, entitled "The Mother Back in Ireland," by Mrs. Joe Greenly.

Miss Maud Cooper contributed several Irish selections on the violin which were much enjoyed.

Mrs. Peter Jones gave a short reading on "The Flu."

The paper on "The Agriculture in Ireland" prepared by Mrs. Harry Beawetherick who through illness was unable to be present, was given by Mrs Blanche Baker and was very interesting and educational.

The shawl parade was very pretty and the history of them was very interesting.

The April meeting will be in the Community Hall and will be marked by the election of officers for 1937.

to show she was not hurt, and shouted to army officers.

Carrying 500 Gallons Gas.

She was attempting a daylight takeoff for Howland Island after receiving reports there was cloudy weather as far as 200 miles south of here, and favorable weather thence to Howland.

The plane was loaded with between 800 and 900 gallons of gasoline.

She explained the accident was caused by a tire blow-out and remarked "no one is hurt. Only our spirits are bruised."

Miss Earhart said: "This means postponement of my world trip, but not cancellation."

She announced the plane probably would be sent back to the factory for repairs.

Doing 50 Miles An Hour.

"We were going about 50 miles an hour when the right tire blew out," she said. "I cut the switches." A bright yellow jet which adorned her neck at the start had disappeared but she was unruffled otherwise.

Noonan and Manning returned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Holmes.

Paul Mantz, Miss Earhart's technical adviser, remained at the field to survey the damage. He had accompanied her on the record-breaking hop from Oakland, but had left the plane here.

Mantz found that in addition to the smashed undercarriage and twisted propellers and wing, both the motor mount and stabilizer were bent.

Mantz estimated repairs would take about two weeks at the factory, but four months if done here.

The plane was nearly out of sight of spectators when it crashed. Miss Earhart had taxied it to the far end of the runway in the dim morning light and then started to speed back for the take-off when the tire burst.

C. G. E. STARTING GROUP INSURANCE FOR EMPLOYEES

may apply for $500 additional insurance.

Class B. Annual wages or salary $1,200, but less than $1,800, additional insurance $1,000.

Class C. Annual wages or salary $1,800 and over, additional insurance $2,000.

Cost of Insurance.

The monthly rate of contributions for each $1,000 of additional insurance is as follows:

Age 30 and under, 60 cents; age 31 to 40 inclusive, 75 cents a month; age 41 to 50 inclusive, 90 cents a month; age 51 to 55 inclusive, $1.05 a month; and age 56 years and over, $1.20 a month.

As an example of the operation of the C.G.E. group insurance, an employee who has been five years in continuous employ, and whose wage or salary is less than $1,200, is entitled to $1,000 free insurance on condition that he applies for $500 additional insurance which costs him 30 cents a month.

In other words, and as illustrating the essentially liberal feature of this plan, such an employee is enabled to provide for his family $2,000 insurance at a cost of 30 cents a month. Of that amount he pays for $500, and the company pays for $1,500.

A man of 40 years of age, with the company five years, gets $1,200 free insurance, and he is in the category of wages or salary of $1,200 but less than $1,800" he applies for $1,000 additional insurance costing him 75 cents a month. The provision for his beneficiaries is $2,200 costing him 75 cents a month. He pays for $1,000 himself, and the company contributes $1,200.

A man of 45 years of age and five years with the company receives $1,000 free insurance, and if he is in the highest wage class of $1,800 and over he is suggested to apply for $2,000 additional insurance which costs him $1.80 a month, that is 90 cents per $1,000. The insurance for this employee's dependents amounts to $3,000, at a cost to him of $1.80 a month.

The employee with no dependents gets $150 free insurance and if he is in the $1,200 wage class, he is required to take out $900 additional insurance. His total is $650, for which he pays 30 cents a month. By this group insurance plan, an extension of the service of the General Electric Company, the emphasis is placed on protection for families of employees.

Just another example. An employee of 26 years of age or younger receives $1,000 free insurance. If he is in the wage class from $1,200 to less than $1,800, the amount of additional insurance is $1,500, costing 60 cents a month. His insurance would total $2,000, costing him only 60 cents a month. All these details of individual cases are explained in the pamphlet which is being distributed among employees in order that their reaction may be obtained as early as possible.

No Medical Examination.

The plan is offered without medical examination. Death benefits are paid regardless of cause. It is a group term insurance issued for one year at a time, and has no cash surrender or loan values.

It has been designed primarily to provide protection for the families' employees at a low scale of cost to the employees.

heat radiation being by means of a contrivance similar to the radiator of a central steam heating plant but not supplied with steam from outside.

Gas in the Building.

Dr. Schoch said, after a preliminary investigation last night, there was no doubt gas had been in the building, and that the blast came either from the basement or from the walls. He called the cells of the "excellent gas chambers."

"It's simple," he went on. "The walls were filled with gas that had no other exit.

"The condition of the bodies of those children bears that out. They were blown to death—not burned to death."

Superintendent W. C. Shaw, who lost his son in the tragedy, was assured by Superintendent O. O. Pollard of Henderson, 14 miles distant, all New London pupils between the Fifth and Eleventh Grades "would be welcome to attend the Henderson School without charge."

RECEIVES $7,593.40 FOR $5,000 POLICY

Since The Mutual Life was first organized 67 years ago, in addition to providing protection, over $65,000,000 has been paid to policyholders in dividends alone.

It is results such as these that have earned for The Mutual Life of Canada the name of "The Policyholders' Company." The policyholders have always owned the Company and all the surplus earnings. The policyholders' interests have been first and foremost. Security of principal, good returns to policyholders and prompt payment of all claims have characterized the Company's activities.

SHAMROCK NIGHT SCORES SUCCESS

St. Patrick's Day Program By Catholic Women's League Is Enjoyable

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 19.—The inclement weather of St. Patrick's Day failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the group of ambitious workers connected with the Hastings' Catholic Women's League when they held a Shamrock Night on March 17. A good crowd was present and enjoyed a real treat in the form of a progressive euchre followed by a delightful program, jolly social intercourse and the service of refreshments.

Eighteen tables of euchre were played and at the close of the series the high score for the ladies was won by Mrs. James Cadberry who received as the prize a beautiful box of bath salts. The high score for the men was won by Mr. Alphonsus Sullivan who received a flashlight. A magazine rack was presented to Miss Mary Walsh of Asphodel as a door prize.

The delightful miscellaneous Irish program opened with a drill by the Separate school girls, wearing midy suits and carrying shamrocks, the emblem of Ireland. Six girls, Misses Marjorie Wilkins, Bernadine LeClaire, Marcella Sullivan, Mary MacDonald, Helen Coughlan and Lor Collins, dressed in appropriate Irish costumes, won heartiest applause as they took part in a pretty dance. Francis and Dick Walsh, the twin sons of Mr. Frank Walsh, proved favorites as they step-danced to the tunes played by Mr. James Cavanagh. Solos were given by Mrs. F. Daly, Mrs. H. Wilkins and Jack Hennessy. Mr. Jack Hennessy played the piano and Mr. James Cavanagh the violin before the serving of the lunch.

1937 is HOME Improvement YEAR

The Year For Putting Men Back to Work

Home Loan Money Is Cheapest Only 3.25 Per Cent Discount

Discount Means Your Interest Is Paid At The Outset And Then No More

REST IS PRINCIPAL

Loans obtained from the banks under the provisions of the Home Improvement Plan cost the borrower 3.25 per cent. discount, and NOT ANOTHER CENT.

Bankers report that there is still some hashem about this feature of the H.I.P. financing so, just another few words of explanation.

You can borrow any amount from $50 to $2,000 repayable in monthly or other periodic instalments over a period up to three years.

Suppose that you feel you can undertake an obligation to repay $100, using that sum for a convenient example, you call on the manager of a bank and naturally explain to him what you want. Assuming that you are the kind of citizen who pays his instalments when they are due, that you are a good risk and worthy of credit, you will receive $96.75.

First and Only Charge

You have thereby paid the discount of $3.25, and that is the first and only charge that is placed upon you loan. Discount in this case means that you have paid your interest at the beginning. The monthly instalments represent payment on the principal.

You pay your monthly instalments; in the meantime you pay the man who does your work for you; and when you have paid back to the bank the sum of $100 you are all square with everybody.

If you want to borrow more than $100, say $500, the discount is at the same rate. You can figure it out for yourself. But, in any case you pay the discount when you get the loan, and that ends your interest payments. Your monthly instalments are simply a regular method of paying off the principal.

And no security is required to be pledged by an endorser or otherwise.

Suppose your loan is $100 for twelve months. Your monthly payment at the bank is $8.34. Some critics often might say that you are losing the interest which possibly you might get on these monthly payments if they were put to some other use.

By way of answering that point if it were raised, ask yourself how you could place the small sums of a few hundred dollars, in monthly payment so that they would earn you anything. It would be possible on larger amounts beyond the $1,000 or $2,000 levels; but otherwise the consideration is too trifling for reckoning.

Cheapest Offered

The fact is that the bank credit extended to you by the Home Improvement Plan is the cheapest money offered to people anywhere for this kind of service. And there is no service charge.

It is cheaper money than the United States provided for its people under the federal housing scheme.

It has been asserted that on a mathematical basis the interest charge is 6.32 per cent., a very reasonable rate and still lower than the United States charge for the same kind of service.

But, why bother about the mathematical angle? Look at it from the practical angle and you know that when you have paid the discount in the first place, that is the last money you pay your bank for a Home Improvement Loan, except the regular periodic payments of the principal.

MAKING HOMES FOR CHILDREN

Attractive Decorations In Boys' And Girls' Rooms Pay Dividends

AID FOR HAPPINESS

Wise men in the building field have learned that it is good sales psychology to recognize the fact that the boy must have a place in the home, and so must his sister. Little folk are very important, and negotiations for the purchase of a house are known to have been ended when the junior of the family has expressed displeasure at lack of provision for his diversions and hobbies.

This interesting angle of sales psychology has not escaped some builders. They long have recognized the fact that young people must have a place in the home and that the builder should see that they have it from the outset rather than let nooks be developed later.

The story is told of one builder who has studied the eccentricities of the boy and the girl. They have ideas about where their rooms should be located and he has planned his houses so that these notions are respected. He has gone farther than this. He has had prepared a number of frames to fit closely against the walls of rooms set aside for junior folks. On these he has draped wall coverings. For instance, on the frames selected for the young girl's room may be hung pastel-tinted materials, or it may be a floral design or some other decoration, depending on the architectural character of the house. The materials—tapestry or wall paper are quickly adjusted to the frames which makes it possible for the decorative scheme of the room to be changed several times within as many minutes.

In the boys' rooms he has hung scenes showing ancient frigates sloughing before the wind; a hunting scene; a glen with a babbling brook, or water sports. The story, whatever it may be, is carried around the four sides of the rooms.

The builder has learned that boys like ships and compasses and things of that sort. For this reason he usually shows the ancient ships of war, booming along under straining canvas. The covering on the floor shows a compass which he has made sure is correctly oriented. This invariably makes a lasting impression on the boy. He is keenly interested in the fact that the entrance to his room is directly north. These little things, minor after all, the builder admits have won buyers for his houses. He has discovered that parents are eager to have their children happy in their home. It also has been found that decorations planned for the juniors of the family interest greatly the adults.

Generous And Enthusiastic Support Being Given Home Improvement Plan

OTTAWA, Ont., March 20.—Appreciation of the generous and enthusiastic support which Canadian newspapers and magazines from coast to coast are giving the Home Improvement Plan was voiced at a meeting of the National Employment Commission here.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Arthur B. Purvis, Commission Chairman, said the helpful attitude of newspaper and magazines had been the subject of favourable comment generally by Commission members.

"As a result of the generous and public-spirited support of magazines and newspapers, the plan is becoming known widely and favourably," said Mr. Purvis. "Its advantages are being placed before the public in an attractive and helpful way. Remarkable cleverness and ingenuity has been shown by newspaper and magazines in publicizing the Plan. The net result should be an important speeding up of building and consequent increase in employment as spring opens up. The Commission appreciates greatly the co-operative spirit in evidence everywhere."

1937 Is HOME Improvement YEAR

The Year For Putting Men Back to Work

TWO DISTRICT ELECTRICIANS COMB COUNTRY

No "Sit-Down" Policy Of Waiting For Business To Come To Them

TACKLE HANDICAPS

Try To Get Power Users On Roads Lacking Power Lines

Canvassing householders for home improvement jobs proved to be one of the most effective means by which building tradesmen in the United States rolled up the huge total of more than a billion dollars of new business under their federal improvement plan.

In Peterborough and generally throughout Ontario the attitude of building tradesmen follows the staid and conservative old custom of waiting for business to come to them. They don't see that the aggressive method of going after building business is too radical but it just hasn't been done, and there is a reluctance to adopt the new policy which the building industry across the border recognizes as opening up a new and vastly brighter future for every one of its many branches.

Two District Salesmen

If most of the building tradesmen in the city are hesitant about the house to house canvass plan, or in its more limited scope of selected houses, two rather striking exceptions were discovered by The Examiner Friday morning. And possibly there may be a little inspiration in that observation.

Two electrician' trucks were drawn up in front of the Peterborough Utilities Commission office on Aylmer street. One was from Gore's Landing and the other from Keene. Obviously it would be expected that there wasn't much electrical work for tradesmen in those small communities at the west and east end of Rice Lake, and "the sit down" policy of waiting for business to come of its own accord probably wouldn't pay the rent or taxes, to say nothing of all the other ordinary household overhead.

Quest for Business

An enquiry by The Examiner brought out the fact that both these district electricians had been trying to drum up new business in their separate localities and they had gone fairly far afield in the country, many miles from their homes. One of the men turned in about twenty applications for electrical services and just as an evidence of the spirit of these tradesmen it was said that they had little assurance that immediate work would result from their efforts.

When they start out for electrical business they face the handicap of the lack of power lines in the country. They have to bring in enough applications from farmers and others to warrant the construction of new main lines. There must be a concentration of prospective power business to warrant the Hydro or the Utilities Commission building new power lines.

In the city and also in the villages of the district every street has its power-distribution line; and most of the houses are connected, no doubt, by this time. But, in the country there is all the spade work to be done of persuading farmers to apply for electrical service, with the possibility that this detail of canvassing may fail because the number of rural applicants on one road or other is not up to the required percentage that would make the venture profitable to the power selling agencies.

But, the moral is plain. The Keene and Gore's Landing electricians realize that they have to go out after new work. They have no local associations to spur them on; just the sheer need of finding work for themselves in rural fields where potential customers are comparatively far apart, and opportunity has to be stimulated and stirred into liveliness; in short, where the "sit down" policy wouldn't have a chance of setting business.

Recreation Room Is Rapidly Becoming Part Of Any Home

Creating Of Such Rooms Permissable Under Home Loan Plan

PANELED WALLS

A recreation room is rapidly becoming an accepted part of many homes. Basement attic or the main part of the house provides space that may be converted to this use. Plans of new homes frequently provide for such a room.

Many people believe that this is one place where their imagination may run riot and gay and amusing rooms result. However, some rooms of this type maintain an air of dignity and permanence, and offer merely comfortable settings for games and hobbies, instead of theatrical backgrounds.

In modernizing your home through funds obtained from the bank under the Home Improvement Plan, bear in mind that creating recreation rooms is permissable under the Plan. One home-owner combined the old and the new as a restful setting for the family's leisure hours.

Paneled walls always add charm to a room and are particularly adaptable to a game room. In many cases, however, this paneling is not convenient to install, but the effect may be obtained successfully through the use of wallpaper. Various companies are placing papers on the market with designs depicting the natural grain of the wood. Walnut, white pine, mahogany and other woods are represented.

What One Man Did.

This was the means taken by a home-owner who wanted a room for recreation that would be in keeping with the rest of his house. Wallpaper in a pine paneling pattern was used. The outside wall of the room had originally had one small window. To add light and air, three windows were built together, giving the effect of a bay and adding to the appearance of the apartment.

The home-owner used her own funds to purchase comfortable, ultra-modern furniture. A beige carpet was used for covering the floor and bright shades of chartreuse and orange were stressed in the decorating. Glass-top tables removed the worry of floor coverings. Indirect lighting fixtures were placed at either side of the medicine cabinet, affording adequate light for make up or shaving. Two nearby outlets provided current for curling irons or other equipment.

Waterproof curtains were purchased for the window and shower. An orange chenille rug with brown and white tones covered the floor and yellow towels with brown and white stripes hung from the glass towel rack.

Funds for remodeling bathrooms may be obtained from any bank under the Home Improvement Plan, which is now being sponsored by the Dominion Government.

Eleven million tons of coal a year is the production aim of the five-year plan just launched by a coal company in Manchuria.

MAKING BATHROOM HOUSEHOLD PRIDE

Walls Can Be Tiled Little More Than Half-Way Up

Through modernization, a small square bathroom became a colourful place and the pride of the household. Walls were tiled a little more than half way up. White tile was used with a wide black border at the top. Washable paper covered the remainder with a design of turquoise, yellow orange and brown. Black linoleum was used as floor covering.

Indirect lighting fixtures were

RAIL VERDICT DELAYED.

MONTREAL, March 20 (CP). — Missing strike ballots to-day kept the general conference committee of railwaymen from reaching a verdict on the question of a general walkout of Canadian railroad labor.

With the opinions of some of the estimated 117,000 workers still to be received, their delegates at a momentous strike deliberation meeting held off definite action on the proposal to paralyze Canada's railway transport unless the railways fall into line on wage increases.

FLOOR GIVES WAY

Irish Auction Sale Comes to a Sudden Stop

PULAHEENY, County Sligo, Irish Free State, March 20—(CP)—The auctioneer did not have a chance to say, "Going, going, gone," at a sale of furniture here.

With some 100 people attending, he was about to start the auction when the floor gave way. He was thrown from the rostrum and people and furniture fell to the floor below. No one was hurt.

Goats tethered beside the 10,000 miles of irrigation ditches of New South Wales are expected to save the taxpayers $250,000 a year by clearing up the weeds which grow in the channels and prevent the proper flow of water.

TELEPHONE NOOK

In almost every house there is some place under a stair or off the coat closet or beside a chimney where a telephone niche can be installed. Below this niche there may be a space with perpendicular divisions for telephone books. Somewhere in a convenient spot in the niche should be a pad and pencil for memoranda.

TWO SPECIAL WINDOWS

Bedroom window units now come designed with outside hoods, to keep the occasional shower from beating in when the upper sash is left open. It is also possible to buy special windows for growing plants. These come in the form of small bays, with overhead lights of opaque glass. They are provided with radiator heat, and a small louvred opening through the wall under the plant bench for ventilation.

W.C.T.U. Members Honor Their President.

Mrs. Harold Rehill of Dalhousie street lent her pretty home on Friday afternoon for the first of the Spring Rallies sponsored by the W. C.T.U. There was a gratifying attendance for this special meeting which had a duel purpose, in honoring the president of the local branch, Mrs. G. K. Tyler, who is leaving shortly for Woodstock, where the Rev. Mr. Tyler has accepted charge of the Baptist Church; also in increasing membership in the society.

The rooms and tea table were daintily decorated in St. Patrick's colors and the Irish note was also introduced in various items in the program, presented by W.C.T.U. members. The opening devotions were presided over by Mrs. Tyler, and a sing-song of favorite temperance hymns was much enjoyed, with guitar accompaniments played by Mrs. George Robinson, who also contributed a delightful vocal solo, "Have Courage". Mrs. L. Eastwood read the Scripture lesson from the Gospel according to St. Matthew, and Mrs. J. Fairbrother led in prayer.

Musical numbers interspersed the appropriate readings contributed by Mrs. Boorman, who gave a very realistic version of "The Quarrel" and Mrs. G. H. Rowe with her fine rendering of "Mary Mahone."

A pleasing, yet sad feature of the afternoon was a farewell address and gift to the president, Mrs. Tyler from the members of her union, upon the eve of her departure from them. Mrs. B. W. Manning read the address of loving appreciation while the gift, a beautiful leather-bound copy of the Baptist hymnary, with illuminated frontispiece was presented by Mrs. A. J. Throop, the county W.C.T.U. president.

In expressing her thanks, Mrs. Tyler assured the ladies of the pleasure it had been to work with a group in such harmony as existed in the Peterborough W.C.T.U. and that the regret at parting was mutual. Dainty refreshments were served by an efficient committee, with Mrs. E. E. Lord as convenor and a social half-hour was enjoyed.

The sincere appreciation of the visiting ladies was expressed by Mrs. H. F. L. Seymour to Mrs. Rehill for her gracious hospitality and to all the ladies taking part in making the afternoon a success. This was heartily endorsed by all at the regular March meeting. Rev. Dr. C. V. McLean will be the guest speaker.

Fashion Service

Step out smartly now in this navy blue spring jacket dress. The sleeveless jacket makes it easy to wear under your winter coat. It's the sort of costume you fairly want to live in when spring arrives.

The blue dotted white crepe surplice collar is as gay as spring itself. The dotted crepe is repeated on the short puffed-up sleeves. The dress is complete without the jacket and offers a smart change.

This model is also grand for maternity wear. Extra inches can be released from the lapped front, that is so slimly concealing.

A detailed piping is another delightful suggestion.

A Detailed Sewing Chart accompanies the pattern.

Style No. 2943 is designed for sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44-inches bust. Size 36 requires 5¼ yards of 39-inch material with 1 yard of 39-inch contrasting and 1 yard of 39-inch lining for dress and jacket.

ROSENEATH, March 20.—Business and social activities were combined on Wednesday night, when the congregation of St. James' Anglican church gathered in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Drope.

The occasion was the meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary and a presentation to the new rector and his bride, Rev. and Mrs. Stocks.

The business meeting was held first, the president, Mrs. E. Timlin, presiding.

The rector gave a short address based on the W. A. motto, "The Law of Christ Constraineth Us."

A short program was enjoyed. Misses Vaida and Eunice Webb sang a duet; Mrs. Earl Braithwaite read "How to Cook a Husband," and Mr. Stocks contributed an instrumental selection. Miss Luella Timlin played a guitar solo. The meeting closed with prayer by the rector.

Following the meeting, the host, J. T. Drope, welcomed all the guests. Then, while James L. Timlin read an address, Ross McCracken, the people's warden, on behalf of the congregation, presented Mr. and Mrs. Stocks with a purse of money. Mr. Stocks made a suitable reply.

The remainder of the evening was spent in singing and piano and guitar solos.

F. J. A. Morris Outlines Life And Work of Rudyard Kipling

SCHOOL ART

An address by F. J. A. Morris on "Rudyard Kipling" and the annual presentation of prizes for art work to children of the city's schools, featured the last scheduled meeting of the Lyceum Club and Women's Art Association for this season, held in the green room of the Y.W.C.A. on Friday afternoon, with tea served later in the library.

A display of splendid art work by the children attracted the attention of the ladies at the close of Mr. Morris' talk, when prizes were announced by the president, Mrs. F. E. Hooper, and handed to the children by Mrs. A. E. Chalmers. The first-prize winners receive cash awards of 75 cents, while second prizes are 50 cents. The children are from the Fourth Book classes of the schools.

Mrs. Hooper explained that the main requisite in awarding these prizes is originality. The following is the list:

Two special prizes were awarded; one for design going to Eugenie Osborne; the other, for pose drawing, to Jean McLeod.

Those receiving honorable mention were Earl Casey (named twice), Kenneth King, Jack Marvin, Effie Graham, Marguerite Ash, Margaret Hayes, Grace Ellison, Marion Barrett, Ruby Dwyer, Fred Craig, Gloria Lush, Ruth Osborne, Mildred Margin, O. Daunsey, Catherine Turner, W. Cuppy, Jean Johnston, Irene Chambo, Reginald DeClarionis, Stewart Saunders, Marion Sutherland, Murray Todd, Phyllis Case, Mildred Harwell, Lynn Read and Nellie Rome.

Rudyard Kipling

Mr. Morris' paper sketched in illuminating fashion the career of Rudyard Kipling whose love for England and the Empire colored all his life. Born on the same day, December 30, 1865, as King George V, he died just two days prior to the King's passing, the latter event overshadowing the death of England's famous writer.

His method of treatment was always objective, declared Mr. Morris. He was a master of language, in its literary, colloquial, scientific and technical forms. His work is packed with arresting phrases. His earlier writing was colored by satire, which decreased in his later years. But he never altered his brilliant style and the greatest advance as time went on was his choice of subject.

Quoting from "Plain Tales from the Hills," in a little story which has to do with the small Muhamed Din, and has as a foreword the quotation: "Who is the happy man? He that sees in his house little children covered with dust, leaping and falling and crying. Mr. Morris illustrated the manner in which a simple tale was embroidered with pathos and interest. It is the story of a tiny child, playing happily in the dust of a garden where his father serves the master, crooning happily to himself over childish doings, saying a shy word to the incoming master, then dying suddenly from a fever. "The brats have no stamina," declares the English doctor, and that serves as a warning of the final bit, when the master meets his servant and one friend, bearing in his arms to the graveyard the shroud-wrapped body of little Muhamed Din.

Of Kipling, Barrie said that he had no sympathy with humanity and George Moore declared that he wrote only what his eye perceived, not from the heart. He was the unimpassioned onlooker. He seemed to lack what John Drinkwater called the "Power of Fusion," the ability of the great artist to become one with his characters.

Born in Bombay, India, reading for his first book the Bible and recording in later poetry some of the story of the wrathful God of the Old Testament, Kipling had his early education in England, but returned to India where his father was Curator of the Lahore Museum, instead of attending an English university. He spent seven years in reporotorial work with Indian newspapers.

Poem to The Queen

It was at the age of sixteen years, however, that he wrote a poem which he declared later to have pointed the way for his future activities. It was a poem written after Queen Victoria had escaped unscathed from the attack of a fanatic. In it he offered her the homnage of his "Westward Ho!" school.

In India, writing his "Plain Tales from the Hills," "Soldiers Three," "Under the Deodars," "The Phantom Rickshaw," and other stories, he became well-known and later these same tales, more than one hundred in all, became the rage of London.

He visited California and New York in the late '80s, making a friend of Mark Twain in the latter city and finally marrying an American lady and settling for a time in Vermont. His travels included South Africa, where he struck up an intimacy with Cecil Rhodes, and New Zealand and Australia. And then he came back to England for the balance of a long life.

After the Boer War, Kipling's warnings to the Government became more frequent. He held, long before the Great War, an extreme distrust of the young Kaiser Wilhelm. Mr. Morris quoted from one of the most poignant of these warnings, a poem entitled "In the Dykes":

"Again and again we were warned of the dykes; Again and again we delayed; Now they may fall we have slain our sons; As our fathers we have betrayed."

Mr. Morris spoke of the "Prose Tales of the Jungle," "Tales of the Seven Seas," and "Many Adventures."

He outlined briefly that weird story of the child suckled by a she-wolf and then brought to a human home; he spoke of Kipling's faculty of using animals in his stories, not as mythological examples, but as creatures with a distinct individuality expressed in speech.

To Kipling, he said, the present groups of Boy Scouts and Girl Guides owe their origin, his works containing the germ of the idea.

And he emphasized at all times the sense of Empire loyalty and responsibility, the qualities of courage, of playing the game, of working for work's sake, and so building the character of the boys of the nation as to make them efficient servants of the Empire.

The Dream World

A thing that touched the imagination was the brief synopsis of "The Brushwood Boy," in which George, far away from England, has a recurrent dream-vision of circumstances, words and a girl, who later enter his life, on his return home, in the oddest way. This is the story of the "City of Sleep."

Interesting too, were his outlines of "Puck of Pook's Hill," in which Dan and Una (literary embodiments of his two children, Jack and Elsie), have converse with forgotten people of England who rise from the shades to tell them of the homely happenings of every day in the times when the Romans ruled in England.

Day dreams, and perhaps a constant wanting of the two children who died (Josephine, a victim of pneumonia, and Jack, killed at eighteen, when as a member of an Irish regiment, he entered the Great War), color the theme of "They," where a lonely woman, living in a large English house, finds consolation and peoples her desolate days with children who she calls "They," figments of an imagination which loves to dwell in the border-world of fancy and hope.

That Kipling was not understood by those who branded him as a jingo-fanatic, was asserted by Mr. Morris, who said his critics were incapable of appreciating the inner spiritual message contained in his work.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta

"No one can explain your misfortunes. No one can tell you why they came on you rather than on someone else. Those questions belong to the larger mysteries of life . . . that no one has ever solved. Suppose you do the natural thing. Suppose you hold a permanent grudge against existence? That inward bitterness will infect your own personality and your family. . . That is not the solution to your problem. . . . Jesus found the way to live. Drop your grudges. Forgive everything and everybody. FORGIVE LIFE ITSELF. As soon as you do that, the new days of quietness and power will begin."

—Dr. J. Gordon Gilkey.

Dear Friends:

This is quite a long quotation, but it was too good not to let you have most of it. No on CAN explain your misfortunes or your troubles. You cannot understand why these things should come on you, and it is natural that you should resent and wonder about them, for none of us think we deserve the punishment we get, and candidly I sometimes think we get more than we ought.

When we have tried with every ounce of our strength, both mental and physical to make of life a pleasant thing, both for those we love and for ourselves, and then to see the whole thing topple down, why shouldn't we wonder what it is all about?

But you will never be able to solve the problem, you will never be able to know on earth why all your fine dreams came to nothing, why all your hard work ended in disaster.

All around you, you can see some who never seemed to give a darn, and yet things seemed to fall into their lap, whereas you had trial after trial, loss after loss, and although you did not think you were extraordinary, yet you knew that as far as you were able you had done your part, and what reward did you get?

But—supposing you let all these happenings sour you, supposing you say to yourself, "there is no God, nor any justice, nor any decency in life," what will it do to you? It will affect you so that you will become sour, and your attitude will hold some other from trying where you failed.

You may feel like throwing up the whole business of living, but you cannot die when you want to. (If you could I do not think I would be alive now.) You would be a coward if you took the suicide route out of your troubles, for someone else would have to pick up where you left off, because life has a way of going on whether we do our part or not.

Where God means for us to do certain things, He will not let us have security here, for He means us to forge ahead and do His work. In fact I do not think anyone has real security here on earth, for if you have money, you have to watch as that it will not be taken from you.

If you don't have it, you have to work hard to keep going, so try what I am trying and finding comfort in, and that is as I said before, "taking no thought for the morrow." If anyone has tried harder for security than I have, I would like to meet them. If anyone has hung on to their bit of happiness more than I did, to have it torn out of their grasp as mine was, they have to learn a new way of living or perish.

And when you hold no grudges, nor bitterness, when you forgive everyone and everything, when you forgive life itself for all it has done to you, there is truly an inward peace comes to you. It might be that we thought more of these small happinesses than we did of God, and we all know that when we are happy we do not seek Him as we should.

Maybe this that we worked so hard for, was the shadow and what we are now having is really the substance. Whatever it is, it's up to us our part now, and we shall understand later what it is all about.

We can only see so far, but He sees the beginning and the end, and many who think themselves the greatest failures judged by earthly standards, will be found to be the most successful, judged by Heavenly ones, to forgive life and get peace.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

MAYOR MACDONALD HONORARY MEMBER OF KIWANIS CLUB

Carried Out Highest Ideals Of Kiwanis In Work In The City

SURVEY OF PUBLICITY

"We are honoring him in recognition of the splendid work he has done and we are also honoring ourselves," Dr. F. C. Neal declared as he welcomed Mayor George A. Macdonald into honorary membership in the Kiwanis Club yesterday. "We recognize he has carried out the highest ideals of the Kiwanis Club in his work as mayor of this city—the ideals of service. His tireless endeavour has been to make Peterborough a better community and to produce a better citizenship."

Mayor Macdonald graciously accepted the honorary membership and addressed to the members his appreciation.

Great Honor

"I am sure this is a great honor being conferred upon me and I deeply appreciate it. My duties have been made a great deal easier and more pleasant by the splendid co-operation of the service clubs of this city, and that includes the Kiwanis Club. I am very thankful for the unhesitating support you have always given me."

A brief survey of the several modern avenues of publicity was afforded the club by the guest-speaker of the day, J. Smythe Carter, editor of the Kiwanis magazine "Key-Ray." The news reading public should not be too ready to blame newspaper editors for publishing their daily grist, news which would seem to some, better left unprinted, he remarked in the course of his address. The news editor must guide himself by the public demand, he said.

American Publications

Speaking of the mass of American publications which are at present flooding Canadian newsstands, he approved the admittance of publications of the better class but suggested there are many which might profitably be barred from the country. Canada should "be careful" in its importation of magazines and periodicals, he said.

Kiwanian D. R. Platt extended to him the club's thanks for his address. Don Kennedy entertained with two vocal solos, Handel's "Where'er You Walk," and Robert Burns' "Mary." He was accompanied at the piano by Don Ross.

DRAMATIC SOCIETY TO PRESENT PLAY

Cathedral Players Of St. Peter's Church Will Produce "The Upper Room"

"The Upper Room," which is a drama of Our Lord's Passion, written by Monsignor Benson, and which met with such success when it was produced last year by the Cathedral Players of St. Peter's Cathedral parish, is to be presented again this year by the same players, on Monday and Tuesday evenings next, March 22nd and 23rd, in the auditorium of Mount St. Joseph, where last year's performances were staged.

"The Upper Room" is a simple but powerful drama of the Passion of Christ. Monsignor Benson had the unique faculty of portraying in simple words emotions of the most intense type and this genius of his is evident in this story of the Passion. Condensed in simple form the transcending drama of Calvary—the clash of forces good and evil—the conflict of human emotions good and bad.

The cast will include Mrs. John Madden, Miss Helen Brady, Miss Helen Ross, Jack Roach, Vincent McCabe, Malcolm Buchanan, Elmer Brough, Jack Meehan, Wilfred Lerette, Ferdinand Wolff, J. Roach.

Music will be provided by the male voice section of St. Peter's Cathedral choir.

RESCUE WORKERS SEARCH SCHOOL WRECKAGE

The ABOVE photographs, rushed from New London, Texas, show the wreckage of the public school there in which an estimated 500 children lost their lives when the building was totally destroyed by an explosion. Already 455 decapitated and mangled bodies have been removed from the wreckage by rescue workers and parents searching for their children, buried somewhere beneath huge piles of debris. The UPPER LEFT photograph shows a view of the crumbled walls of the school, one wall and the roof of which was completely blown away. The UPPER RIGHT photograph shows rescue workers digging in the ruins in an effort to unearth more bodies of the tiny victims.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, March 21

SUNDAY'S HOROSCOPE is one of splendid promise for all the affairs of the church, charity and the clergy, as well as being generally propitious, progressive and happy. Employment, writings, the old and the young—all are under excellent promise of success and happiness. Seek favors and the friendship of superiors and those in power.

Those whose birthday it is are under excellent promise for a year of progress, promotion, enterprise and much personal gain, popularity and satisfaction.

A child born on this day may be splendidly endowed with talents and graces for making a high mark in life, with prospects of achieving success and probably renown in many walks of life. It should be noble, generous and well-liked and respected. It should have excellent judgment.

For Monday, March 22

MONDAY'S ASTROLOGICAL forecast is for a rather conflicting day, with much of the outcome depending on personal wisdom and sagacity, as well as discretion in personal matters. The energies and spirit of initiative will be found under high stimuli, but so will personal tendencies for indulgencies, excesses or tempests.

Those whose birthday it is may look for an exciting year in both the private and business lives. Change, unsettlement, eccentricities and indulgences call for wisdom and sagacity. The energies will be under high stimuli for creative work, and the impulses may be keyed to a dangerous attitude, especially in love affairs or domestic relations.

A child born on this day may be a difficult problem to understand and manage, being impulsive, tempestuous, erratic and adventurous. It may have high energies and talents which could be diverted into channels of great creative achievements.

Woman Uses Shoe as Safety Deposit Box Cobbler Throws Roll of $40 Into the Fire

FINANCIALLY poorer to the tune of forty dollars, Miss Julia Blodgett, 556 Romaine street, recently had an unfortunate experience that will probably convince her of the wisdom of entrusting future savings to the bank for safe-keeping.

Subsequently having occasion to draw on her account, Miss Blodgett was disconcerted to learn that her sister had sent the shoes to a repair shop.

The shoe repairer claimed he had no knowledge of any money having been hidden in the toe of one of the shoes. He recalled, however, that he had removed some paper from one of the shoes and had thrown it into the stove.

Ashes from the stove were anxiously raked over and remains of a few coins that had comprised the small percentage of loose change around which the bills had been wrapped, bore out the shoemaker's story that the money had been inadvertently cast into the fire in the mistaken belief that it was worthless paper.

HERBERT NEVILLE HELD IN NEW YORK ON BOSTON COUNT

$20,000 INVOLVED

TORONTO, March 20—Herbert John Nelles Neville, held in New York as a fugitive from Boston, is very well known in Toronto for financial exploitation. Since October, 1935, a warrant has been out against him on three charges of fraud, arising out of the future of D'Arnac and Co., women's wear shop, operating in Toronto, Timmins and Kirkland Lake.

The enterprise was promoted by Neville under the name of John Hurd, to which he had changed by deed poll. Creditors claimed $16,000 against assets of $10,787, and in addition there were eight contingent creditors who had invested $18,000 in the shops. One of these, a woman, at the meeting of creditors, said that apparently Hurd must have had about $40,000 when he left Toronto.

Born in Peterborough

Born in Peterborough, son of a clergyman, he was adjudged bankrupt in December, 1928, after brokerage activities. In 1927, after he had engaged in financial operations in London, England, on a large scale, his palatial Rosedale home here was auctioned to satisfy Canadian creditors, while he was supposed to be in Mexico. He also had had a fine estate at Bobcaygeon prior to his English adventures.

Trouble From Prison

In February, 1928, he was arrested in San Francisco for the Chicago police. In 1935, he was released from Joliet penitentiary where he had been on a one-to-10 years' sentence, and returning to Windsor was arrested on a Toronto warrant dating back to 1926. Here he was charged with theft of $4,000 from a client, a university professor, and got off with a two years' probation, but was arrested for the New York police on a charge involving $18,000. Extradition was not proceeded with.

Neville's next venture was D'Arnac & Cie.

Toronto Charges

The Toronto charges against Neville are: Theft of $500 in July, $250 in September and $700 in October, all in the year 1933.

Since his last appearance in a Toronto court, police say that he has visited South Africa, New Zealand and other parts of the world.

Warrant Issued

At Boston today, District Court Judge John H. Duff issued a warrant charging John Bruce Heath with larceny, and Police Captain John A. Dorsey said he would leave New York to serve it on Neville. The Dainton Associates, financial organization, was described by the Boston Better Business Bureau as a "get-rich-quick scheme."

Dorsey said Heath of Neville, indicated he would waive extradition.

The Rambling REPORTERS

A 'PROUD' MOTHER.

To put it in a manner imitative of the well-known Mr. Winchell, a 'blessed event' that appeared to be a surprise to all concerned took place this week, when a Shetland pony which is the property of nine-year-old John Monnrief, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Earl Monnrief of Monnrief's Dairy, had a small daughter. John, it appears, was speechless with astonishment at the apparition of the baby pony, which is described as looking like a 'small pretty deer'. The assistance of his grandmother, Mrs. R. A. Dobbin, was enlisted in christening the newcomer and the name of 'Mink' was chosen. The mother pony is called 'Pride'.—C.L.M.

Swim In Icy Waters Of Otonabee Is Real Enjoyment To Young Armenian

KRIKOR Hekimian, the lad who wears no overcoat or socks even on the coldest day of winter, is back in town. He announced to-day his intention of negotiating the ski jump at Nassau and ending his run with a plunge and a swim in the ice waters of the Otonabee river Sunday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock.

And he means it! Cold water is no novelty to Krikor Hekimian as those who saw him break the ice of Little Lake and enjoy a half-hour swim here last Spring will remember. This winter he has been amazing crowds up and down the length of Ontario by his frigid plunges into ice-fringed rivers and lakes and even into the waters of Lake Superior, which are cold enough to paralyse the average swimmer in July.

Bit Chilly in Lake Superior.

"The water was a bit chilly up there," he told The Examiner to-day, referring to Lake Superior. "But I like it cold. When I entered the C.N.E. marathon a couple of years ago the water was so warm I got cramps. If it is colder this year I think I'll try again."

If anyone thinks Krikor Hekimian is a fake, he can gain $25 by duplicating his feat Sunday afternoon, the good-humoured Armenian states. He will pay $25 to anyone who will stay in the waters of the Otonabee as long as he does.

Last week a crowd of 14,000 persons at Cornwall watched him cool off by sitting on a cake of ice in his bathing suit and lick an ice cream cone, then swim in evident enjoyment in the frosted waters of the St. Lawrence for fifteen minutes.

What Does He Get Out of It.

"What do you get out of these ice baths you take around the country," the young man was asked.

"I do it for the fun. I get out of it and for my health. There's nothing like a swim in winter to keep yourself healthy. Generally I take up a collection from the crowd to pay my expenses to the next place and pay the $25 award if anybody wins it."

It was reported to-day at least one local swimmer plans to take up the dare in an effort to win the $25. Hekimian warns the swimmer must count on staying in at least a half hour if he wishes to be in the running.

HEAVIEST TAXES.

The heaviest income taxes in the world for persons whose incomes fall in the top brackets are levied in Germany and Italy, Dr. Victor Lange of Toronto University told the Friday Night Supper Club members at supper last evening. MILDEST WINTER.

OBITUARY

SISTER MARY GEORGE

After a lingering illness extending over the past three years, the death occurred on Thursday at Mount St. Joseph of Sister Mary George, of the Community of St. Joseph at Peterborough.

The late Sister Mary George was formerly Miss Monica Galti of Wallford, Ontario. After graduating from St. Joseph's Academy at North Bay, she entered the St. Joseph Order at Peterborough in September, 1927, after completing her novitiate. She attended the Normal School at North Bay, but owing to ill-health, was prevented from undertaking the duties of the teaching profession. Her gentle, kindly disposition and her unobtrusive manner endeared her to all who knew her.

The late Sister Mary George was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Galti of Wallford. One brother, who was a member of the DeLaSalle Order, died a year ago. Among the relatives who survive are one brother, resident on the homestead, and two sisters: Miss Leone Galti of Garden River, Ontario, and Mrs. Dorser, of Rochester, N.Y.

The Funeral Mass was solemnized in the chapel at Mount St. Joseph at nine o'clock this (Saturday) morning with interment later in St. Peter's Cemetery. High Mass was sung by the Rev. J. V. Masterson, D.D., with the Rev. C. Carroll as deacon, and the Rev. E. Grant as sub-deacon.

DIED

PLATT, James Joseph. — At Port Hope, on Saturday, March 20, James Joseph Platt, of 485½ Bolivar street, Peterborough. Funeral from late residence on Monday at 2.00 p.m., with interment in Little Lake Cemetery.

WAR WOULD BRING GERMAN COLLAPSE SPEAKER STATES

Hitler Can Lead Men To Trenches But Can't Make Them Fight, "Y" Audience Told

UNDUE ALARM HERE

"There is no doubt the large majority of people in Germany and Italy would refuse to go to war," Dr. Victor Lange, professor of German at Toronto University who made recently a tour of observation through European countries, declared in an address at the Y.M.C.A. Friday evening. "You can drive men into the trenches, of course, but you can't keep them there."

Painting a much brighter picture of the European situation than that afforded by other lecturers who have visited the city this winter, Dr. Lange based his remarks on personal observations and experiences in Germany, Austria, Italy, France and Great Britain last summer. His lecture was the last of the annual series of university extension lectures sponsored by the Friday Night Supper Club.

Wrong Emphasis.

"A war at the present time would shatter the Hitler regime," he said. He expressed the belief both Hitler and Mussolini are anxious to avoid any serious tangle with the great powers. Placing the wrong emphasis on European news of recent months just as the European papers misinterpret and misconstrue news from the American continent, American and Canadian papers have made a European crisis seem far more imminent to readers on this side of the ocean than it seems in the minds of the Europeans themselves, he suggested.

Mental Outlook.

Interesting was the glimpse he afforded of the mental outlook of European peoples which permits the dominance of dictators such as Mussolini and Hitler. He described an attitude of mental weariness and resignation among the German and Italian peoples, a philosophy that it is the men who are "doing things" who count. It is all very painful to those who still believe in the efficacy of thought and reason rather than the bayonet, he declared.

In Germany, Hitler is worshipped with greater devotion and fervor than any religion ever excited, he continued. He said it was a hysterical type of worship and compared it to the fanatical zeal with which the women of America worship their movie idols such as Clark Gable and Franchot Tone.

National Begging.

The amazing ability of Italy and Germany to keep afloat in the face of seeming national bankruptcy he explained as partly due to the terrific taxation in the form of daily and hourly solicitations of contributions for every conceivable cause from every citizen, high and low. The contributions are ostensively voluntary but the citizen knows what is best for his personal health, he explained.

"It is a paradise we live in on this side of the Atlantic," he concluded. "We are away from the depressing atmosphere of uncertainty and in a land where at least there is promise of a bright future."

BOWMANVILLE LOSES

TORONTO, March 20.—In senior basketball semi-finals last night Owen Sound took Belleville down 29 to 21. Walt Tennant was outstanding with his checking as guard, while Jack Clarke paced the Quinte team with 11 points.

In the other semi-final, Stamford managed to stave off Bowmanville's last-minute rally to win 33-29. Boyd Blemon scored 12 for Bowmanville.

Belleville junior team fared no better than their older brothers, going down 34 to 15 at the hands of Welland. Welland, using their extra weight and height to good advantage, outclassed their smaller rivals. George Latinovitch, with 10 points, and Harry Rice 9, were high men for Welland.

Inside Sportin' Dope

BY A. WISE-CRACKER.

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well Mac, this here screed is being wrote as usual right on the eve of battle so they ain't much to be said about the struggle of the century at Oshawa Fri. nite between the Colts of Barrie and our Colts except it's caused more excitement down this way than anything since the news come in years ago that the Fenians had crossed the border and was heading north. Everybody in the burg seemed to have business down Oshawa way for the night and it looks right now like a grand old exodus.

Hectic In Barrie

Incidentally Mac I was able to understand yet why a 3rd game was necessary. Going on the game here the Buckland entry looked good enough to hold a five-goal lead standing on their heads but probably the main factor was the fact the Barrie fans turned the 2nd game into a civil war in which anything went. Not satisfied with stealing a goal that really saved the round for them they tossed fire crackers and marbles at the Peter players until the latter thought they was right out on the firing line on the Madrid front and the only bird on the scene that could have protected them, the referee folded up and said he only had authority over what went on on the ice. He never seemed to realize that a threat to the Barrie management that the game would be forfeited if the bombardment was not stopped woulda brought the trouble to an end in a hurry. As it was, and in spite of all this small town stuff, the Pets woulda win anyway if-our Mister Brady hadn't picked the wrong moment to do a little stick-handling. One heave of the rubber down the ice in those last few seconds of play woulda meant a win on the round for the Buckland brigade.

The Cash and Carry Race

The N.H.L. race ends tomorrow, Mac, and they was no last minute surprises. The Detroits and the Canadiens will battle it out for the League championship and I'm calling the Red Wings to win, if they don't too many of them land in the hospital before the serious starts. Maroons and Bruins, the 2nd slot occupants, will clash and I'm going to string along with the Maroons, although it will be a tough battle and a Boston win wouldn't cause no surprise. The other fight will be between the Leaves and Rangers and while the New Yorkers has had a big edge over the Smythe lads all season my vote has gotta go to the Leaves. They are at full strength while the Rangers has had a hard time getting anywhere this last month. Mister Patrice may be able to throw some pep and fight into them for the big serious but on their form of recent weeks they is sunk already.

The Scoring Race

Again now the close fun is watching the scoring race which is about the tightest on record. Mister Apps of Toronto is a point in front of Messrs. Aurie, Barry and Schriner, but Mister Barry has a slight edge at least because he has 2 games left in which to swell his total while Aurie is out with injuries and Apps and Schriner just have a game to go. The winner will not be known until the Red Wings finish their game Sunday night and perhaps not then if the League records show a difference in the newspaper totals.

Sincerely yours,

A. WISE CRACKER.

MONCTON CARRIES MARITIME HONORS MEET HULL NEXT

Fort William Enters Finals In West By Ousting 'Peg Packers 4-3

QUEBEC BEATS ST- JEROME

TORONTO, March 20. —(CP)— Eastern Canada was ready today to accept its season's first portion of interseccional hockey competition. Whereas only three clubs are left on the playoff trail in the west, a game involving Maritime and Ottawa District senior champions will be the east's first step toward cup finals.

Whoever in the Maritimes last year, Moncton Maroons have emerged again, to tangle this time with Hull Volants in a total-goal series at Ottawa. Last year Brockville Maroons let coast Moncton emerge victorious but its successful experience as a unit may have made Maroons one of the year's surprise teams.

Moncton may not be able to produce a team like its great Hawks of two seasons ago but Coach Fud James attested last night "we are an improved team over the one which played here last year." Hull came out of an Ottawa city league final was undoubtedly powerful this winter, then whipped Smith's Falls in playoffs.

Packers Are Out.

Of the three western survivors, two will start an interprovincial round tonight at Calgary. The third, Fort William, entered finals last night by defeating Winnipeg Packers 4-3. The game was the third in a best-of-three series between the Thunder Bay and Manitoba sextets. Winnipeg won theopener 6-5 but Fort William, playing all three matches on home ice, tied it up with a 3-1 victory in the second.

Stan Robertson, centre ice star, led Wanderers to their deciding win, scoring three times. Packers battled back repeatedly and Dicky Skinner reduced Fort William's lead to a single goal 33 seconds before the finish.

Wanderers' opposition in western finals will be North Battleford Beavers or Edmonton Dominions. North Battleford's outstanding victims thus far have been Regina Aces, while Edmonton set down Nelson Maple Leafs, British Columbia champions, this week.

Last night's only other Allan Cup contest involved the senior and intermediate Quebec winners, Quebec Aces and St. Jerome Aces won 4-0 and can take the best-of-three round in consecutive games when the clubs clash at Quebec to-morrow.

Rideaux Beat Perth.

Ottawa Rideaus took another step toward the Ottawa and district junior throne last night when they beat Perth 3-2 right in Perth. The return game in Ottawa to-day was expected to mean the end of the road for Perth. The winning team will meet Amherst St. Pats, Maritime victors, in the next stage of Memorial Cup playdowns.

Three other junior clashes were on the Saturday menu. Stratford and St. Michael's College battle at Toronto this afternoon in the deciding game of their best-of-five series and the survivor will go north to-morrow to play Copper Cliff Redmen Monday. To-night at Winnipeg Portage La Prairie and Winnipeg Monarchs will conclude a hectic Manitoba semi-final. Saskatoon Wesleys will entertain Edmonton Rangers in the start of an Interprovincial round.

SAILORS BATTER TWEED DOWN 2-1

Belleville's T. V. L. Win Evens Series And Forces Sudden Death Game At Madoc

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, March 20.—Travelling to Madoc for the second game of the Trent Valley Hockey League series, Tweed Intermediates went down to defeat before a large crowd, when th Belleville Yacht Club Sailors took the game by a three to one decision, on Thursday night. As a result of the game the series stands tied at one game apiece, as Tweed won the first game by a score of 9 to 3, and were favored to repeat, but the Belleville team forced the play from the first and were easily the better team of the night.

The heavy ice did not favor the Tweed team, who play their best hockey on a hard surface, while the Sailors are at their best on soft ice. The game was very slow and several penalties were handed out for rough work. Belleville led two to one at the end of the first, held the same margin in the second canto and tallied another counter in the last period to make the final count three to one. Both defences were inclined to be over anxious, resulting in their spending several minutes in the "cooler."

Owing to the importance of the game, the executive decided to hold a sudden-death game in Madoc on Saturday night to decide the issue following a two-hour conference.

Tweed.—Goal, Thompson; defence, Tip Tummon and J. Tummon; centre, Long; wings—McGuire and Courneyes; subs, W. Lead, F. Leal, Eisbury and Gerald.

Belleville.—Goal, Hinton; defence, Shug Ethier and J. Ethier; centre, Howie; wings, Semark and Harvey; subs, Day, McGuire, Goyer and Hammett.

Owing to Holy Week no games can be played on church grounds.

Any skip able to arrange other games than scheduled are requested to do so.

Carpetball Notes.

That C.N.R. Freighter ran into a herd of Moose but found numbers too many.

Cridland's Meats were lucky to get away with one sound tire when they got ambushed by the Snipers.

The C.P.C. Trimmers cut up the Hook and Ladder gang in no mean way, completely disfiguring the score card.

Dizzying Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

TWO CAGE contests tonight at the Y.M.C.A. gym, with the usual Saturday eve hop following. The games are Senior City Basketball League tilts and highly important to several of the squads as the schedule draws toward a close. Nellies tangle with C.G.E. at 8.15, while P.C.I. plays Dominion Life at 9.15 o'clock. Something snore on the playoffs in this circuit should be known early next week. Ought to draw quite a gathering of hoop fans for both these jousts. Dope on the junior P.C.I. boys' affair in Toronto last night is listed elsewhere this pm.

* * * * * *

ALL THREE Ladies' Basketball League tussles slated for the Y.W.C.A. last night were postponed. Just couldn't floor enough dunnels for the games since so many wanted to take the jaunt to Oshawa to see the Barrie-Colts' puck playoff. They figured they could catch up on the cage sport next week but that ice classic could not wait. The games will be played during the coming week. "Y" Quakers meeting Westelex Juniors at 9.30 Monday evening, and the other two affairs on Tuesday or Wednesday; we're not sure just yet.

PERCY HARRISON informs us that two teams already are planning to apply for entry this Spring to the men's City Softball League. One is Jeff Hardill's gang from Bridgenorth, and the other is a junior O.A.S.A. crew—probably sponsored by City Dairy—and coached by George Dormer. The latter team will play, if the entry is accepted, through the schedule but will go into junior O.A.S.A. playdowns in the autumn. Such young baseballers as Al Clark, Eddie Starr, etc., are expected to be aboard this team. Chaps under 20 by May 1st who want a crack at the crew should notify George Dormer.

* * * * * *

LOCAL SENIOR ball officials frown on their players taking part in softball games this summer and may pass a rule forbidding it. The games do not mix too well, both sports suffering. A softball team may sign up a ball player but finds he is not available—due to a baseball game that day—just when he is needed. And a baseballer who plays softball finds after a time he can't hit a curve—ball to save his life on the bigger diamond. Swartz and the Petes swapped 'em last year and where did either team go? And last year the senior ball practices were a joke with half the gang playing softball those nights. Seems to us there are enough good softballers in town without having to raid the baseball field.

* * * * * *

SPRING STARTS at midnight tonight but winter ended about 10.30 last p.m. for our junior Colts and a big gang of their followers in Oshawa. Some Barrie pucksters had quite a bit to do with it, winning this deciding playoff game by a 6-5 score to rub our crew out and advance in O.H.A. playoffs. There were more than 3,000 yipping, whooping rooters in the arena—with better than half of 'em from Peterborough. While over 500 from here took the special train, a great many motored to Motor City. That crowd outnumbered and out-yelled the Barrie contingent, but it is goals not shouts that count in hockey games. So the Colts lost and we can only say: "Tough luck, gang; you went down fighting."

* * * * * *

AS FAR as the game goes, it was anybody's from start to finish. A speedy, exciting and classy tilt, it was remarkably clean and the referee made a very fair job of it. Two of the Barrie goals resulted from breakaways as the locals ganged up desperately in the third period. A nip-and-tuck tilt all the way. Goalie Goring rose to heights to stop the Colts' close-in tries and he had a good team in front of him. Fans who saw Barrie lose here will not appreciate how much better they looked at home and in Oshawa. They were two well-matched squads, each scoring 15 goals in the three-game series. Yes, the odd goal must be credited to the Barrie goal-judge in the second game. It was that close, and plenty of shekels changed hands over the series. Our goalie went good yesterday, too, as did all his buddies—with Kingdon, Crowe and Starr especially good.

* * * * * *

BITTER FEELING? Yes, there was plenty of it down in Oshawa last e'en, but it was between the rival fans rather than the players. There were fist fights before and after the game and several nifty slugfests in the arena during the contest. Some local guy pulled a Barrie trick in the third stanza and tossed firecrackers at the goalie. It resulted in a heaving, slugging tangle at one end of the rink that lasted 10 minutes. The dogone thing had us cock-eyed as we tried to follow play and also get a load of the fist feast. Besides the several Oshawa scribes, we saw Bunny Morganson, roland Toronto columnist, and the sports writers of Lindsay Post and Cobourg Sentinel-Star present. With fans from Toronto, Barrie, Oshawa, Peterborough and district. They pretty well took over the town for the night.

* * * * * *

BETWEEN PERIODS, the noisy Peterborough fans raised a hullabaloo the like of which was never before seen in the Motor City arena. They had an car-splitting siren going, noise-makers galore, cheer-leaders on all sides swinging their arms to the enthusiastic crowd, snake-dances on the ice, brilliant fireworks—well, everything. It was quite a show. Too bad the Colts couldn't have clicked before such support but the Barrie jinx was on 'em; and over half the boys graduate from junior ranks this year. Travelling by car with the team last eve, we didn't hear about the fatal accident on the train till the special pulled in early this morning. It cast a damper on the puck followers which even the lyss in Oshawa could not do. And so the Ides of March caught up with our team and hockey is over for the year.

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., March 20 (AP).—Jerome Herman Dean, self-styled "number one holdout of the 1937 season" was back in the St. Louis Cardinal fold today—his stature on a contract believed to be worth $25,000.

Whether Dizzy had the better of his annual joust with the Card bosses was doubtful, but the talkative pitcher did manage to hold the suspense until the minute he picked up a pen to sign.

Dizzy came over from his Bradenton home yesterday apparently all ready to put his name on a contract under the terms discussed with President Sam Breadon in a telephonic conversation Thursday night.

But a hitch developed. Breadon and Dean talked for two hours in the afternoon, and went back into conference after dinner. Forty minutes later he and Breadon came out of the room with the laconic statement: "It's all off."

Breadon, Dean said, warned him to promise not to heckle his teammates, to mind his own business and to obey without question Manager Frankie Frisch's instructions.

"Asked him why he wanted me to make such a promise," said Dean in an aggrieved tone. "I never have heckled the other Cardinals. I always did what Frankie ordered."

"So far as I am concerned it's all over," Breadon commented. "If Diz wants to talk to me again I'll see him, but he'll have to ask for the meeting."

Less than an hour later, after talking at length over the telephone, presumably to his wife at Bradenton, "Ole Diz" showed up again and signed up.

St. Louis Defeats Kansas City 2 to 0

ST. LOUIS, March 20 (CP).—St. Louis Flyers defeated Kansas City Greyhounds 2-0 last night in the opening game of the American Hockey Association semi-final playoffs. Oscar Hanson and Johnny Mackinnon scored in the last period. Second game of the best-of-five series will be played Sunday. St. Paul and Minneapolis open the other semi-final series in Minneapolis to-night.

Remember When—

Irvin "Ace" Bailey, then right wing with Toronto Maple Leafs, headed National Hockey League scorers with 22 goals and 19 assists in final league records published eight years ago today. His playing career terminated four years later when he received serious head injuries in a collision with Eddie Shore, Boston Bruins defenceman. Bailey now is coaching University of Toronto.

LOUGHLIN BALKS UPON PREDICTING FUTURE OF HAWKS

All Canadian-Born Players Expected To Be For Sale After Tonight's Game

BUT PRICES ARE HIGH

By Gorge Maguire
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

NEW YORK, March 20.—(CP).—Clem Loughlin led his Chicago Black Hawks away to Boston this morning to wind up their National Hockey League seasonal efforts against the Bruins to-night. Firmly refusing to predict what next winter might have in store, Manager Clem said he would not discuss the possible make-up of the Hawks for the 1937-38 season because he could not see that far ahead.

Thorough Test in Fall.

Major Frederic McLaughlin, owner of the team, was described as determined to give his all-American experiment a thorough testing next fall and ready to replace every Canadian he can sell by an American-born puck-tamer.

However, the prices the Major was reported to have placed on the heads of his Canadian players left the impression he might have great difficulty in getting them off his hands. For instance, $35,000 was said to be the sale ticket on Earl Siebert, flashy defenceman from Kitchener, Ont. An almost equally tall figure was said to have been marked on Paul Thompson, Calgary product, who still is a sharpshooter but growing no younger rapidly.

It was suggested to Loughlin that in case a ready market was lacking for Chicago's "furriners" they might be nice to have around next winter if a team of satisfactory Americans could not be rounded up.

Did he think that was perhaps in the back of the Major's mind when he was setting the prices on his men?

Changes the Subject.

"Boston is the dangerous team," said Clem. "In Thompson they have the best money playing goalminder in the business. And don't forget the goalie is easily 50 per cent of the team.

"The Bruins have three fast and powerful lines, blended perfectly with experience and youth. Talking of youngsters I don't think I ever saw better prospects than Milt Schmidt and Bob Gracie, Boston

(By Andy Ratter)

Dear Fellow Skiers, mud waders, social and bath members, and gym-pathizers at about the time this sheet goes to press it looks very doubtful that we will have sufficient snow to run the club jumping championship at Nassau Sunday afternoon. It may be possible through a great deal of hard work to move enough snow to allow the jumpers to compete but unless it snows tonight or stays cold enough to hold what we have now it is likely the event will be called off, such being the case a sign will be placed at the farm gate notifying spectators of the conditions. Nevertheless, our polar bear friend will give his demonstration of [illegible] running to the ice floes. As we go to press his offer of $25.00 for any person who will stay with him has not been taken up but four scribe suspects busky Bill Taylor might take a fling at it "It's the Gypsy in him." That's all for now.

At The Baseball Training Camps

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 20. — Those pitchers who thought there was too much Joe DiMaggio on New York Yankees last year are in for an unpleasant surprise this season. The Yankees' sophomore rookie arrived in camp weighing 190 pounds, 10 more than he packed in 1936, and said he expects to start the season at more than 200.

Gulfport, Miss.—After tangling with Cleveland Indians today, New York Giants begin a week of comparative rest while they put the finishing touches on their spring conditioning. In point of spring competition, they are the most advanced club in either league right now, and for most of the rest of the pre-season training they'll see what their Greenwood, Miss., and Jersey City farmhands, encamped here, have on the ball.

Clearwater, Fla.—Wanted: Several automobile drivers, in the Brooklyn Dodgers' camp. Manager Burleigh Grimes' orders are that none of the players who drove their cars down to the camp can drive them back, so the boys are scouting around for operators to bring them home. Meantime, they're showing their new base-running methods, as taught by "Prof." Percy Beard, for the first time today against the Phillies.

HYDRO TOWN TEAM RUBBED OUT 13-9

Win Second Game By 6-Count But Drop Round To Kingston

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, March 20.—Campbellford Juveniles were eliminated from the O.H.A. playdowns by a score of 13-9 on the round. Playing before the largest crowd of the season the local pucksters won Friday night's game by a score of 6-5 giving Kingston a lead of four goals on the round.

Playing on soft ice Wilkinson registered the first counter for the visitors early in the first with Keating evening up the score for the locals ending the period in a tie. Anderson received two minor penalties for tripping during the period during which time the locals endeavoured to run up the score but were unable to beat Udall who played a great game in the Kingston net.

The second period opened with both teams displaying the strain of playing on soft ice and with Crawford starting the scoring for the visitors at the beginning of the period. Following this Baike made a nice shot which fooled Udall evening up the score and for a few minutes the game seemed to liven up with the local boys playing close on the Kingston nets. Lemmon broke away scoring for the visitors and it was not until Kingston was playing one man short with Mawson in the penalty box that Ketchen tied up the score again. At the end of the period Keating and Nesbitt got major penalties for mixing it up during a scramble at the Campbellford end of the rink.

Ketchen Scores

With thirty-five seconds of the third period gone Ketchen slipped one past Udall with Nicholos and Redaick getting credit for the assist. Lemmon and Aboud went off for tripping and with both teams playing a man short Crawford scored for the boys from down east with Wilkinson getting the assist. With four minutes to go and the score still tied Reddick slipped one into the corner of the Kingston net on a pass from Nicholos. Two minutes later Burtch broke away to score on a solo effort while Reddick scored the final goal with one minute to play and Kingston playing one man short as Acton had been given a penalty for tripping, ending the game 6-5.

Referee—Holloway.

Colts Are Eliminated By Barrie Squad 6-5 In Motor City Arena

Local Juniors Lose Out In Thrilling Third Game Of Hectic Playoff Series Before Large Crowd Of Peterborough Fans

FAST, EVEN AND CLEAN

In a redhot puck battle before over 3,000 roaring rooters—more than half of them from Peterborough—in Oshawa last night, the local Colts were rubbed out of the O.H.A. junior "B" playdowns by Barrie, 6 to 5. It was the third game of their hectic series to make the round-robin finals, and the Barrie boys copped the round by a 10-15 score.

With fireworks, sirens and fights going on in the stands, play was remarkably clean—only one penalty being drawn—but exciting all through and quite even. The score see-sawed back and forth, with the locals generally having to fight back from behind. The score was 2-all to end the first frame and 4-3 for Barrie going into the third. A breakaway goal put the tilt on ice as the Colts were ganging up late in the windup stanza.

It was a thrilling tussle throughout with some grand hockey dished up by the well-matched squads. They kept up a torrid pace, flashed fine combination, neat backchecking and dangerous close-in thrusts on goal that ranked the fans to their feet time and again. The large ice surface favored the winners, several of their goals being gained on quick passing plays around defence after blue-line passes. Barrie drew the only penalty, a minor for holding in the first period.

REDHOT AND EVEN

If anything, the young Petes had an edge on play in the first chapter with some excellent combination and speedy breaks down the ice. The Barrie gang shaded them slightly in the middle chukker with nifty forechecking and long passing plays that kept Harding busy batting the disc out. Play was redhot in the third as the Colts pressed and Barrie played defensive hockey, but occasionally broke away on dangerous dashes down the rink. In both the first and third periods, each side scored a goal in the final minute of play. The Petes went down fighting furiously till the end.

Starr, Kingdon, Crowe and Harding shone all the way for the Peterborough crew, though every player turned in a good performance. Starr and Kingdon each tallied two goals and went good both ways for the distance. Crowe starred on offence and defence. A. Clark and Brady in spots looked first-rate and the rest also battled their heads off. The whole Barrie team looked good, with Goring in goal, Jones, Dyte, Bowen and Long outstanding.

Colts Get First.

They started it off at a fast, even clip. Harding thefted Leigh early and the Colts' second line outplayed their rivals for a time. Brown missed off for holding and the Buckland boys pressed hotly. Crowe pulled off a neat rush and later, with both sides even again, Starr scored a nice one, taking Brady's pass at defence and pulling the goalie out. The locals were boring in regularly but Goring kept blocking their drives. Long evened the score shortly on Scott's long pass to skirt the defence and tally. A minute before the gong, Dyte raced around defence and fought his way out of a corner as he was partly blocked to drift an angle drive by Harding. Half a minute later, Kingdon tied it up again in close on assists by Connelly and C. Clark after Goring blocked two shots.

Early in the middle inning, Long took a forward pass at the goalmouth to put Barrie up 3-2, Jones and Bowen having assists. It was fast, even and hot for a time and then Jones took Brook's corner pass-out to blast it home and give the Bees a two-goal lead. A Crowe-Kingdon combination was robbed and Goring kicked out several as the Colts tore in angrily. Kingdon almost got another and then Starr scored on Wright's passout. Crowe made several nice rushes and play was hot and about even at the bell at the bell.

Barrie On Defensive.

The third started slower but later got warm with the Colts trying hard for the equaliser and Barrie checking closely and shooting the puck down the ice. On a breakaway, with just one man to beat, Scott passed to Bowen at defence and the latter fooled Harding. Brock later broke away as the Colts kept ganging up but his shot was booted aside by the goalie. The frame was nearly half spent when Crowe split the defence on a nifty rush to backhand the boothest by Goring as the fans shouted in glee. The pace was redhot at this time with the Peterbrough players trying desperately to counter but being checked closely. Kingdon and Connelly made a nice try as the gang buzzed around the harassed Barrie goalie—who had firecrackers thrown at him in this inning—but he kept stopping them. With just half a minute of the period left, Jones and Dyte broke away together to score, the former poaching the marker. Undaunted, the scrappy Colts tore right back on the next rush to get it back, Kingdon slapping the rubber home in a scramble. The final bell went before they had another chance.

The teams:

Colts—Goal, Harding; defence, A. Clark and Crowe; centre, Starr; wings, Heal and Wright; alternates, Kingdon, G. Clark, Brady, Connelly and Jopling.

Barrie — Goal, Goring; defence, Dyte and Jones; centre, Bowen; wings, Scott and Long; alternates, Brock, Leigh, Walker, Livingston and Storey.

MAROONS, LEAFS BE OUT FIGHTING FOR SECOND PLACE

Montrealers Are Forced To Try For Both Games Against Amerks And Wings

SCORING HONORS AT STAKE

By A. E. FULFORD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A flash final that brings all the actors on stage for a quick unravelling of the interthreads of the plot will close the National Hockey League schedule this week-end.

The wonder of it is that there is still a bit of plot remaining to be worked out after eight teams have blazed 192 games in four months. But there are several things to be decided in the five games to-night and Sunday.

Perhaps the most important is second place in the Canadian division. Montreal Maroons have it now and will keep it if they can get a tie against Americans in Montreal to-night. But if they lose both contests Toronto Maple Leafs can finish in the runner-up spot by winning from Detroit in Toronto to-night.

Maroons will be forced to try for both games, not only because of the threat from Leafs, but because of the new rule which makes points gained in the schedule determine the venue of playoff battles. Maroons have 49 points now to 51 for Boston, runners-up in the American division. Unless they can finish ahead of Bruins they must play the second and perhaps third games of their Stanley Cup playoffs in Boston.

Scoring Leadership?

Another matter to be cleared up is the point-scoring leadership. That may be settled in Toronto to-night, but it is unlikely. Syl Apps, Toronto's rookie centre is leading Marty Barry of Detroit, the injured Larry Aurie of Red Wings and Sweeney Schriner of Americans by a point.

There is little doubt Leafs will give Apps every sensible chance of taking the honors to-night. They will have him on the ice every moments they can without tiring him for the playoffs. Detroit will do the same with Barry.

But both will face relentless checking from opposing forwards. It will do Leafs no good to feed Apps passes until Barry is closely checked and the same applies to Red Wings. It should be an interesting duel.

Schriner's One Chance.

Schriner has only the Maroon contest to-night in which to retain the championship he won last year. His chances might be excellent except that Maroons still have things for which to fight.

There is also the matter of the Vezina trophy to be cleaned up. Norm Smith seems certain to take it along with the neuminger's position on the Canadian Press all-star team. Smith has had only 94 goals scored on him. His nearest rival is Dave Kerr of New York Rangers with 105.

The only games that mean nothing to the teams are the contests to-morrow night between Canadiens and Rangers in New York and the Chicago-Bruins clash in Boston.

Allan Cup Survivors

CHAPTER 40

THE PAYNTER'S departure from Hollywood was markedly different from their first arrival. They had been two shy, hopeful youngsters four years before, proud of their new clothes, their joint trunk and their shining suitcases. They had faced an unknown future that they little dreamed was to carry them to a peak of riches and fame.

When they waved their departure from the platform of the eastbound Century they were no longer shy youngsters. They were people of the world. They had 14 pieces of hand luggage and 13 trunks. In her arms Janet carried her jewel case. Over her arm there was a mink coat. There was a sable wrap, a silver fox cape and an ermine coat in one of the trunks. Her bank books were in her jewel box. But the figures in her bank book were astonishingly low compared to the sums that had poured into the banks.

There were a few thousand dollars and the $6,000-a-year interest on the trust fund of $125,000 that Janet had made Joel salt away during the past year. There should have been a quarter of a million.

There should have been a great deal more than there was.

They had sold the white house because Joel said when they returned he wanted to build a different type of house. So they sold it to a newcomer, one Chris Gaynor, a rather prettyish type of young actor who had come to the screen direct from college. The house had cost a great deal of money and the sale price was a fair amount but what profit there was in it had gone to pay taxes.

To Janet's great surprise, Joel did not really own his expensive car. It was mortgaged to a finance company. The town car was hers and Joel had insisted on sending it east.

She parted with her furniture and appointments with less reluctance than she had expected. It was silly of them to ship their furniture when they could sell it on the coast and get what they wanted to fit their new place.

The new place was a penthouse on the East river.

Janet felt that if ever they had a chance to make a new start, their return to New York should mark it. She demurred at the expensive rental charge for the penthouse but Joel pointed out that they could well afford it even though his salary in the theater was to be less than half what it had been in pictures.

"We can't live cramped up in a dark apartment," Joel complained, "after living an outdoor life. Besides, it will only be for the season and there'll be more money when we go back to the coast."

They had planned to go to Europe the next summer when Joel's play closed. Janet began to have doubts about the long awaited European trip when she saw the figures of the bank balance but she wouldn't say anything about it to Joel because he was so happy in his anticipation of doing a play. Janet was happy about it, too, because it gave her back a feeling about Joel's integrity and she wouldn't have exchanged that for anything in the world.

Perhaps it was because she was an easterner that she took more joy in getting ready for their new home than she ever had in any of them in California.

They lived in a Park avenue hotel during their first month in New York and Janet shopped for the furnishings for their apartment, patiently superintended the painters and decorators while Joel was busy at rehearsals.

Janet never went to rehearsals with him. He asked her once or twice if she would like to do so but, remembering his dislike of having her on the set when he was working, she refused.

She found that her own world of work kept her busy.

She was happier that September that she had been in the last four years. She had time to renew old acquaintances, to run up to Chester and see the old friends who were dear to her. She spent hours in the shops, buying nothing, but feasting her eyes on things she had not seen before.

She often dismissed her car and rode in subways and on the buses just to feel herself a part of something she had never forgotten.

One afternoon she stood at the corner of Fifth avenue and Sixtieth street and remembered the day that she had stood there with hot tears stinging her eyelids because heat and poverty had got her down, because she was sick with worry for Joel who had married her and therefore had to support the burden of a wife.

She wouldn't let Joel even see the apartment until the last rug was down, the last chair in place, the last picture hung. She had brought her own rugs and pictures, linens and silver. But she bought new furniture for the wainscoted drawing room with the huge Tudor fireplace that faced a wall of long windows which let in the winter sun. Again it was one room and not two bedrooms as they had had in California. There was a room off the kitchen for the maid. The cook came in by day.

There was a "study" for Joel, a dining room and a small spare room. It was a spacious, gracious apartment but not large according to Hollywood standards. But Janet easily forgot her Hollywood standards and loved the place.

She showed it proudly to Joel the night that it was finished when Joel had a brief respite from rehearsals. He was working hard and looking tired, a little older, she noted with a troubled frown. Later she was to wonder if she had done the right thing taking him from California. At least, California had been healthful.

But for a much longer time she was to know that she had done the one right thing in her life. That however, was much later.

When she was established in her new home, she got around at last to tackling the mound of mail that had awaited her. She had tossed her letters into a bag and forgotten about them. Plumbers and painters to be seen, curtains to be matched, pots and pans to buy had been so much more interesting than hearing again the things she had heard so many times.

Her trim, new little maid brought them to her one bright October day when she was lazily having her breakfast in bed.

She threw away the printed ads, announcements and appeals. Then she settled down to reading her letters.

She sighed. They were so exactly what she had expected they would be. News about new clothes, servant problems, who was playing what part.

Lisa had written: "The beautiful Gaynor boy who took your house is playing Paul in 'Headline Hunter'. What they see in him I do not know, but then who knows what the public will cotton to?"

Janet thought: That was the part that Joel wanted to play. Joel was, she knew, too old for the part, but she would have cut her tongue out rather than say it.

Joel was as handsome to her as ever but she, who was so sensitive to every change in him, knew that the screen had made him look years older than he was. He had been a star for three years and the public expected him to look exactly the same as he always had.

She put down the letter and picked up another. It was from Caroline Maynard and said, "I wrote Russell that you were going east and he wired me to send your address. I didn't know what it was going to be so I think you'd better drop him a note yourself. He's a right person to know because he knows everybody in New York and in case you don't realize it, he is an ardent admirer of yours."

Janet thought about that letter for several minutes. Then she picked up the telephone directory and ran through the B's.

She picked up her telephone and dialed Russell Bede's number.

"I oughtn't to do it," she said aloud, "but it can't do any harm to see an old friend."

Bedtime Story
By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S WELCOME

When Mrs. Longears heard the front door of the hollow stump bungalow rattling one morning she was quite sure she knew what was going on, or rather, going out.

"Is that you, Wiggy?" she called.

"Yes, my dear," answered the husband rabbit. "Did you want anything?"

"I want to know where you are going if you don't mind telling me," said the wife rabbit. "Of course, if it's a secret—"

"As if I would have secrets from you! Ha! Ha!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "That's funny."

"Yes, it may be," said Mrs. Longears. "But where are you going?"

"I am going out with a welcome, my dear," was the answer.

"A welcome, Wiggy? What is that?"

Glad Hand to Spring

"It's like this," said the rabbit gentleman. "Tomorrow is March the Twenty-first and everyone is glad to welcome April after the Winter. So I thought I would get up a welcome and go out to meet Spring when she gets here."

"What sort of a welcome?" asked the lady rabbit.

"Oh, I thought a sort of a welcome song," said Mr. Longears.

"But you can't sing—at least you can't sing very much," said Mrs. Longears. "Of course, Wiggy, I love your singing, but if it is to be a welcome song to Spring—"

"I know—yes—I'd better not sing," said Mr. Longears, begging his wife's pardon for interrupting her. "Well, I am not going to. I shall have others to do the singing to welcome Spring."

"Why, for instance?" asked Mrs. Longears, who always wanted to know all there was to know about everything. "Who will sing the Song of Welcome?"

"I thought of getting Uncle Butter, the goat; Mr. Stubtail, the bear; Mr. Twingtail, the pig, and some others of my animal friends," said Uncle Wiggily. "I will lead in the singing, but do none myself. They will do the chorus and there must be a leader."

"Oh, of course," agreed Mrs. Longears. "It sounds like a good idea to hear you tell it, Wiggy. How the singing will sound, I can tell better after I hear it."

"You'll be surprised," said the bunny uncle.

"I think I shall be," agreed the wife, with a smile. "But don't you know, Wiggy," she went on, "Spring isn't like the lady coming over the top of a hill. It's just a day on the calender, the same as Christmas and Fourth of July."

Calls His Friends

"I know," agreed Mr. Longears. "But what makes Christmas days different from the other days are the presents we give and get; and what makes Fourth of July different are the fireworks. So we'll make March 21 different by giving it a welcome in song."

With that Uncle Wiggily hopped out. He called together all his animal friends, the jolly bear, goat the pig and others. To sing the deep bass notes, Mr. Longears invited the bullfrogs.

Arranging them in a circle on a hilltop in the woods, Uncle Wiggily waved his paws. At once the Spring Welcome Song was sung.

The frogs croaked, the pig squealed, the bear growled and the goat bleated. And in the midst of the song, all of a sudden the cold March wind that had been blowing turned to a warm, gentle wind.

"Hurray!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Spring is here! Welcome, Spring!"

So that was the end of Winter.

And if the moving picture doesn't move so fast the ticket office can't catch up to it, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's garden.

Final Tributes Are Paid To Devoted Norwood Pastor

Funeral Of Rev. A. C. Reeves Marked By Many Manifestations Of Esteem

HE KEPT THE FAITH

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, March 20. — With many manifestations of the esteem in which he was held, the funeral of the Rev. A. C. Reeves, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, took place Tuesday morning.

Following a short service at the home, the remains were taken to the church for the public service. A well-filled auditorium, representative of all denominations, organizations and community interests, bore silent testimony to the place he filled in the district. The services were in charge of the Presbytery Moderator, the Rev. Mr. Rhodes of Cobourg. Prayers were offered by the Rev. C. E. Cleland and Rev. Mr. MacIntosh of Norwood. Portions of Scripture were read by the Rev. Mr. Sewell of Hastings and Rev. Mr. Black of Campbellford.

Rev. G. R. Duncan of Warkworth, who had been associated with Mr. Reeves longer than any of the present members of Presbytery, based his remarks on the Apostle Paul's words to Timothy: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Mr. Duncan, in reviewing the deceased's forty-two years of service in the ministry, made fitting reference to his sterling qualities, his outstanding service to his country and a life devoted to his fellow-man. A faithful, kindly man whose influence will live on. "He fought a good fight; he kept the faith." The Rev. Mr. Perrie of Hastings pronounced the benediction.

Born in Quebec.

Mr. Reeves was born in Ormston, Quebec, in 1868. He received his early education at Huntingdon Academy, and graduated from McGill University with a theological degree in 1894. In October of the same year he was ordained and inducted in the Presbyterian Church at Lakefield. Six years later he received a call from the Campbellford congregation where he remained for eight years. In 1909 he moved west and served in Moose Jaw and Qu'Appelle, Sask., districts. Retiring to Ontario in 1920, he was minister in the Presbyterian Church, Oshawa, until 1930, when he came to St. Andrew's Church, Norwood.

Thirteen ministers from the surrounding districts attended the funeral. Members of the High and Public Schools staffs and many of the students occupied seats in the centre aisle.

The active pall-bearers from the board of managers were: T. M. Lumsden, Perrin Rork, A. A. Waddell, Wm. Beckett, R. Campbell and W. Burgess. The honorary pall-bearers and flower-bearers were members of the session, board of managers and officers of the Sunday School, namely: George Ross, W. Gratton, Wm. and J. A. Robb, D. McNaughton, T. Ford, A. Innis, S. Buchanan, J. E. Thompson, Alex. Lumsden and Fred Innis.

Floral Tributes.

The bier was banked with many floral tributes, including wreaths from St. Andrew's congregation, St. Andrew's Session and Board of Managers, St. Andrew's W.M.S. and Ladies' Aid, and from the Presbyterian Church, Campbellford; sprays from the Sunday School, Y.W.A. and Young People's Guild; spray from Norwood Baptist Church; cross from Norwood Anglican Church; sprays from Miss Jean Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Easterbrook, Mrs. and Miss Mansfield, Mr. and Mrs. Simmons, Mrs. Nichol and family, and Mr. S. Mansfield; wreath from Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Nesbitt and family.

Burial was made in Prospect Cemetery, Toronto. Service at the grave was conducted by the Rev. Dr. McKerroll and the Rev. Mr. Conning.

Deceased is survived by his wife, one daughter, Mrs. H. W. Nesbitt, and two grand-daughters, Shirley and Jean Nesbitt of Winchester, to whom the sympathy of the entire community goes out in their great loss.

where there are exemptions. Mr. Lapointe said Canadians serving now with medical or other organizations in the Spanish civil war would not be affected by the Act or the exemptions as the Act was not retroactive.

Time to Assert Self.

Mr. Cahan endorsed the bill and went on to express hope steps would be taken to clear up all the statutes of the British parliament applicable to Canada in the same way.

"In my opinion it is due at this time that this parliament should again and again assert its sovereignty in regard to matters affecting the peace order and good government of Canada which are within its jurisdiction," he declared.

"We have emerged from the colonial status whether the judicial committee of the privy council recognizes his fact or not and, if they decline to recognize it, it is absolutely necessary in the present temper of this country that they should be brought to a condition of mind in which they are cognizant of certain fundamental facts."

A point of Canadian law which should be cleared up related to Canadian nationality, said Mr. Cahan. At present the only definition of a Canadian national was in the Immigration Act, an unsatisfactory condition.

"I fear sometimes we have more of the colonial spirit of inferiority than even our fathers and grandfathers had," he remarked. "Certainly the time has come in the history of this Dominion when, if we look to ascertain who are Canadians and who are Canadian nationals, we should be able to find it in some substantive enactment passed by the Canadian parliament."

Too Much Discretion?

Mr. Lapointe said there was something to be said on both sides of the question as to whether the government should have discretion to issue permits for enlistment in foreign forces. The provision was inserted to give elasticity but it might give too much discretion to the government. He therefore moved to strike it out of the bill. Mr. Cahan thought it should be left in but did not press the point.

Co-operative Commonwealth Federation members urged an express provision in the Act to make it apply to insurgent forces in a friendly State. Mr. Lapointe said it was often difficult to determine at a particular time whether a disturbance in a foreign country was a rebellion, an insurgency or a civil war such as would call for application of the law.

"This Act is not to apply to any little disturbance in a foreign country," said the Minister.

The Act was to apply to wars between one country and another. When a disturbance in a particular colantry reached the stage of civil war it was the duty of the government to apply the law and it would be applied to both sides of the conflict.

In Regard to Ships.

On a section prohibiting the building of equipment of ships for use by foreign States in war, the words "providing for permits" were also struck out but a provision was inserted to deal with persons building under contracts let before the start of the war.

Such persons would not be guilty under the sectionsif they gave notice of the circumstances to the government and obeyed any directions given by the government.

The section forbidding the recruiting within Canada for enlistment or engagement in the armed forces of any foreign State was amended to include "or any armed forces operating in such State." The section also excluded from operations of the Act recruiting in Canada by foreign consular or diplomatic officers of citizens of their own countries but who are Canadian nationals.

Mr. Cahan observed that certain foreign countries did not recognize certificates of naturalization issued in Canada. When he was Secretary of State he had refused to issue certificates to otherwise qualified applicants until they had obtained from their former governments a certificate of their denunciation of allegiance.

Recently foreign representatives in Canada had instituted propaganda and preparations for enlistment of their former citizens now domiciled in Canada to return home for war service. Such circumstances were not in the best interests of government in Canada.

Mr. Roy Longmuir acted as chairman for the following program: Community singing was led by Mr. Max Warren, who also played violin accompaniment; recitation, "St. Patrick's Birthday," by Miss Iva Ruble; violin solo, Mr. Max Warren.

Lunch, consisting of cake, sandwiches and apples, was served in hobo style, done up in St. Patrick-colored serviettes, served by Mrs. Roy Longmuir, Misses Grace Johnston, Iva Ruble and Ruth Menzie. The proceedings closed with the singing of the National Anthem. A small admission fee was made, resulting in over $7, door receipts. Weather permitting, a larger crowd planned to be in attendance.

Roads Blocked.

St. Patrick Day was ushered in by a heavy snowfall, accompanied by high winds which prevailed throughout the whole day. Concession roads were badly drifted with snow.

The stain from the island makes part of its journey in a tin can tied to the neck of a dusky Polynesian swimmer. The letter to the Brantford merchant left the island January 21 when the swimmer crawled for two miles through dangerous shoals to deliver the mail to the boat.

THOMAS HAWKINS IS LAID TO REST

Born In Omemee He Conducted Stores In Apsley, Kinmount And Janetville

JANETVILLE, March 20.— The funeral of the late Thomas O. Hawkins, who passed away suddenly as a result of a heart attack while on a cruise to the West Indies, was held recently in Port Hope.

The late Mr. Hawkins was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Hawkins and was born at Omemee, 80 years ago where he attended both public and high school. He then entered college at Montreal where he studied for a number of years for a minister of the Church of England.

Later Mr. Hawkins gave up his studies and conducted a store at Apsley and at Kinmount and about thirty years ago came to assist his parents in their store here.

The deceased was a highly respected citizen and his neighbours who have known him all these years were shocked and deeply grieved at news of his sudden death.

He was for many years a faithful attendant of the local United Church and a teacher of outstanding ability of the men's Bible Class. Of late years, owing to gradually failing health, Mr. Hawkins sought a more secluded life, outside of business hours and in the privacy of his own home he read and studied and kept in touch by radio with all the important questions of the day. No subject could be mentioned by anyone that Mr. Hawkins could not deal with intelligently.

In business the deceased was scrupulously honest and upright. His store contained a splendid assortment of lovely dishes, useful and ornamental at attractive prices as were also the dry goods and ready made garments which made this shop so popular with the thrifty housewives.

An impressive funeral service was conducted by Rev. W. H. V. Walker of the Presbyterian Church at Janetville and Rev. R. C. Wolfrain of the United Church, Janetville, both of whom spoke of the many fine and outstanding qualities of the deceased.

The pall bearers were J. H. Wilson, Ben Oliver, Buffalo, J. H. Williscone, Hector Inch, J. B. Greenaway and Norman Allin.

Surviving Mr. Hawkins are one brother William Hawkins, Port Hope, three nephews, George Hawkins, Los Angeles; Ross Hale, Sault Ste. Marie; Leslie Mills, Guelph; two nieces, Mrs. J. J. Oliver, Buffalo and Mrs. Elmer Soulres, South Bay; a cousin, Mrs. Brown of Peterborough attended the funeral.

The floral offerings were lovely and were a silent testimony of the high respect and esteem in which the deceased is held.

Interment was made in the family plot at Orono cemetery. A large number of local citizens journeyed over snow filled roads to Port Hope for the funeral on Thursday including Rev. and Mrs. Wolfrain, Rev. and Mrs. W. H. V. Walker, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Bath, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Stinson, Mrs. J. Howe, Mrs. J. Post, Mrs. W. Sanderson, Mrs. Orrine McGill, Mrs. W. Walker, Mrs. Charles Depell, Mr. M. McGill, Mr. J. Hall.

review of decisions." Mr. Hepburn said he heard nothing more of the matter until the Osbornes sought to see him to have the hotel's license cancelled.

R. G. Odette, Liquor Commissioner, informed Mr. Hepburn of threats made by the Osbornes, the Premier said, and the threats had been repeated to Roy Hamlint, Mr. Hepburn's secretary.

"I said to him to tell those damn blackmailers to go wherever they pleased," he said.

Mr. Olass said the accusation $700 was to be paid was a downright falsehood. He had been Dennis' solicitor on several occasions and his job in this case was to have objections by adjoining institutions to the hotel license withdrawn. This he did.

Mr. Ollis asked a full investigation and said he would stake his seat on the outcome if Mr. Henry would vouch for the charge.

An affidavit made by Dennis was read by Mr. Olass. He denied the charges and said Osborne had been discharged because of a shortage in cash and stock averaging $40 a month for 18 months. Osborne was tap-man at the hotel. After being discharged, the affidavit said, Osborne threatened to have the license cancelled and also spread slanderous stories about Dennis.

ONTARIO MINIMUM WAGE BILL PASSES UNOPPOSED

France Seizes All Nation's Private Plane Factories

Races To Nationalize Every War Industry Before End Of Month

Sweeping Decree Leaves Only Renault Munition Plant Untouched

END WAR PROFITS

List In Government Hands Includes Schneider Works Makers Of 55 Millimetre Guns

PARIS, March 22. —(AP)— The French government, racing against time to nationalize the country's war industries, took over two of France's largest airplane factories today and ordered expropriation of a third.

In addition to the three plants brought under the air ministry the government ordered nationalization of the "stamping and mechanical construction" company at Caudebec to complete the largest single group of private munitions works to be brought under government control at one time.

Today's sweeping decrees left the Renault munitions plant the only major war industry in private hands.

The airplane plant orders put into effect one of the final phases of Air Minister Pierre Cot's drive to take over all military airplane accessory factories by April 1.

No Production Figures.

Brought under actual control of his production schedule—guarded as a close military secret—was the Bleriot airplane plant at Suresnes and the Aeronautical Corporative Union plant at Bagles. The Louis Brequet plane factory at Le Havre has been decreed for nationalization and the government will take possession in the near future.

The growing list includes the mammoth Schneider works, producers of the famous 55-millimetre guns, the Brandt Arms plant, the Hotchkiss machine-gun factory and the Le Mans Cartridge Works.

Under the nationalization law to take the profits out of war, enacted August 17, 1936, Premier Blum's government must complete its program by March 31.

Only the part of the factories devoted to munitions is taken over by the government with other phases of their operations being left in private hands.

Human Nature Tends To Drift To Selfishness

So Declares Hon. H. H. Stevens In Addressing Open Forum On Sunday

OPPORTUNITY OF CHURCH

"Human nature cut from outside authority tends to drift to greed and selfishness," Hon. H. H. Stevens, leader of the Reconstruction Party in the last Federal election, declared before an Open Forum audience in George Street United Church Sunday afternoon. "Herein I think lies the great opportunity of the Christian church. The Christian church alone is qualified to bring about those changes in human nature necessary for good and just government by those in control."

A capacity audience greeted the distinguished parliamentarian and listened attentively to his address on "The Opportunity of the Christian Church in These Days of Changing Economic and Social Life." They heard him express a view that the Christian church take advantage of a great opportunity for bringing weighty influence to bear in the cause of community good.

Spent Boyhood Here

Recalling his boyhood days in Peterborough, Mr. Stevens said the world had progressed far from the days of gas-lit streets of Peterborough in that day. "Old methods which might have served in the gas lighting days of my youth in Peterborough will not serve today. An attitude of the church effective in those days is not necessarily effective today."

Despite the great changes in the realms of science and economics, however there has been no change in human nature, he continued. The problems of today were those which had been faced throughout the ages. Many of the social problems which are receiving the attention of legislators today existed in Biblical days and solutions for these problems were contained in the Bible for those who care to study them.

"Due mainly to scientific progress we have a situation which permits small groups of people to control large numbers. It is proper then to see that these men in control carry with them a due sense of responsibility. If those who have achieved positions of great power have not a sense of responsibility,

NO FORD PLANTS TO BE SHUT DOWN

Have No Labor Trouble Says Owner, And Will Keep Working

WAYE, Ga., March 22.—(AP)—Henry Ford said Saturday reports he has heard that he planned to shut down his plants in the event of a strike were "absolutely untrue."

"I have heard reports that I said we would shut down for three years if necessary, in the event of a strike," Ford said in an authorized interview at his winter home here. He did not mention the source of the reports.

"Well, that's not true. We are not going to shut down. We intend to keep operating to the last man. We'll stand our position."

Ford said there had been no labor trouble in his widely scattered plants but said he had experienced some difficulty with his source of supplies.

"The only object of a strike in any of our plants would be an effort to make us shut down. We don't intend to do that."

One of the dead was listed as a policeman, and five policemen were reported gravely wounded.

Twenty-two Nationalist women and 46 men were arrested after the rioting was brought under control.

AUTHORITY TO TAP COMPANY GAS LINE NOT GIVEN SCHOOL

Grief-Stricken Superintendent Admits Partial Authority For Giving Order

SUSPECTED BEHIND BLAST

NEW LONDON, Tex., March 22 (AP)—Frail and weary with grief, W. C. Short, superintendent, told a military inquiry today he was "partly responsible" for an informal gas line connection for the heating system of the explosion-wrecked London school and that he had not known of any particular objection to the connection.

The gas line is being studied among numerous other factors in the search for the cause of the disaster which killed 455 children and teachers.

Shaw, who lost a son in the explosion, was so weakened that he retired from the witness stand to a nearby cot. He is a sufferer from high blood pressure.

A Possible Clue.

"A flash of fire blinded me," Dial testified, at almost the same instant a man pulled a light switch in the manual training room.

The gas connection of which Shaw testified was with a line of the Par-ade Gasoline Company. D. L. Clark, field foreman for that company, testified the school had "tapped" the line for heating fuel without his knowledge or consent.

Shaw said he had talked with Earl Clover, Parade's aggrieved, observing the school was purchasing gas while oil fired gas was going to waste.

"Mr. Clover did not give us specific permission,' Shaw said "and warned that we were liable to be refused at any time I concluded that he did not particularly object."

Janitors ran pipe from the school to the company's line, Shaw said, and he was "partly responsible" for giving the order.

Dukedom Of Windsor Created Differing From All Others

No Subsidiary Title To Be Used Unless By Special Order Of The Crown

RESTRICT ROYAL HIGHNESS

LONDON, March 22 (C.P. Cable) —The Daily Telegraph to-day said it was understood letters patent creating the Dukedom of Windsor had now passed the Great Seal.

The new Dukedom, the paper said, differs from all other Dukedoms in that no other titles appertain thereto. No subsidiary title would therefore be available in the case of an heir being born of the Duke unless special provision were made by the Crown when such a contingency arose.

Children of former King Edward would be styled His or Her Royal Highness. But, according to the Royal Proclamation of 1917 when the Royal Family adopted the name of Windsor, the style Royal Highness or Prince or Princess, was restricted to the children of the Sovereign and his grandchildren in the male line.

Therefore, grandchildren of the Duke would have only the courtesy title Lord or Lady prefixed to their Christian names and the surname of Windsor. The eldest in the male line eventually would succeed to the Dukedom, but others would be known by such names as "Lord David Windsor" and "Lady Mary Windsor" and so on.

All Have Other Titles.

The other Royal Dukes all have one or more subsidiary titles, which could be used by their descendants as well as by the Duke of Connaught has always been known as Prince Arthur of Connaught, and it is likely the Duke of Kent's heir will be known as Prince Edward of Kent and he succeeds to his father's Dukedom.

Little Britain Pair Freed, Fraud Case

WILLIAM Heatlie, 17, and Lloyd G. Found, 19, of Little Britain, today were given two years' suspended sentence by Magistrate E. A. Gee when they pleaded guilty to charges of conspiring to defraud.

The youths told the court they had wished to go north to take up some land so had written a letter to an aged Little Britain woman telling her to place $100 in her car.

DREAM COMES TRUE

Thought He Fell, and Finds He Did —Two Storeys.

PORTLAND, Ore., March 22 (C.P.). — George Barr's realistic dream put him in a hospital, suffering a broken arm and shock. Dreaming he was falling, Barr awoke with a jolt to find he had tumbled from a second-storey window.

Earl of St. Andrews and Baron Downpatrick. The Duke of Connaught is Earl of Sussex.

It is not customary for members of the Royal family to assume such subsidiary titles, however. The eldest son of the Duke of Connaught has always been known as Prince Arthur of Connaught, and it is likely the Duke of Kent's heir will be known as Prince Edward of Kent and he succeeds to his father's Dukedom.

Propose Chain And Robes For Peterborough Mayor

Idea Is Mooted In Connection With City's Observance Of Coronation

WELL RECEIVED

A move is on foot to provide the mayor of the city with a chain of office and robes befitting to the dignity of his position, as a worthy means of commemorating the Coronation of Their Majesties King George VI and Queen Elizabeth.

As chairman of the citizen's committee entrusted with plans for the city's observance of the Coronation on May 12, Alderman James Dutton offers the novel suggestion that the occasion could be perpetuated by providing the chief magistrate with the insignia common to mayors of cities and towns in Great Britain.

In the belief that the suggestion has much to commend it, Alderman Dutton invites expressions of public opinion, in order that the committee which is fully representative of the city's religious, business and social life may be guided in reaching a decision on the matter.

Idea Well Received

The idea has been enthusiastically received by several representative citizens, who feel that adoption by the city of a little of the pageantry so closely associated with British tradition would tend to strengthen the dignity and authority attached to the office of mayor.

The chairman of the citizen's committee, pointed out, that such a proposal is also in line with recent efforts of the Honorable Arthur Roebuck who sought to elevate the dignity of the Bench in his edict that magistrates of the province wear morning suits or gowns.

His Honor Judge Sheedon L. Smoke gave the same idea local expression when he raised the status of his court by insisting that the Sheriff of Peterborough County don a cocked hat, frocked coat and sword and ruled that uniformed constables be placed on duty during court sittings.

"Because the majority of Canadian towns and cities have been content to follow the old English custom of having the mayor wear his ordinary clothes, is no reason why we should not adopt the custom of the mother country," Judge Smoke declared.

REBEL RETREAT BECOMES A ROUT

Loyalists Report Inability To Overtake Fleeing Insurgents

MADRID, March 22—(AP).—The Government northeastern army reported to-day it had pressed the insurgent retreat into a rout, capturing town after town in a rapid advance on the insurgent stronghold of Siguenza.

The main column of General Jose Miaja, commander of Madrid's armies, was reported to be approaching Almadrones, only 12 miles south of the insurgent base of operations at Siguenza, after a 28-mile advance from Guadalajara.

At no point dispatches from the vanguard commanders outside of Almadrones reported had the pursuing column been able to engage the fleeing insurgents, routed in their fifth attempt to smash Madrid's defences.

Launching the drive on Siguenza, Government bombers dropped 26,000 pounds of explosives on insurgent concentrations and supply dumps. Munition trains were said to have been destroyed and one bomb found its target on the railroad station, causing a great explosion that was believed to have demolished a gasoline depot.

1,000,000 Persons Face Starvation Unless China Gets Immediate Rain

SIANFU, Shensi Province, China, March 22—(AP)—Rain within two weeks was believed today to be the only hope of saving more than 1,000,000 persons from starving to death in China's vast drought and famine area, which was reported today to have stretched across Szechwan and Honan provinces and grasped all of Shensi.

Top provincial famine relief bureaus said 4,000,000 persons were on the verge of starvation in the 40,000 square mile area. Of this number, it was estimated 1,000,000 would be doomed to death unless rain falls.

Parents, it was anticipated, soon would be forced to sell their children for $2 or $3 each with dozens of marriageable age destined for the white slave trade.

Not Thought Widespread.

Miss Marion Coon of Aylmer, Ont., a United Church missionary now on furlough from the mission fields in Szechwan Province, Western China, declared that in recent letters she had received from her former co-workers at Chengtu she had been informed there were quite a number of refugees drifting into the city from famine areas.

From her knowledge of Szechwan Province and its fine system of irrigation, Miss Coon did not believe that the famine in that section could be very widespread. "It is a most fertile province with a splendid system of irrigation that has seldom much to learn the fear of crop failures."

She could not speak for Honan Province, but believed it probable the refugees to Chengtu were mainly drawn from that section and from out-lying parts of Szechwan Province.

DETROIT POLICE FORCE STRIKERS TO LEAVE PLANT

Ignore Threat Of City-Wide Auto Walkout In Ousting Printers

MEN LEAVE QUIETLY

DETROIT, March 22.—(AP).—Ignoring threats of a city-wide automotive strike if raids on striker held plants continued, police today entered the plant of the Thomas F. Henry Printing Co., and evicted strikers who have occupied the place since March 11. The strikers surrendered peacefully.

Fifty policemen entered the printing plant apparently taking the approximately 30 strikers by surprise. The strikers were questioned at the plant.

Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson issued an order last week on the strikers to show cause why an injunction should not issue, forbidding them to occupy the plant.

Twenty minutes after the police arrived, 28 strikers emerged, carrying folding cots, canned goods and other impedimenta of their 11-day occupation. They were not placed under arrest.

Thomas F. Henry, the proprietor, said the plant would resume operation on an open-shop basis and applications for re-employment would be considered from the strikers who, he said, "ceased to be employees last week."

The Henry plant has been non-union. Recognition of the International Typographical Union was the major issue in the strike.

Another Raid Planned

There were reports at least one other raid on a striker-occupied plant was planned by police to-day.

Mayor Frank J. Couzens declared that the raids would continue on captive plants where the police had reason to believe non-employees were among the occupants. He expressed doubt the workers would follow a leadership that would call a city-wide automotive strike, and said that a strike of workers who were just emerging from the depression would be "inhuman."

Nevertheless, handbills were distributed calling upon union members to "show Labor's strength" in a demonstration at Cadillac Square in the heart of Detroit, at 5 p.m. E.S.T. Tuesday.

The handbills bore headlines which said: "Stop police strike-breaking brutality," and "Protect the right to strike."

Thieves Upon Extended Tour Steal Cars In Seven Towns

Police Suspect Culprits Were Trying To Set Up Record Of Some Sort

START IN PARIS

BRANTFORD, Ont., March 22—(CP).—Western Ontario police were kept busy over the week-end checking up a long list of stolen cars. The car thieves apparently started on a cross-country trip and in their travels decided to see how many cars they could steal.

Thefts were reported from Hamilton, Burlington, Ancaster, Tillsonburg, Aylmer, Paris and Brantford. The course the thieves took started in Paris and then went on to Aylmer and from there to Tillsonburg, to Brantford, to Burlington, to Ancaster, and to Brantford. Where the trail ended no one seems to know.

Local police authorities believe the thefts were conducted by two or three young men. In Tillsonburg area three cars were seen to enter a farm yard, apparently to ask for food. Instead they ran to the barn and took out Grant Hom-er's car and cut across back country highways.

BRITAIN TO SPEED AIR MAIL SERVICE INDIA, AUSTRALIA

With Transfer English Base From Croydon To Portsmouth

MORE RADIO BEACONS

LONDON, March 22 (CP)—Plans for acceleration of air mail services to India and Australia are proceeding rapidly as the first stage of changing the main British base for the services from Croydon to Portsmouth has begun.

Flying boats on Empire air mail routs to and from England, South Africa and Australia are now arriving and leaving from Southampton.

By Jan. 1, 1938, a new agreement between Britain and Australia will come into effect under which mail will be flown eventually from England to Sydney, Australia, in seven days against the present 12-day schedule.

A twice-weekly service will be operated between Britain and Australia, the Commonwealth controlling the Singapore-Sydney section of the route. Australia has agreed to the use of flying boats, instead of land planes as at present, on that section, with the provision that the agreement may be reviewed if they prove unsatisfactory.

The route from Port Darwin, northern territory, will be to Port Roper, Normanton, across Cape York Peninsula to Townsville and then down the coast to Brisbane and Sydney. Sir Robert Parkhill, Australian defence minister, has announced £200,000 ($1,000,000) will be spent in protecting the east coast route, including installation of six radio beacons.

3 And 10 Cent Rates

Britain will carry first-class mail at the rate of 1½d (three cents) per half-ounce while Australia will impose a surcharge of 5d (10 cents) a half-ounce, against 1s 6d at present.

The Britain-Singapore section of the faster mail service is scheduled to start next October 1. India, Burma and Ceylon are participating in the scheme as well as Australia. Entry of Ceylon into the plan means that the existing feeder service between Karachi and Madras will be extended to Colombo.

Meanwhile the air mail service to South Africa is being improved. Twenty-seven radio beacons are being established in Africa. By the end of 1937 eight services a week will operate to Egypt and five a week to Durban.

Introduction of new flying boats on the service between Britain and Alexandria is the first stage in the accelerated service. Formerly mails were flown from Croydon to Paris, then transferred to trains between Paris and Brindisia whence they

Japanese Honor Household Pets

Tokio, March 23—(AP)

BUDDHIST priests said solemn prayers yesterday for the souls of departed cats, dogs, monkeys, rabbits, goldfish—and even singing crickets.

Led by Tesui Oshima, Chief Abbot of the Jodo Buddhist Sect, more than 100 priests solemnized rites for the late pets, some 50,000 of them, buried at Saishinji Temple, which is reputed to have the world's greatest cat and dog cemetery.

The devout Japanese thus honored their faithful household pets as part of the Higan Period, during which Nipponese visit cemeteries to pray for their deceased relatives.

Ellis Promises To Ask Rowe His Stand On Repeal Of Income Tax Act

TORONTO, March 22—(CP)—Ontario's Minimum Wage Bill to permit the establishing of minimum wages for 400,000 male workers passed third and final reading in the Ontario Legislature today at the first morning sitting of the session. There was no opposition.

Premier Hepburn, leading the House, moved third reading of the Power Contracts Validation Act, an act to confirm a recently negotiated revised contract between the Ontario Hydro- Electric Power Commission and the Ottawa Valley Power Company.

Present Act Illegal?

Wilfrid Heighington (Cons., Toronto-St. Davids) urged the preamble to the 1936 legislation by which certain power contracts were declared null should be repealed. This preamble declared the commission had acted illegally in contracting for power generated outside Ontario.

If the original contracts were illegal, the present one would be also, declared Mr. Heighington.

Mr. Hepburn said Hydro issues had been thoroughly debated in the legislature, in the press and on the platform.

"Inasmuch as the legislature has said so, these contracts are illegal," he said.

"Do you believe the original contracts were illegal because the municipalities were not consulted?" asked Arthur Ellis (Cons., Ottawa South).

"I'll answer that by saying this bill will not be changed," declared Mr. Hepburn.

The bill carried without division.

Third reading was given to an act to encourage the mining of iron ore. The measure will place a bounty of $4.50 a ton on beneficiated iron ore.

Mr. Heighington vainly suggested the measure stand until the committee on privileges and elections has reported on its inquiry into

LEOPOLD PAYING VISIT TO LONDON

Acts Own Foreign Minister To Link Isolation Policy With Security Pact

LONDON, March 22. — (AP).— Youthful King Leopold III of the Belgians, seeking to identify his new "isolation policy" with Great Britain's hopes for a new treaty guaranteeing western European security, arrived to-day for conferences with Foreign Secretary Eden and other British leaders.

Leopold's visit, described as "private," is to include a State visit to Buckingham Palace Wednesday night.

Leopold announced in his famous October 14 speech that Belgium wants her territory guaranteed as it was in the Locarno Treaty but no longer is willing to promise military aid to any other nation.

Acting virtually as his own foreign minister, Leopold was believed to be seeking abolition of conversations that have proceeded between the British, French and Belgian General Staffs ever since German re-occupation of the Rhineland scrapped the Locarno treaty.

CORONATION SEEN COSTLIEST SHOW

Will Take $2,270,000 Of Public Funds And $500,000 From The Royal Purse

LONDON, March 22.—(CP). — The Coronation of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in May will be the costliest affair of its kind in the history of Great Britain. It will take approximately $2,270,000 out of public funds, according to treasury estimates.

In reality the Government will spend about $2,620,000, but $350,000 will be returned in the form of revenue from procession grandstand seats.

This is a far greater sum than has been spent on any previous Coronation.

Expenses of the Royal household in connection with the coronation, including entertainment of Royal and foreign dignitaries are estimated at $500,000.

Mystery Surrounds Three-Day Conference Over Strike Ballot

Saturday Sees 18 Vice-Presidents Of Running Trades Meet Company Officers

ALL DELEGATES MUM

Delegates Gather Tuesday To Hear Result Of Sub-Committee Decision

MONTREAL, March 22.—(CP).—Heads of the railways and rail union leaders after re-opening negotiations in their wage dispute, kept silence to-day on the progress of their discussions.

Neither party would admit any more than that they had got together Saturday for the first time since the men began a coast-to-coast ballot last month on the question of a strike for higher pay. What transpired at the meeting, said by a railway official to have been asked by the men's representatives, stayed a mystery.

The get-together was understood to have been preceded by definition of the attitude of the men's general conference committee toward the proposed strike. But what that attitude was remained just as secret.

The rail union delegates, representing an estimated 117,000 workers, had been meeting here for three days before the Saturday conference, sitting behind locked doors at the strike ballots and decide for or against a strike. On their secret deliberations, all delegates preserved an instructed silence.

Round-Table Meet.

Their general conference sent the vice-presidents of 18 railway running trades to the meeting with the company officers, Saturday. Howard B. Chase, conference chairman, was among the number who conferred with S. J. Hungerford, Canadian National President, and President Sir Edward Beatty of the Canadian Pacific.

To-day, indications were the labor man's meeting would stand adjourned while the sub-committee continued negotiations. The delegates were to meet again, to-morrow, when it was expected they would receive a report from the men who met the company officials.

The employees' representatives were seeking return of 10 per cent. depression pay cuts. The railways, in line with the majority report of a conciliation board, have announced their intention of restoring only three per cent. this year. The men's attitude is based on the board's minority report.

Any Good Heater An Aid To Romance

Minneapolis, March 22—(UP)

A UNIVERSITY of Minnesota psychology professor yesterday exploded a theory made popular by the poet Alfred Lord Tennyson that in the spring a young man's fancy turns to thoughts of love.

"It's all in the mind and in the tradition of May frolics," Prof. M. A. Tinker said. "The fact that this is the first day of spring doesn't mean a thing.

"A man can be just as romantic if the oil heater is turned to spring heat or if the car heater is behaving properly."

ONTARIO HOUSE PUTS ON STEAM CLOSE THURSDAY

Speed Limit Up Today As Budget Debate Closes—School Tax Last Day

HONOR ROWE TONIGHT

TORONTO, March 22 (C.P.).—Ontario Legislature met for its first morning sitting of the session today. They will also be held to-morrow, Wednesday and Thursday in an attempt to reach prorogation before Good Friday.

Debate was expected to-day on the Bill reported from Municipal Law Committee for third reading to raise the speed limit to 50 miles in the country and 30 miles in cities, towns and villages.

Present limits are 35 and 20 miles.

The Bill was called on Friday, but Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon asked it be delayed. It is not a Government measure, and the Government may ask to have the question laid over until next session.

The Budget debate will be wound up to-day. Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon will conclude it. There will be no night sitting.

Before Friday's clash between Premier Hepburn and George Henry Conservative House Leader, over affidavits alleging irregularities in the issuance of a beer authority to a Toronto hotel, the Premier had promised Mr. Henry there would be a night sitting on Monday.

Banquet For Rowe

The Conservatives will gather to-night at a dinner in honor of Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader.

Debate on the Separate school tax issue may go over until the last day of the session. Standing for second reading is a bill in Mr. Henry's name to repeal amendments made last session to the Assessment Act relating to the allocation of taxes between Public and Separate schools.

Inquiry into charges of "blackmail" and "other conduct unbecoming a member," made against Dr. A. Duncan Roberts, Sault Ste. Marie, by Premier Hepburn, has been postponed for at least a month. The Committee on Privileges and Elections has been empowered to sit after prorogation and report next session.

Sessions of a committee between sessions of the House are unusual for the Ontario Legislature. The 46 members of the committee will be entitled to $16 a day and travelling expenses.

Skipper 77, Eagerly Awaiting Start Of 56th Lake Season

Capt. Sam. Carrow Has Never Lost a Man, Wrecked a Ship Or Called For Aid

STARTED WHEN 16

CHEBOYGAN, Mich., March 22 (C.P.). — Captain Sam Carrow is 77 years old, but he eagerly awaits the start if his 56th season of sailing on the Great Lakes.

He will command the excursion steamer Perry, owned by the Arnold Transit Co., which plies between Cheboygan, Mackinac Island, and Les Cheneaux Islands.

During his long career as a skipper, Captain Carrow never has lost a man, never has wrecked a ship, and never has called on the coastguard for assistance.

From earliest boyhood his life was linked with the water. His father, who died when young Sam was but two weeks old, operated a fishing smack on the St. Lawrence, but most of the son's life was spent on the Great Lakes.

At 16 he began sailing with Captain Charles Hart on the schooner C. Hart, which traded groceries for fish with Indians of the Drummond Island and Sault Ste. Marie sections.

He became an expert cook, but he often regretted it because he frequently was drafted to the galley. Once Captain Sam showed his dislike for the task by overstaying shore leave and the ship sailed on.

GANG TRIGGER MAN IN TORONTO JOBS PICKED BY FOUR

Suspect Nabbed In Windsor Will Go To Queen City For Trial

ARRESTED ONCE, FREED

WINDSOR, Ont., March 22 (CP).—Identified by four witnesses as trigger man in a Toronto bank robbery, Fred Podermeketf, 26, alias Fred Preston, wanted on two charges of bank robbery in that city, was turned to Toronto to-day to stand trial. Police arrested Podermeketf yesterday in a surprise visit to a home here.

The man yielded to arrest without a struggle and denied he was involved in the bank robberies. He has been living in a hotel here for many months and police said he formerly resided in Winnipeg.

Two bandits were involved in both robberies Podermeketf is suspected of. One took place on January 10, 1936, when the Dominion Bank branch at Davenport Road and Laughton Avenue was robbed of $4,400. Four of the six witnesses brought here from Toronto yesterday identified Podermeketf as one of the gunmen.

The other robbery occurred on May 20, 1935, when the Bank of Commerce branch at Lansdowne Avenue and Wallace Street was held up and $1,500 taken.

Windsor police said Podermeketf had been an employee of the Michigan Club here closed down in a police gambling raid three weeks ago. He was arrested at that time and fined as being a "found-in." It was said he was employed as a dice man at one of the gaming tables.

Detective Nimmo said a previous arrest was made one week ago in Toronto when Harry Mooney alias Robert Davey, 25, Toronto, was charged with being in possession of an offensive weapon. Nimmo said Mooney has also been identified in connection with the bank holdups.

Jokes To The Last Even With Suicide

Akron, O., March 22—(UP)

"NEVER a dull moment," H. J. Fink would say—then set people laughing with a sleight-of-hand trick. He made people laugh at his patent medicine stand, too, but business has been pretty bad lately.

Last night he walked into a bar: "Give me some water. . . . Here's something you've never seen before." He dropped a bit of powder into the glass, drank, and slumped to the floor. The crowd laughed. They playfully dropped his head on a pillow. The bartender tried to lift him. Fink was dead. In his stomach the Coroner found cyanide.

ONLY BE OUSTED BY PEOPLE'S WILL SAYS ABERHART

Step Out However When Faintest Hint Given Province Wants Rowe As Leader

DEFENDS LICENSING BILL

By George Finlay
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

EDMONTON, March 22 (CP) — Only the "will of the people" will force the retirement of Hon. William Aberhart from the premiership of Alberta.

"I can only be ousted by the will of the people," said the premier speaking at the Edmonton Prophetic Bible Conference last night.

He declared he was not alarmed at the reported efforts of P. J. Rowe, member of parliament for Athabasca, to "oust" him from the premiership. Criticism of the Aberhart government by Mr. Rowe recently led to his being read out of the Social Credit caucus at Ottawa.

"When you give me the faintest hint that you want P. J. Rowe or his appointee, I shall not even offer any objection," said Mr. Aberhart. No one man was essential to the Social Credit movement, he said.

"I am persuaded this movement is not of man, but of God; therefore I, nor no other individual, can be essential."

The premier defended the government's trades and occupations licensing bill, now before the legislature.

He denied the government intended to license "farmers and housemaids," and declared:

"There is no need of licensing occupations or businesses which do not corrupt nor interfere with the welfare of others."

BIBLE PRESENTED AS KING CROWNED

Custom Of Giving Monarch Copy Of Sacred Book Fairly Modern

LONDON, March 22 (CP)—Comparatively modern in the Coronation rites replete with tradition and antiquity is the ceremony of presenting the King with a copy of the Holy Bible, coming right after the actual crowning.

This presentation of "the most valuable thing that this world affords" has been observed for certain since the coronation of William of Orange and of Mary in 1689. After the Bible is replaced on the altar, a threefold benediction is pronounced by the Archbishop of Canterbury:

"Then shall the King go to his Throne and be lifted up into it by the archbishops, bishops and other peers of the kingdom." Historically the phrase, "lifted up," is full of significance, for it goes back to the days when rulers in this land and in others were actually "lifted up" upon shields, or stones, and were thus enthroned.

Thereafter follows the "homage publicly and solemnly made unto the King." First come the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, followed by bishops of the primary sees, the Prince of Wales—if any—and other princes of the blood royal, and the other peers of the realm.

The "homage" consists in kneeling before the crowned Sovereign, speaking the words of fealty, touching his crown, and kissing his cheek. All the princes and peers remove their coronets for this ceremony.

The Archbishop of Canterbury acts in all particulars for other bishops and the princes of the blood royal. Go their homage one by one. The first of the five orders of other peers act on behalf of the rest of their order. After the singing of a paean, the drums beat, the trumpets sound "and all the people shout":

God Save King George,
Long live King George,
May the King live for ever.

Following this acclamation comes the anointing and crowning of the Queen.

These are the facts—

You smoke because you enjoy it—because smoking gives you pleasure, gives you that something which nothing else in life quite supplies. How much pleasure it gives you depends upon the tobacco. Ever and always, "it's the tobacco that counts".

Speaking particularly of cigarettes, a cigarette cannot give you more than pleasure, satisfaction and comfort—it is not in any sense a cure-all. The only extras in a cigarette that can increase your pleasure are extra good tobacco, perfectly matured; extra pure paper and extra skill in manufacture. Together they insure that pleasing aroma and straight tobacco taste that alone give you a clean, gratifying smoke.

To give the greatest pleasure to the smoker is the incentive which guides this company in the selection, ageing and conditioning of the tobacco, and in the manufacture processes that follow in the making of cigarettes.

STORM HURRIES DUCE FROM LIBYA

British Comments On Italian Defeat In Spain Angers Rome Press

ROME, March 22.—(CP-Havas).—A Libyan sand storm, not new International treaties, was the reason for Premier Mussolini's sudden departure for Tripoli yesterday, it was officially explained here today.

The sand storm, it was declared prevented the Premier from flying to the oasis of Ghadames, in the interior, as he had planned, and therefore hastened his departure.

British newspaper comments on the reported rout of Italian contingents in Spain drew angry blasts from the newspaper Messagero.

"Anti-Fascism excluded the possibility that Malaga, which it believed impregnable, would fall," the newspaper said. "A few days later Malaga fell to the insurgents, not without the efficient support of Italian volunteers, a fact the Valencia communiques and reports in the British press appear to ignore.

"Episodes of this type will repeat themselves. The British nose, already longer than that of their great, Ras Tafari (Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia), may be further lengthened, so much so that no gas mask can hide it."

NOW YOU KNOW.

Raymond Tweffort, speaking to the National Association of Merchants Tailors of America in convention in Philadelphia recently, declared that the average man should spend $1,000 annually for clothes and, to be well dressed, at least $4,000. To demonstrate what he termed a few of the necessities in a man's wardrobe, Tweffort pointed to an exhibit including a green tuxedo coat and hat to match, an opera cape with scarlet satin lining, and a strawberry cutting coat, with red and black striped trousers.

SUITS TOO SCANTY

Southern styles indicate that bathing suits will be back again to the very scant vogue, after a flurry of swish dressmakers suits last year. Some, however, hint of child's rompers, and practically all of the newest ones are bright-colored greens, blues or fire-engine reds. You wear, over your curls, the simplest of skull caps, either white or jet black, to keep out the waves.

MORE CYCLING CLOTHS

Cycling clothes are more important than ever, with one of the new cycling suits called "Dairy, Dairy," English, of course. This bicycle-built-for-two ensemble has a short green linen jacket with short pleated divided skirt of being linen. Beige socks which come to the knee and a round cap set on the back of the head complete it . . . ideal for tennis, too.

The second style has its wrist slashed and fastened again with three tabs and buttons, with a contrasting color in its piping: black gloves with Coronation yellow, grey with Coronation blue, beige or brown with green trimming.

Red Cross Visiting Housekeepers Have Been Kept Busy During Winter

At the March meeting of the local Red Cross branch, reports were received from the various standing committees. The Nutrition classes, which have been held weekly since January 14 with an enrolment of 37, concluded March 4th.

Interest in the Home Nursing classes, which are now in their eighth week is well maintained. Two interesting and informative lectures by Dr. Murray Fraser on "First Aid" and "Communicable Diseases" were much appreciated by members of the seven classes. This week four dietitians, Mrs. Muir, Mrs. Sellitt, Miss Hayes and Miss Morgan will address the classes on Invalid Cookery and Food Needs of an adult. The course will be concluded next week by a lecture by Dr. Fitzpatrick on "Care and Feeding of Infants and Children". At this meeting the certificates for attendance will be given out by Mrs. R. H. Turner, the president of the local Red Cross Branch.

Owing to the recruitment of "flu" in some parts of the city, the visiting homekeepers have had many calls made upon them, testifying to the excellent service they have been able to render. Several letter of appreciation have been received and were read at the executive meeting.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta

THERE are some people who are said never to know what fears mean. The greater hero, however, is the man who is afraid but who is too proud to show it. That is real heroism, and a man who has that sort of courage will go through life and become a great leader.

—Earl Jellicoe.

Dear Friends:

I have written you before to cast out fear, but there is a form of it which makes us reach the thing we are striving for. I will tell you some of my own fears, and maybe you will find some of yours amongst them.

I fear to be unjust, so maybe I err on giving the other fellow the benefit of the doubt, and I hope the same thing will be granted to me. I fear to incur debts of friendship which I cannot repay, so I try to keep the slate clean as far as I can.

I fear to judge anyone or criticise them unduly, for my own shortcomings are ever before me, and I have all I can handle in keeping my own doorstep clean. I fear to belittle the efforts of friends or relatives, as I know the desolation it can cause in the human heart.

I fear debt in buying goods, for if I let myself get careless in what I owe, I let myself down and cheat the other fellow, so if I cannot pay ten dollars I pay one, and ten ones keeps the sheet clean.

I fear to let people put me under an obligation, for then I give them a weapon to use against me to do their will or be accused of ingratitude, yet when kindnesses are offered me and it gives pleasure to some other to do things for me, I accept with the reservation that later I shall repay.

I fear utter dependence on anyone for my bread and board, and at the risk of being called proud, I have petitioned God that He will never let it happen, and I know He has heard my prayer, and that when I am unable to do that He will take me out of it. In the meantime I use all the power He has given me, and all my physical strength to keep it from happening.

I fear pride in myself or what I can do, for I am conscious of all I lack and that keeps me humble, and yet I fear to lose the pride that will not let we do a shabby thing to another, that keeps me from whining or asking favors, and which gives me the courage to go on against overwhelming odds.

I fear greed and envy of the things which others possess, and I fear ever getting the love of money, for after all it is only the means to an end and in itself is nothing. I fear pride of birth, for that is a thing I had nothing to do with, and yet it has stood me in good stead many times and made me too proud to admit defeat.

I fear sickness with all that it entails of others having to do the things I should do, yet if it comes I try to accept those things gracefully knowing I would do the same to another in their time of need.

I do not fear death, but sometimes I fear in case I might be doing something I should not be doing when it happens along, but here's hoping.

So you see there are some fears that build us up instead of pulling us down. Fears that brace our characters and keep us from being cowardly and mean, and which help us to be the kind of person we would like to be. There are some who will not admit fear of any kind, but that is fool-hardiness and is no real good to anyone.

We need bravery and heroism but we also need a decent sort of fear that will not permit us to let ourselves nor those who depend on us, down in any way. There is a pig-headedness which masquerades as bravery, but it is fear blurring people into a belief of lack of fear.

So if your fears are decent ones, use them as stepping stones towards the life you want to lead and let them help you to be what you want to be. Do not fear to write to your friend.

ROBERTA.

ROBERTA'S MAIL.

Dear Quid Est:

Thank you for such a lovely letter. I shall answer it privately next week, when I am less busy, for sickness is still with us, worse luck. What you say is true, all these things make us sad in a way, but the world must go on and we with it. I surely appreciate all you say, and shall continue to try and do my best. Look for a letter soon. Yours,

ROBERTA.

Dear "Babe":

What a lovely surprise in getting your letter. Thank you for all your kind enquiries, and things are some better, altho' sickness still is with us. But it will pass like everything else, and we shall enjoy the good things all the more. Am so glad I have been of so much help to you and others you mention, and look for a letter on the subject you speak of at an early date. Thank you, and do write again soon. Yours, ROBERTA.

Dear "Jon":

I judge you are a man and feel embarrassed at writing to a woman, but I have many men clients for psychology so do not be afraid to state your question, and I shall do my best to answer it. If private reply is necessary, please enclose stamped addressed envelope. All correspondence is confidential and no one sees your letters but myself, and some are destroyed immediately after being answered. So write frankly having no fear. Thank you, Jon, for all you tell me, and am so glad you get so much pleasure from my articles. Letters like yours are encouraging.

Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Dear "Evelyn":

Didn't you write before under another pen-name? Do not think you are a bother. I know I should have been glad to write someone when I was an inexperienced girl, for advice such as you need. Take the position offered, as there is nothing disgraceful about honest work. Keep up your studies so that you will be able to take the position you crave, and do as I told you before in private reply not letting yourself doubt, and some nice day you will be doing the work you want, instead of work you must do. Good luck to you, and keep your courage high. Let me hear how you make out. Yours, ROBERTA.

Dear "Pete":

Glad you wrote again. State your questions clearly and I shall try to help you. Yes I know boys have their problems too, and can see you need advice badly. But I thought by the tone of your letter that you were fooling me. Your parents should have made things more clear to you, as how else can you know what you are up against. So ask in full surety that no one else will see your letter. So glad you find so much food for thought and that my articles have interested. No I am not a girl, and have lots of experience. Looking for your letter soon. Who gave you my address? Yours, ROBERTA.

To "York, Toronto":

Thank you my dear. It is nice of you to let me know how many read my articles up there. No, I only write for the Peterborough Examiner, and do not know the lady in question and have never read any of her stuff at all. I shall surely write on the subject mentioned, and hope you like it. Do write again. Yours,

ROBERTA.

To Father four grown-up children:

I can sympathize with you and shake you at the same time. You should never have left conditions yet so far. Look for an article on this question soon, and in the meantime, assert yourself. No one has any use for the jelly-fish sort of person and that is what you are when you do not put your foot down. There will be more respect shown when you do. Let me know how you make out, but do something about it.—Roberta.

And to all the rest of you who do not want a personal reply, thank you one and all for your comments and I deeply appreciate them and shall try to continue to deserve them. Bless you all, and do write again.—ROBERTA.

Mrs. F. M. Somerville presented the certificates. The bronze medallion was awarded to Isabel Young; Intermediate certificates to Betty Puffer and Vivian Carter; Elementary certificates to June Westwood, Doreen Spenceley, Helen Curry, Katherine Calladine and Wanda Jaquish.

The General Secretary, Miss Lois Brownscombe, congratulated the juniors on their success in winning the campaign and asked their cooperation in boosting the forthcoming events at the 'Y', in an Easter play, a rummage sale, and the Gymnasium Pageant.

Ruth Sage moved a vote of thanks to the losing gymnasium classes in the campaign and the Physical Committee, for the enjoyable luncheon.

STORM HURRIES DUCE FROM LIBYA

British Comments On Italian Defeat In Spain Angers Rome Press

ROME, March 22.—(CP-Havas).—A Libyan wind storm, not new International trouble, was the reason for Premier Mussolini's sudden departure for Tripoli yesterday, it was officially explained here today.

The sand storm, it was declared, prevented the Premier from flying to the oasis of Ghadames, in the interior, as he had planned, and therefore hastened his departure.

British newspaper comments on the reported rout of Italian contingents in Spain drew angry blasts from the newspaper Messagero.

"Anti-Fascism excluded the possibility that Malaga, which it believed impregnable, would fall," the newspaper said. "A few days later Malaga fell to the insurgents, not without the efficient support of Italian volunteers, a fact the Valencia communiques and reports in the British press appear to ignore.

"Episodes of this type will repeat themselves. The British nose, already longer than that of their guest, Ras Tafari (Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia), may be further lengthened, so much so that no gas mask can hide it."

SHORTS TO BE LONGER

Marcel Rochas disappointed Paris when he decreed that shorts must be longer this year, but he quickly made up for it by showing transparent ones of open-crochet string. His main interest is very obviously all the classes on Invalid Cookery and Food Needs of an adult. The course will be concluded next week by a lecture by Dr. Fitzpatrick on "Care and Feeding of Infants and Children". At this meeting the certificates for attendance will be given out by Mrs. R. H. Turner, the president of the local Red Cross Branch.

Owing to the prevalence of "flu" in some parts of the city, the visiting housekeepers have had many calls made upon them, testifying to the excellent service they have been able to render. Several letter of appreciation have been received and were read at the executive meeting.

WEDDING IN PLANE

An airplane wedding outfit with electric flashlight buttons was one of the Parisian fashion showings. Vieing with the wedding outfit in interest were sports suits dangling with lemons, oranges and pimentos.

NOW YOU KNOW.

Raymond Twyeffort, speaking to the National Association of Merchants Tailors of America in convention in Philadelphia, recently, declared that the average man should spend $1,000 annually for clothes and, to be well dressed, at least $4,000. To demonstrate what he termed a few of the necessities in a man's wardrobe, Twyeffort pointed to an exhibit including a green tuxedo coat and hat to match, an opera cape with scarlet satin lining, and a strawberry cutaway coat with red and black striped trousers.

Interest in the Home Nursing classes, which are now in their eleventh week is well maintained. Just Between Us Women

THERE are some people who are said never to know what fears mean. The greater hero however, is the man who is afraid but who is too proud to show it. That is real heroism, and a man who has that sort of courage will go through life and become a great leader.

—Earl Jellicoe.

Dear Friends:

I have written you before to cast out fear, but there is a form of it which makes us reach the thing we are striving for. I will tell you some of my own fears, and maybe you will find some of yours amongst them.

I fear to be unjust, so maybe I err on giving the other fellow the benefit of the doubt, and I hope the same thing will be granted to me. I fear to incur debts of friendship which I cannot repay, as I try to keep the slate clean as far as I can.

I fear to judge anyone or criticise them unduly, for my own shortcomings are ever before me, and I have all I can handle in keeping my own doorstep clean. I fear to belittle the efforts of friends or relatives, as I know the desolation it can cause in the human heart.

I fear debt in buying goods, for if I let myself get careless in what I owe, I let myself down and cheat the other fellow, so if I cannot pay ten dollars I pay one, and ten ones keeps the sheet clean.

I fear to let people put me under an obligation, for then I give them a weapon to use against me to do their will or be accused of ingratitude, yet when kindnesses are offered me and it gives pleasure to some other to do things for me, I accept with the reservation that later I shall repay.

I fear utter dependence on anyone for my bread and board, and at the risk of being called proud, I have petitioned God that He will never let it happen, and I know He has heard my prayer, and that when I am unable to do for myself He will take me out of it. In the meantime I use all the power He has given me, and all my physical strength to keep it from happening.

I fear pride in myself or what I can do, for I am conscious of all I lack and that keeps me humble, and yet I fear to lose the pride that will not let me do a shabby thing to another, that keeps me from whining or asking favors, and which gives me the courage to go on against overwhelming odds.

I fear greed and envy of the things which others possess, and I fear ever getting the love of money, for after all it is only the means to an end and in itself is nothing. I fear pride of birth, for that is a thing I had nothing to do with, and yet it has stood me in good stead many times and made me too proud to admit defeat.

I fear sickness with all that it entails of others having to do the things I should do, yet if it comes I try to accept these things gracefully knowing I would do the same to another in their time of need.

I do not fear death, but sometimes I fear in case I might be doing something I should not be doing when it happens along, but here's hoping.

So you see there are some fears that build us up instead of pulling us down. Fears that brace our characters and keep us from being cowardly and mean, and which help us to be the kind of person we would like to be. There are some who will not admit fear of any kind, but that is fool-hardiness and is no real good to anyone.

We need bravery and heroism but we also need a decent sort of fear that will not permit us to let ourselves nor those who depend on us, down in any way. There is a pig-headedness which masquerades as bravery, but it is fear binding people into a bellef of lack of fear.

So if your fears are decent ones, use them as stepping stones towards the life you want to lead and let them help you to be what you want to be. Do not fear to write to your friend.

ROBERTA.

ROBERTA'S MAIL

Dear Quid Est:

Thank you for such a lovely letter. I shall answer it privately next week, when I am less busy, for sickness is still with us, worse luck. What you say is true, all these things make us sad in a way, but the world must go on and we with it. I surely appreciate all you say, and shall continue to try and do my best. Look for a letter soon. Yours,

ROBERTA.

Dear "Babe":

What a lovely surprise in getting your letter. Thank you for all your kind enquiries, and things are some better, altho' sickness still is with us. But it will pass like everything else, and we shall enjoy the good things all the more after. Yes, glad I have been of so much help to you and others you mention, and look for a letter on the subject you speak of at an early date. Thank you, and do write again soon. Yours, ROBERTA.

Dear "Jon":

I judge you are a man and feel embarrassed at writing to a woman, but I have many men clients for psychology so do not be afraid to state your question, and I shall do my best to answer it. If private reply is necessary, please enclose stamped addressed envelope. All correspondence is confidential and no one sees your letters but myself, and some are destroyed immediately after being answered. So write frankly having no fear. Thank you, Jon, for all you tell me, and am so glad you got so much pleasure from my articles. Letters like yours are encouraging.

Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Dear "Evelyn":

Didn't you write before under another pen-name? Do not think you are a bother. I know I should have been glad to write someone when I was an inexperienced girl, for advice such as you need. Take the position offered, as there is nothing disgraceful about honest work. Keep up your studies so that you will be able to take the position you crave, and do as I told you before in private reply not letting yourself doubt, and some nice day you will be doing the work you want, instead of work you must do. Good luck to you, and keep your courage high. Let me hear how you make out. Yours, ROBERTA.

Dear "Pete":

Glad you wrote again. State your questions clearly and I shall try to help you. Yes I know boys have their problems too, and can see you need advice badly. But I thought by the tone of your letter that you were fooling me. Your parents should have made things more clear to you, as how else can you know what you are up against. So ask in full surety that no one else will see your letter. So glad you find so much food for thought and that my articles have interested. No I am not a girl, and have lots of experience. Looking for your letter soon. Who gave you my address? Yours, ROBERTA.

To "Tork, Toronto":

Thank you my dear. It is nice of you to let me know how many read my articles up there. No, I only write for the Peterborough Examiner, and do not know the lady in question and have never read any of her stuff at all. I shall surely write on the subject mentioned, and hope you like it. Do write again. Yours,

ROBERTA.

To Father four grown-up children: I can sympathise with you and shake you at the same time. You should never have let conditions get so far. Look for an article on this question soon, and in the meantime, assert yourself. No one has any use for the jelly-fish sort of person and that is what you are when you do not put your foot down. There will be more respect shown when you do. Let me know how you make out, but do something about it.—Roberta.

And to all the rest of you who do not want a personal reply, thank you one and all for your comments and I deeply appreciate them and shall try to continue to deserve them. Bless you all, and do write again.—ROBERTA.

The Aftermath of War

Eighteen years after the last shot was fired on the Western Front in the World War the bodies of nearly 900 British soldiers were found last year in the former battlefields of France and Belgium. That information comes in the 17th annual report of the British War Graves Commission.

The same report indicates there were 1,104,890 British soldiers killed, and of that number 587,117 have been identified and buried in war cemeteries. A further 180,861 have been found but are unidentified, so that leaves 336,000 officially classified as "missing."

There is something not far removed from tragic in the fact that bodies found now are difficult of identification, and in many cases the identification discs are not recovered, and there are cases where even if the disc is found it is impossible to properly relate it to any particular body. The full force of this condition is reflected in the work of 1936 when 821 bodies were found and reburied in France and 63 in Belgium. Of that total of 884 identification was possible in only 96 cases.

During the same period French official search parties found and reburied in one department alone the bodies of 795 French and 810 German soldiers.

There ought to be sufficient in that to make its own appeal for silence to those who talk so glibly about the next war.

Came A Day Early

There may have been nothing to indicate it, but Spring actually arrived on Saturday, March 20, and the hour at which it came was exactly 7.45 in the evening. In the year 1937 Spring got a day ahead, as it is usually scheduled to come on March 21. The sun crossed the equator at that 7.45 hour and that means Spring. This time is known as the vernal equinox and it came a day earlier because last year, 1936, was Leap Year and had an added day.

The time of the vernal equinox is also connected with the date of Easter which is always the first Sunday after the first full moon after the vernal equinox. The first full moon is on Friday, March 26, and so Easter is on the first following Sunday, March 28.

The Examiner has received several inquiries within recent days as to how the date of Easter is fixed. So remember—the first Sunday after the first full moon after the vernal equinox. And there you have it.

Leaving For New Homes

It looks as though the effort on the part of the United States government to tell the farmers how much grain they should grow had come to a dead end.

It is indicated in reports from Washington that farmers plan to use 20,918,000 acres for spring wheat instead of 11,212,000, which was the acreage last year and that is an increase of 86 per cent.

It may be that the movement of population in the mid-west states will eventually result in greater production and more acres being used. There has been for months a movement of farmers from the sun-baked districts of Oklahoma, Arkansas, Nebraska, Kansas, Wyoming, Colorado and the Dakotas. At least 70,000 people have taken part in this movement and they are headed for the Pacific northwest in search of new land where they can farm.

These people have in some cases seen their houses and their farm buildings almost buried in dust; they have seen their farm lands virtually blown away. For the most part they are desperately poor, but they say they have no confidence in any plans which may be carried out to restore the fertility of the land which they are leaving, and they are convinced it will become just a desert. If they break new and better land and apply their knowledge of production, there will be an increase both in acreage and the number of bushels raised, and it is not likely the government would step in and tell such people what they must or must not grow. They are staking everything on their new venture and will follow their own inclinations regarding crops.

They Could Not All Get In

Newspapers are frequently told that readers would much prefer the delection of sensational and criminal news from the columns of the press, and we are often moved to wonder whether this is the case or not.

There was brief recurrance of the Mrs. Wallis Simpson divorce case in London, and actually there was not much to it. The inference of collusion in the obtaining of the divorce had been raised by gossip and rumor, but was not backed by testimony or direct charge, and the London divorce court had to clean that away.

In the reports we read: "Every inch of standing room was packed in the court. Hundreds of persons were turned away and stood in long lines outside the door." And we do not suppose the people in London are much different from people elsewhere. When they have reason to believe a serving of gossip or scandal will be forthcoming the people flock in that direction, and when newspapers print reports of such gatherings readers follow to the last line.

They Do Their Best

A young man of 18, through his father, brought action in court at London, Ont., for $25,000 damages. He had been riding a motorcycle and was struck by an auto. A settlement was arrived at whereby the youth receives $5,000 and costs. The report indicates the plaintiff has been permanently disabled; he will always be lame and unable to take employment involving much walking or standing.

It may be with $5,000 at his disposal the young man can fit himself for some line of work where his physical handicap will not weigh too heavily against him, but the ability to get about for the rest of his days, the fact that he can stand and walk little is something which cannot be well or accurately measured in terms of money.

There are a number of folk, though, who in spite of physical limitations or serious handicaps are making a brave effort to play their part from day to day. Their presence and example puts an effective muffler on those who are physically fit but who at times are inclined to complain.

Should Never Be Done

When the Ontario Legislature starts at the serious business of changing the speed limits for the province, members should think seriously that they are dealing with municipalities as well as with open roads

The proposal that speed limits in villages, towns and cities should be raised to 30 miles per hour is the case in point. Apply it locally, and get a picture of tourists or local drivers going along George St., Charlotte St., or Water St., on a market day at 30 miles an hour.

Once the figure is placed at 30 miles there is going to be increased difficulty in proving negligence in case of accidents.

There is going to be created an increased striking power in each car on the road.

There is going to be a legal lessening of the time taken to approach a pedestrian.

There is going to be greater danger at all street intersections.

Driving through a village, town or city at 20 miles an hour is a sane custom; there is no need of exceeding it and it leaves the car in complete control of the driver. We can think of no good reason for increasing that section of the speed limits, and it should never be done.

Running Like a Top

Oscar Felkar, Huron County farmer, drove to Goderich, 54 miles away and before doing so affixed the nineteenth set of markers to his car. The roads were none too good, and some of them were rather badly cut up, but the car which is entering its nineteenth year of service never paused. Neither did it stop.

Mr. Felkar says he does not know how far the car has travelled, as it never did have one of those contraptions which register mileage, but he has a pretty fair idea of the speed he is making by the sort of noise the car makes. We have known of cars just like that one; when they attain the maximum of speed they produce the maximum of noise.

But of one thing Mr. Felkar was certain: "She's running like a top." Whether that phrase comes from high hope, habit or actual conviction, we do not know. Men who deal in cars have informed us it is an old saying, much repeated by every man who owns a car and who may be inclined to consider dealing on a new one. A car may bear the marks of a hard life and late hours, and it's running like a top. Its lines may be those of other years, and its power plant may be like the lifter of heavy weights who has gone on a diet, but the owner will say it's running like a top. So Mr. Felkar is not bringing into existence a new phrase. He is merely repeating the articles of faith commonly subscribed to by all owners of cars which are not as young as they used to be.

Will She Stay?

Monica Allan of Glasgow, Scotland, is 23 years of age and an heiress. The ultra-smart set of today may consider her a trifle odd because she cannot imagine anything being more boring than a cocktail party. A good many other folk, though, will share her view and approve of it.

It looks as though Monica had become fed up with the world in which she was living so a few months ago she sought refuge in Shuna Island, and now comes the announcement that the heiress is going to marry an unemployed game keeper. What's more she will make her home in one of the uninhabited Hebridean islands "where one can wear breeches most of the time."

If this young lady has been living in the world of cocktail parties and became tired of it all she has probably swung as far as she can in the opposite direction. Having money she can go where she likes and do what she prefers, so for the moment she prefers one man, one island, one home on it and one costume—breeches.

There she may stay, and again she may not. People who swing from one extreme to the other generally end up in some place in between. One can appreciate and approve of her feeling of being bored by cocktail parties and by the continued meaningless round of associations connected with them, but an island with one man and one home is apt to become a lonely existence, and feminine taste is apt to become weary of wearing breeches all the time. We are inclined to doubt whether Monica and her man will remain indefinitely on the island.

WHEN SHE WRITES

(By A. R. K.)

¶ When I hear from my Aunt Lucile, I have to read and also feel, at what she has to say; she writes a page clean to the end, and then has news she wants to send, so writes the other way.

¶ I have to read from east to west, her writing that way seems the best, no stubble and no drought; but when she writes the other way, and I learn what she has to say, I read from north to south.

¶ She leaves some space up at the start, and keeps her lines there well apart, it is precise and trim; but when she has some more to tell, she goes up there and writes a spell—and fills the inches in.

¶ And then she writes along the side, no vacant spot has chance to hide, and she writes here and there; when Aunt Lucile comes to the close, I am quite certain that she knows, there's no more space to spare.

¶ She tells me all I want to know, about the folk who come and go, my aunts and nieces too; but when Lucile gets on a thought, it's awful hard for her to stop, or feel that she is through.

¶ I have to read it nice and slow, and follow where her writings go, I have to turn and bend; I jump from one page to the next, to try and follow all her text—then turn it up on end.

Parliamentary Debates

A GOOD ONE

Mr. DEPUTY SPEAKER: I must remind the hon. member that it is not permitted to quote here a speech made in another house.

Mr. LEADER: Well, I shall abide by the rules, but I am sorry, because it is very interesting.

THE ANSWER IS

On orders of the day.

Mr. T. L. CHURCH (Broadview): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the Minister of National Revenue (Mr. Ilsley) a question based upon a press dispatch from Ottawa appearing in the Evening Telegram of Toronto, March 17. It is to the effect that Mr. R. D. Lennie, of Ottawa, chief inspector of the Department of National Revenue, has been appointed to the long-vacant office of collector of customs at Toronto, over all the Toronto staff.

Hon. J. L. ILSLEY (Minister of National Revenue): The answer is no.

Mr. CHURCH: I object to all these people being brought from all over [illegible]

PARIS GREEN

Customs tariff—250. Paris green, dry: rate of duty, free.

Mr. DUNNING: We imported from the United Kingdom 33,500 pounds valued at $3,500. The present rate from the United Kingdom is five per cent, which has been unchanged since 1906, and the item is made free from Great Britain under the agreement.

Sir GEORGE PERLEY: As the whole importation is from Great Britain, this would be a very good test case to show whether the consumer gets any benefit from the reduction in rate.

Mr. STIRLING: Is there any Canadian production?

Mr. DUNNING: It is not separately recorded; there are not three concerns manufacturing it. As my hon. friend knows, unless three concerns are manufacturing, the bureau of statistics does not keep any record. It is manufactured in Canada, however.

Sir GEORGE PERLEY: As the whole import is from the United Kingdom I wonder if the minister does not consider it rather curious that we should be taking off this five per cent unless it will give some benefit to our own people. Evidently it will not help the British exporter.

Mr. DUNNING: Well, it is one of those things that helped me a great deal in asking for continued free entry into the British market for Canadian goods. There are many such items as to which I could not advance very strong arguments against lowering the duty when asked to do so. Some of them are very much a matter of good will.

Sir GEORGE PERLEY: One of the many concessions the minister was forced to make.

Mr. DUNNING: I would not say "forced" to make. There was not any force, but I did evince a willingness to consider what was in the interests of the British as far as it did not, in my judgment, conflict with the interests of Canadian producers and consumers.

Sir GEORGE PERLEY: Strongly urged, may we say.

Mr. DUNNING: I do not remember strong urging on Paris green. It is not a pleasant subject.

Mr. LAWSON: What puzzles me is why they should want a reduction, even on the basis of good will. If they have the market and have the business, any tariff on it would surely be a matter of revenue for Canada. Apparently it is purely a tariff for revenue.

Mr. DUNNING: The intermediate tariff is 7½ per cent; their margin was only 2½ per cent from the intermediate.

Mr. LAWSON: But I understood the minister to say that all importations came from Great Britain.

Mr. DUNNING: Yes, with a margin of 2½ per cent. With their generally rising costs of production in all lines, there was a disposition on their part to ask for an increase in margin wherever it could be arranged, and this was one of the cases.

Mr. KINLEY: How many pounds were imported?

Mr. DUNNING: 33,510.

Mr. ROSS (Moose Jaw): As the hon. member for Argenteuil (Sir George Perley) said, this is a good chance to find out whether or not the consumer gets the benefit. If he does not get the benefit during the next year, I suggest that the minister reduce the other rate to free in order that the consumer shall get the benefit. This article is important to agriculture in this country; it is used in primary production. My hon. friends on the other side always think of the producer, seldom of the consumer.

Some hon. MEMBERS: Oh, oh.

Mr. ROSS (Moose Jaw): My hon. friends a moment ago asked: What advantage are the producers of Great Britain going to get? Why can they not think once in a while of the Canadian consumer?

Mr. STIRLING: That is exactly whom we are thinking of.

DURHAM DIFFICULTIES.

(Fergus News-Record)

UP IN DURHAM, the ladies must run the town. If they don't stoke the furnaces, they see that the fires are kept at the temperature which is necessary to keep a woman comfortable in the cold days of mid-winter, when the temperature sometimes falls below the freezing point. But the men have found a champion in Frank Irwin, editor of the Durham Chronicle, who has always been a champion of the underprivileged. A few nights ago, he was at a function in Durham where the heat wilted his collar and sorched its way amidships. When he unbuttoned his vest, the lightning nearly burned his fingers. So he went home and wrote an editorial about it while his fingers were still hot. The following is the final paragraph:

"So, if you want to keep warm, along some of the furnaces around town in the winter months, where the men go garbed in their winter undies, etc., etc., and the ladies turn out garbed in an outfit that hasn't enough cloth in it to make a pair of bandages for a monkey lark."

Letters To The Editor

Correspondents Discuss Various Topics.

A BOOST FOR GOOD MUSIC

Sir: A musical talent, as has been proved, may be yours through the aid of inheritance, environment, public appearances, one's own will power and the ability to secure and grasp education in this field of science.

The inheritance may or may not be an advancement in that science, but if the best music is studied in a systematic and zealous way, it can be mastered.

The environment of any ardent student of music has most essential power over the success of the learner, uninterrupted cooperation on the part of those with whom he comes in daily contact can give much to his success.

Public appearances play an indispensable effect upon the learner throughout life. This may be aided by having the opportunity of seeing and hearing other students or artists perform, but the greatest good is gained by opportunity to make very frequent public appearances, thereby gaining confidence, personality, etc. Most people take deep interest and appreciation in seeing their own home talent have this advantage.

Power to grasp education in music by will power must be present in the learner for the instructor can only teach and the student learn and put into effect the teachings. This must be by unceasing efforts by learner.

Power to grasp and ability to obtain the education may be slow and difficult or easy to pay for and learn, but however it may seem the learning of music requires time, patience, practice, and many other efforts but in all life that which is most sought for and struggle difficult for accomplishment gives an everlasting significance.

Our Peterborough Examiner has most effectively advertised, enthused and honored several musical or dramatical programs but that of the Mendelssohn Choir was outstanding and most appreciated by those of the surrounding country for so few times we are privileged to know of coming events unless so advertised.

Great praise is most assuredly due all those who made plans, and accomplishments possible as well as a reality the coming of such most noted performers as the Mendelssohn Choir. Commendation of supreme limit is due our Peterborough group for bringing them. As you know this choir travelled for 40 years, taking them to many foreign cities, hundreds of miles away, yet it took 40 years and hundreds of miles of travelling before they arrived at our place less than 100 miles distant. It was their first appearance but we hope not their last.

Although highly praised for their musical talent and accomplishments in the science of music yet as I see it, words cannot express the supreme commendation due the late Dr. A. S. Vogt for his past work and Dr. H. A. Fricker for his time and efforts spent with the Mendelssohn Choir for their power, influence, supreme inspirations as teacher, leader and co-worker [illegible]

AUTO INSURANCE AND DRINK

Editor Examiner.

Sir: The press of March 16th carried the intimation that insurance rates on automobiles are going up. The underwriters announce that despite the extensive campaign by government, press and other agencies accidents continue to increase. The insurance companies propose cancelling the bonus of 15 per cent. granted policy holders who have had no accident claims in the previous year and to add a net increase of 5 per cent. for the more inclusive insurance.

Meanwhile Magistrate McKay of Hamilton says, "In most cases of reckless driving there is evidence of drinking." There is occasion to think that drinking is involved in approximately one-third of the accidents.

In our judgment two remedies should be rigidly applied—

Reports from Pittsburgh, Winnipeg and elsewhere indicate that wherever a stiff gaol sentence has become common this sort of offence has fallen off. The gaol sentence ought to become inevitable for persons who are discovered driving after drinking.

The second need is to do away with the ignorant or dishonest legalistic quibbling as to "when is a man drunk." The remedy for this is the legalization and application of the blood test. If each highway or police officer carried a small pipette or a small case of them he could without injury extract a drop of blood from each individual under suspicion, seal it and forward it to a central laboratory for examination. An analysis would show the amount of alcohol in the bloodstream at the time of the accident, and this in turn would make possible a closely accurate estimate of the impairment at the time of the accident of mental and physical capacity due to drink. The blood test is a scientific lie detector. It protects the innocent and reveals the guilty.

The chief argument against this arises from the definite exposure it would bring to the drinking public. Drinkers seem to think that they should be a privileged class and protected at all costs. But in the face of increased taxing of innocent motorists, in view of mounting property loss, and in view of increased highway killings, should not our legislators protect the public?

A Lesson For Pessimists.

(From the Kitchener Record)

NO ONE can look at the state of the world today without finding a great many reasons for dark pessimism. And yet there are persons in this world whose lives are a living proof that no entrenched evil is entirely secure against a devoted individual who dares to follow an ideal.

A few days ago, for example, a large number of people sent messages to the town of Westport, Conn., congratulating Lillian Wald on her 70th birthday. Back in 1893 Miss Wald, graduate of a nurses' training school and a women's medical college, became appalled at the things poverty, congestion and ignorance were doing to the slum dwellers of New York's lower east side.

What she did was to establish the now famous Henry Street Settlement, she organized a visiting nurse service—the first one in existence anywhere—and made her settlement house, as a writer recently remarked, "the focus of a beneficent infection."

Down the years, ever since, the organization she founded and guided has done a human service whose value it is impossible to estimate. No one knows how many lives have been saved, how many thousands of discouraged slum dwellers have been given a chance at decent living, how many men and women have been saved from degradation and turned into good citizens, how much plain human happiness has been created out of nothing, because of this woman's work.

"Work," is the word for it, too. Miss Wald had no resources but her own determination. She had to argue and plead with politicians, to coax money out of people who had it—it was said at one time that it cost $5,000 to sit next to her at a banquet, so energetic and persuasive was she in her quest for funds. She had to battle the worst of all the world's enemies of reform—public indifference—for long year after year.

The point of it all is that this woman's life is a living rebuke to all pessimists, disbelievers, young and unknown, and set out to tackle one of the greatest problems of modern life. And she did prove, everlastingly, that we are not at the mercy of the powers of darkness unless we fold our hands and forget to fight.

CANADA'S FLIERS.

(Hamilton Spectator)

IN THE course of his speech opening the air estimates, Sir Philip Sassoon gladly invited Canada to provide pilots for the new British Royal Air Force. It may be an invitation to a dance of death.

But the Canadian pilots will go as they did the last time. Canada has probably the finest flying record considering the size of her population of any nation which fought in the last war. Since the armistice, moreover, Canadian pilots have made history, whizzing across the barren lands and up to the rim of the Arctic ocean. Many of the old pilots who had their baptism of fire in France are feeling the age of retirement, but a new group of younger boys are active to-day.

If another war comes Canada will enquire [illegible] McCallum and "Wop" Mayo, Billy Bishop and Hobbs-Kenyons. Whatever political position Canada will adopt toward her belligerency, they will not be able to keep the airmen back, for the air is the last place where the old adventure of war survives.

WRITING THE MEMBER.

(E. H. in Victoria Times)

APPARENTLY back in the strike days write the member of Parliament for the district, every time the cow calves and the kids get tonsilitis. One B. C. member showed me a letter from a fellow who protested that he had been courting the postmaster's daughter for two years and she wouldn't have him, and could the member do something right away about a postmaster whose daughter was refusing to co-operate with the Grand Old Party?

THE DRIVER, TOO.

(Niagara Falls Review)

UNDER the new law effective in New York state, the owner as well as the driver of a truck which killed a woman, has been sentenced to jail for an indefinite period. It was proved that the owner knowingly allowed the truck to be operated with defective brakes and the driver admitted his inability to halt the machine for a red light and struck down the woman.

A driver is foolish who fails to keep his brakes in good condition, for one of the first questions asked in an inquest following an automobile fatality is: "What was the condition of the brakes?" If they have been defective, it usually has a definite bearing on the verdict. It should be accepted as a matter of course that all vehicles using the public thoroughfares should be in good mechanical condition and brakes in good working order.

MAPLE SYRUP TIME.

(Ladies Home Journal)

"THEY'LL be sugaring soon up where I come from. I can see the first slight in the sugarbush east of Bridgewater. See the soft snow on the hillside and the great kettles full of maple nectar. I can smell the wood smoke and the unforgettable fragrance of boiling sap. It's almost time, the nights are cold, but the days are warm with promised springtime. There's a kind of glory in the air and the divine assurance of another and a newer birth. It's sugaring time up north, where cold and cold come together to make the liquid treasure whose secret only the elect may fathom. I am speaking of maple syrup.

I'M GOING ON STRIKE

"I swear I'm going on strike," said ma,
"I'm sick and tired of waiting on pa.
It's darning his socks or mending his shirt,
It's mighty poor pay and a whole lot of work.

"I rise in the morning before it is light,
The kitchen and pantry they sure are a sight,
The soaks, mittens and rubbers, they litter the floors,
I swear I'm mad enough to pitch them out doors."

"I'm going to go on a strike," shouted pa,
"I'm tired of listening of whinings from ma,
There's a cut in her finger or pain in her toe,
I'm forever hearing some tale of her woe.

"The woodshed leaks or the pumps lost it's prime,
There's something to scold about the whole blessed time,
I do wish I'd die or go mad, get tight,
But as I've no money, I'll go on a strike."

"I'm going on strike," cried sister Sue,
"There's no dance tonight, so what can I do?
But my work is done gratis as what is the good.
"I need a new waist for my hair looks a wreck,
And the dress I got last month is too high in the neck.
The boy friend and I have had a big fight,
So there's nothing to do but go on a strike."

"I'm going to strike," says big brother Ben,
"Tho' I haven't decided just why, or just when.
But to roll cigarettes, I find is hard work,
Altho' I'm not one who ever did shirk.

The day is too long from noon until night,
And I never can sleep good, once it gets light,
Was there ever a man 16 such a court?
So all I can do is sit down and strike."

"A CHEST COLD CAN BE DANGEROUS"

That's what doctors say. So treat a cold with the respect it deserves. At the first sign—use PENETRO

If your child has a cold treat it at once. Rub PENETRO on chest, throat and back. Quicker in action, easier to use, and better in result than the out-moded mustard-plaster, PENETRO quickly stimulates circulation and allays congestion with its modern medication. At the same time its aromatic vapours fumigate the nasal passages, soothing and healing the delicate tissues. The penetrating action of this great family remedy is due to its mutton-suet base (which melts at body temperature) to which is added scientific, quick-acting medicaments. Yet PENETRO cannot harm the tenderest skin.

Don't delay—don't let any cold get even a headstart. Have PENETRO in the house always. It's equally as effective for adults as it is for children. Clear, simple directions are in each package. 25c at any druggist.

OVER-GOVERNMENT COMES UNDER FIRE FROM CAPT. INNES

Head Of Commercial Bureau Urges Elimination Of Number Of Provincial Legislatures

THE RAILWAY PROBLEM

A vigorous demand for the reduction of the cost of government in Canada, the elimination of duplicating income taxes and the solution of the railway problem was voiced before the Peterborough Rotary Club to-day by Captain W. C. C. Innes, chairman of the Commercial Bureau of Canada Inc., who spoke at the weekly luncheon on the aims and object of his association.

Capt. Innes was introduced by Lieut.-Colonel C. H. Ackerman, who eulogized the guest speaker for the splendid work he had done for the Canadian Legion and in educating the public on important aspects of national problems.

In beginning his address Captain Innes paid a tribute to Col. Ackerman for the services he had rendered as president of the Ontario Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion.

The speaker first dwelt with the matter of over-governmentation and the duplicating of government services. Federal, Provincial and 4,400 odd municipal governments were costing the taxpayers of Canada every year the enormous sum of $600,000. The Provincial Governments in particular were far outreaching the functions laid down for them by the British North America Act, and as a result they were constituting themselves nine little Canadas, while business men were becoming fed up with the constantly increasing governmental interference with private business. Personally, the speaker favored the control of Canada by one central government, but his organization, he said, did not go that far. They would be satisfied to have the Legislatures of three Prairie Provinces replaced by one Legislature and to combine the three Maritime Provinces into one province. In that way considerable governmental overhead would be eliminated and none of the services provided for the public would suffer in the least.

As a sample of the duplication that existed, he said that while the Provincial Departments of Agriculture cost seven and a half million dollars a year, the Federal Government came along with a similar amount for the same purpose.

Duplicated Income Tax.

Pointing out that so far as the Federal Government was concerned the income tax was a war measure and should have been dropped during the prosperous years prior to 1929, Captain Innes said that his Association objected most strenuously to the duplication of this tax by the provinces. The Western provinces and Ontario along with the Federal Government took $125,000,000 a year out of the pockets of the people who had to pay the tax. In this connection he called attention to the fact that in British Columbia in the higher brackets the province and the Dominion combined to take as high as 90 per cent of the taxpayers' income. Realizing that the income tax was now inevitable, he favored its extension to every province, contended that it should only be collected by one authority, as earlier so that those now exempt would become tax-conscious and the spirit of soak-the-rich would be killed.

The Railway Problem.

Finally Captain Innes took the railway problem which he contended was the problem of every taxpayer. Canada's government-owned railway was costing the taxpayers an average of $100,000 a year in deficits and the truth was that the railway situation was going from bad to worse as other forms of transportation expanded, while the two Canadian railways had twice as much trackage as they could support. He was praying that the common sense of the better element among railway workers would prevent a strike on the Canadian lines. He could not conceive of the spectacle of 117,000 workers, the best paid of all workers in Canada, contemplating holding up the business of the country by a railway tie-up at this time.

The solution of the railway problem favored by the Commercial Bureau at the present time was, the speaker said, unification under private ownership, although if a better solution were to come to the fore to-morrow morning the Bureau would support it.

President Graham expressed the thanks of the Rotary Club to Captain Innes for his vigorous address.

Rotarian Runions had a number of agricultural representatives from around the district present, including Rotarian M. H. Winter of Lindsay, A. H. Martin of Northumberland, and Ron Summers of Duham.

MEASURE EXEMPTS IMPROVEMENTS

charges against Dr. A. D. Roberts, Sault Ste. Marie member.

Dr. Roberts has been accused of "blackmail" of the Algoma Steel Corp., as the price of his support of the bill.

Improvements Exempt

The House passed third reading of a bill to exempt from municipal taxation improvements made to homes under the Dominion Housing Plan.

Hon. David Croll, Minister of Municipal Affairs, said the department would send a letter to assessors suggesting other improvements be exempted as well.

George Henry, Conservative house leader, said such a letter would be to invite assessors to violate their oaths.

Premier Hepburn and Mr. Croll talked it over and the premier said he agreed with Mr. Henry such a letter would be entirely irregular.

"No such letter will be sent out," he said.

Codeine To Be Regulated

Unanimous approval was given in committee of the House a bill to regulate the sale of codeine. Prescriptions for the drug are to be required. The measure would also apply to compounds of codeine. Other drugs to which new regulations will apply are amidorine and barbituric acid, their compounds and derivatives.

A government bill "to avoid unnecessary duplication and ruinous competition between local telephone systems" went through the committee without argument.

The bill would provide the permission of the Ontario Municipal Board for one company to erect lines adjacent to or parallel to those of another company.

Repeal of the amendments to

HUMAN NATURE TENDS TO DRIFT

the greed and selfishness of human nature will assert itself."

System Matters Not

He referred to persons who urge that the system be changed when conditions under which they live are not to their pleasure. He said he did not intend to enter upon a controversy concerning political and economic systems but wished to assert that the system mattered not if the men in control of the system had not the proper hearts. Men make systems rather than systems make men, he said.

"The Christian church is the most magnificent machine which could be conceived," he continued, suggesting the power for good that lies within the grasp of an institution that has churches and full organizations in every community in the land. "If it were hitting on all eight cylinders you can imagine the impact it would have on the life of our people. The church teaches a way of life. It is infinitely more important for men and women to have a conception of a way of living than to have a knowledge of sociology and economics."

"Canada needs a vision. The greatest single thing wrong with this country is the failure of the people to have a vision of what Canada might be."

Mayor George Macdonald welcomed Mr. Stevens to the city and introduced him to the audience as a "moral crusader." Alderman James Dutton expressed eloquently the thanks of the Forum at the conclusion of the address.

YOUR LITTLE SAVINGS...

FINANCE MORTGAGE LOANS

TENS of thousands of Canadian homes and farms benefit from first mortgage loans made possible by the accumulated savings of Life Insurance policyholders.

For every borrower, there are six thrifty people who supply the necessary funds.

This fact affords a striking illustration of the "double duty" performed by Life Insurance dollars. Not only do they ensure financial security for the men, women and children of Canada, but they also help to build and finance their homes and farms.

Life Insurance companies exercise the greatest care in the selection of properties upon which mortgage loans are made. To safeguard the savings of policyholders, security of principal and interest is and must always be the first consideration.

With the Boy Scouts

St. John's Scouts and Rovers went to Lindsay last Tuesday and played basketball with the Lindsay troop. St. John's were victorious in a well-fought battle. Final score being 15 to 13.

Peter Rhodes of St. John's Cubs took high points in the recent Scoutcraft Show, in the model section with his airplane.

The St. John's Scouts again did their troops good turn by delivering over 800 copies of the Parish Messenger for the Church.

It was good to see so many Cubs and Scouts out to the Fish and Game meeting Friday night. As usual these days the Cubs and Cub leaders well outnumbered the Scouts. Just a little lack of co-operation on the part of Scouts.

As I walked to church yesteday with my family a young lad passed with a cheery smile, saluted as he passed by. I could not recall the face, but it was one who is following out Cubbing or Scouting, and recognized me. So may I quote a letter I have read:

"As I walk in my hometown and abroad I see many Scout badges and I greet the wearers of these in the true Scout spirit, with a smile and perhaps a word of greeting, and the Scout sign. Nevertheless, time and time again fellows see my badge and take no notice of it, or look at me as if I were a stranger."

"Now I am sure this is contrary to the real spirit behind the 4th Scout Law. There is nothing more cheering than to receive a cheery smile from a brother Scout. . . ."

"Other fellows could get a lot more fun out of their Scouting and at the same time help to spread a little happiness in the world just by having a cheerful smile ready for their brother Scouts and offering a helping hand where it is needed."

Scouts and Cubs of this district: Let us all get together in a drive for better Scouting. We are all brothers under one great Master.

On this coming Friday, we commemorate His great sacrifice: God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son.

Let us ever hold him before us as our pattern and guide.

To love every one as a brother.

He gave His life.

Surely we can give our best and in doing so do our part for peace on earth, goodwill to all men.

—"The Skipper."

VATICAN LETTER BRINGS NAZI-R.C. CONFLICT IN OPEN

Papal Note Accuses Hitler's Regime Of Violating Concordat

"OBSOLETE" IS REPLY

BERLIN, March 22.—(AP)—Germany's relations with the Vatican held the spotlight in the official press today after a strong papal letter to Roman Catholic congregations accused the Nazi regime of violating the German-Vatican concordat and encouraging anti-Christian movements.

Chancellor Hitler's newspaper "Voelkischer Beobachter," in an editorial interpreted as an answer to the pastoral letter from Pope Pius, implied the Vatican concordat was obsolete and no longer applied to the facts.

"At the conclusion of the concordat, the state could not know how the church would later interpret its provisions," said the newspaper, declaring that "even an agreement with the Holy See has not sacrosanct, untouchable and eternal value."

The Holy Father's letter, read sunday to astonished church-goers, brought into the open the Nazi-Church conflict which the 1933 concordat, dealing principally with Catholic religious education rights sought to pacify.

The Reich would be fully justified, said the newspaper, in invoking the "clausula rebus sic stantibus," a phrase of International law interpreted generally to mean an agreement remains valid only so long as conditions at its establishment remain the same.

Letters Are Seized

Without mentioning the Pope's communication, the paper attacked the practice of issuing letters it said were used to criticize the Reich abroad and bring discussion at home.

"If the preamble of the Concordat speaks of permanent regulation of relations between the state and the church, it can never mean a period so long that it endangers the very existence of the state and peace at home and abroad," said the newspaper.

Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, leader of the Neo-Pagan movement, is the editor.

Catholic circles said the papal communication, dated March 14 from the Vatican, was equivalent to an encyclical because of its content and general appeal.

Pope Pius declared in his letter he signed the Concordat "despite grave misgivings, because we believed it to be in the best interests of the church and the German people.

"If its terms were not kept that is not the fault of the church; the other side made unfair interpretation of the Concordat, evaded its provisions, undermined its contents and finally more or less openly violated its stipulations," said the Pope.

Full rights to continue religious instruction of Roman Catholic youth were promised the church in the Concordat, while civic education was delegated to the state which pledged uniform education laws. In return for the guarantee of education rights, the church agreed to ban political pronouncements by Catholic churchmen and sanctioned dissolution of the Catholic centre party.

The pastoral letter declared elections on abandonment of parochial schools in Germany were not fair because they were not secret, and reiterated the church never would agree to schools in which religious teachers are not free and in which the spirit of teaching in other branches is anti-Christian.

London Paper Reports Throwing Knife Found, Unnamed Man Arrested

LONDON, March 22 (AP) — A spokesman for Scotland Yard yesterday asserted police headquarters knew nothing about reports it was investigating a suspected plot against the life of King George VI.

The newspaper Sunday Referee reported such an investigation in progress. It said detectives had raided the room of a unknown man and found a throwing knife wrapped up in a map of the route of the Coronation procession.

The newspaper asserted Scotland Yard was questioning an unnamed man. It reported detectives found more than 100 newspaper clippings giving details of the Coronation procession May 12.

Claims Eskimos Friendly And Smart All Happy-Go-Lucky And Intelligent

EDMONTON, March 22 (CP)—Most people have fantastic ideas about Eskimos, according to Mrs. Ray Ross who returned to Edmonton after living for several months on Read Island in the Arctic Ocean, 1,500 air miles north of Edmonton.

"The Husky (northerners' name for the Eskimo) is fatalistic, a happy-go-lucky individual and intelligent," said Mrs. Ross whose husband is a fur trader at Read Island. "Some of them where we are, are marvellous mechanics. There are only two or three families of them on Read Island.

"They live in igloos. They're nomadic, you know, and they do love to visit. They really appreciate company. At Christmas there were about 60 families of them on the island and we had a big feast. A lot of them know Christmas carols too, taught by the missionaries.

"Our Eskimos are the 'Copmatins,' which means 'strong.' They are a purer race than those towards the western Arctic, for instance around Aklavik, where whaling boats ply and inter-marriage has taken place. Our Huskies are less advanced for the reason that they have not come in contact with the whites so much. The Eskimo is inherently honest. You can leave anything around and be sure it won't be touched."

When Mrs. Ross asked the reporter to be careful about what he wrote,

"The Eskimos will read this," she warned. "They are learning English rapidly."

"When I left all the Eskimos there saw me off," the young woman stated. "And there was Kulanna, wife of Nowgak, who saw her first airplane when Matt Berry landed. She didn't show any excitement at all until she saw the reindeer meat brought out of the plane by Matt and then she was thrilled beyond words, because reindeer meat was a thing she knew something about. And she was amazed to see it come out of the inside of the plane."

King, Bennett Both Expected In House Today

11 A.M. STARTING LIKELY

OTTAWA, March 22.—(CP)—The House of Commons today tackles several government measures at the start of a short week that will end Thursday night in a brief holiday recess. The week will see the first of a series of Wednesday night sittings that will continue till the session's end.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, back from a visit to President Roosevelt at the White House and a holiday in Virginia, and Conservative Leader Bennett are expected to take their seats in the House again today. Mr. Bennett has been away in Toronto, Hamilton and New York.

He took part in the tail end of the Hamilton West by-election campaign in which polling is being held today. Mr. Bennett spoke on behalf of Alderman John Marsh who will seek to defend for the Conservatives the seat held by the late Herbert E. Wilton, Hamilton's former mayor.

Against him are running Kennedy Connor, Liberal, and John O'Hanley, C.C.F. Postmaster General Elliott, Transport Minister Howe and Revenue Minister Ilsley took part in the campaign for Connor and James S. Woodsworth, national C.C.F. leader, spoke last Saturday night for O'Hanley.

Eyes On Bonaventure.

Towards that traditionally conservative riding and traditionally Liberal Bonaventure, vacated by the death of Hon. Charles Marcil, the country's political eyes turned. In Bonaventure, as in Hamilton, three men fought for the seat. All are lawyers, the official Liberal, Pierre Emile Cote, former Quebec highways minister. His opponents are William O'Donnelly and Maurice Thibault, both Independent.

Nominations will be held a week from today in a third federal by-election in North Renfrew, vacated by death of Dr. Matthew McKay, fifth Liberal to hold the seat since Confederation. The riding since Confederation has returned 17 Conservatives in elections and by-elections.

Agriculture Minister Gardiner and Labor Minister Rogers have indicated they will speak for Dr. E. T. Wood of Westmeath, Liberal candidate. Mr. Bennett will speak at Pembroke April 3 on behalf of the Conservative defender, R. M. Warren, reeve of Wilberforce Township.

On The Order List

First on the House order paper is the bill to revise the financial setup of the Canadian National Railways. Following it are Senate amendments to the government harbors and piers act, a resolution preliminary to introduction of the trans-Canada airway bill, second reading of the bill to appoint C.N.R. auditors, Senate amendments to the old-age pensions act, extending benefits to blind persons who have reached 40 years of age, two bills on seed and feed in the name of Agriculture Minister Gardiner.

The House also will consider a large number of tariff items in the Canada-United Kingdom trade agreement that was part of Finance Minister Dunning's budget. All the tariff changes except iron and steel items and those on which Canada is bound to preserve the degree of preference to the United Kingdom have been passed.

It was considered likely Mr. Mackenzie King will move during the week to launch the House day at 11 a.m. instead of 3 p.m., a move that heralds the drive toward prorogation.

Most debate appeared likely to arise over the bill for revision of the C.N.R. capitalization, back from a committee with several amendments.

The committee decided old grants to all railways should be shown in an appendix to the public accounts of the nation but not in the railway balance sheet. About $1,500,000,000 of C.N.R. liabilities previously have appeared in the accounts of the railway and the Dominion, a duplication which, the government claimed, gave prospective bond purchasers a distorted view of the country's finances.

That duplication and certain worthless capital stocks on the railway's books are removed. The bill also centralizes corporate control of the many component companies of the railway.

The trans-Canada airway bill Transport Minister Howe will present, has been heralded a long time. It is expected to establish a company to operate the airway which, in time, will carry passengers, mail, express and freight from coast to coast.

KEPT FROM HIS SHIP BY SCIATICA

Sailor Who Could Hardly Walk For Pain

"I am a seaman," he writes, "and have travelled all over the world in sailing ships. Some time ago I was taken bad with sciatica and rheumatism. If I went out I had to rest two or three times before I got home. One day an old mate of mine asked me what was the matter, and he said 'get some Kruschen Salts.' So I got some and I am pleased to say I felt a great deal easier. After continuing for a week, I was a great deal better and on the Saturday I was back on my ship." —T. H. W.

The pains of rheumatism and sciatica are frequently caused by too much uric acid accumulating in the body. Two of the ingredients of Kruschen Salts are notable for their work in dissolving uric acid and other ingredients of these Salts assist the internal organs to eliminate the dissolved uric acid from the system.

When he rejoined it, the skipper cornered him and said:

"Now look here Sam, we've got a good cook, but you can have the job if you want it. We'll pay you a dollar a day as wheelsman or $60 a month as cook."

The young sailor immediately answered:

"I'll be a wheelsman."

He went up from handy boy to cook, wheelsman, mate, captain and owner. He bought a share of the Carrow Tugging Company and once owned a side-wheeler, the City of Cheboygan, which he operated on connecting Northern Michigan rivers and lakes.

Peaceful Village Of Madoc Hailed As 1866 'Eldorado' During Hastings Gold Rush

Police Detachment Needed To Keep Order Among "Gold-Maddened Hunters"

RICHARDSON MINE HISTORY

The discovery of the Richardson mine, of brief fame, six miles north of Madoc in 1866 remains even in memory one of the most romantic chapters in the history of that section of Hastings county.

Recently the Examiner published several articles relating to mining prospects and work on both sides of the Peterborough-Hastings boundary, and merely as a recollection of that now almost forgotten episode further to the west of the properties mentioned of late, a review of the Richardson "rush" is quoted from a paper read by G. Fraser Aylsworth, O.L.S., Madoc, to the Association of Ontario Land Surveyors, and published in their annual report for 1919.

"In the summer of 1866, Mark Powell and a German or Dutchman named Snider (an old miner) were prospecting for copper on the Richardson farm, about six miles north of Madoc. Powell lived at Malone in the township of Marmora; nothing is known now of Snider further than he was "an old miner."

Those from whom I sought information concerning the excitement created by the discovery of gold on the Richardson property were Robert T. Gray; D. E. K. Stewart, lawyer, both of Madoc, and John N. Moore who lived on a lot adjoining the Richardson farm.

Prospected For Copper

Mr. Stewart said the gold was first detected by Fred Murchall in the matter mined by Powell and Snider. He was an Australian miner. Hearing in Belleville of the mining talk he went to Madoc, and told Powell and Snider that their copper was gold. That started the excitement. It is said that Lyman Moon of Madoc got two fire shovels full of decomposed sulphurites from where Powell and Snider were working, from which $183 of gold was washed. Another story is that Gray and Moon took some of the vein matter to G. D. Rawe, a jeweller in Madoc, who pronounced it gold after a blow-pipe test.

Mr. Gray also said that two geologists, Venner and Perigue, of the Canadian Geological Department, were examining rocks in the Madoc district. One Sunday they went up to Eldorado to see what all the excitement there was about. When they returned to Moon's hotel they said they were permitted "to put their hands into a hole and bring out black sand containing lots of gold, but that the same hole would permit one to put the same hand in there, and they would like to see some of the wall rock containing gold." Gray replied that he had samples in store in dolomite. They went over and saw his samples which they pronounced gold. These samples were densely dotted with gold showings like wheat grains. Old miners said that was the only place they ever saw gold in dolomite.

Offered $1,000 For Option

Moon went to the old Dafoe house in Belleville with samples. While he was sitting there a number of the leading citizens of Belleville were discussing the excitement, the formation of a company, and how they could get the Richardson property, but an American named J. F. Carr of Boston, who was drilling for oil near Belleville, and who heard these men, turned to Moon after they had dispersed, and talked about getting the mine ahead of them. He asked whether anyone could intercede for him with Richardson. Moon suggested Gray. Carr said he would give Gray $1,000 if he could get the farm. He was introduced to Gray and the two went to Eldorado.

Carr offered Richardson $10,000, but he wanted $20,000. After looking over the property Carr and Gray went away, and Carr returned to Belleville without closing the deal. He found the excitement in the town as keen as ever, and the same citizens still after the mine. Then Carr sent a special messenger back to Madoc to Moon urging him to get a 60 day option from Richardson. This was accomplished, the option being for $20,000. Gray also sent a rider eight miles to Malone to get Powell to settle, but the latter would not come; so Gray and a lawyer went to Malone that night, having to change horses on the way. Powell demanded $15,000 for his interest, but Gray had no authority from Carr to deal with them that way, and returned to Madoc. Then he went to Belleville and met Carr. At 10 a.m. they put the option on record.

Gray afterward said he made a mistake in not getting the option in his own name, as Carr never paid him the $1,000.

Owners Sell Property

Gray and Carr returned to Madoc and put a building over the mine, and a man named Joe Elsiwer, armed with a gun, on guard. Carr took samples of the mine to Boston, but failed to organize a company to provide money to take up the option. In the meantime, Messrs. Lombard and Harden of Chicago were waiting to see if Carr could complete the deal. When he failed, Lombard and Harden paid Richardson his $20,000 and Powell $15,000. Then the fat was in the fire. Carr claimed that time was not the essence of the contract, and law began. Meanwhile people were flocking in.

Under one large boulder on the property near the mouth of the shaft or pocket a piece of gold nearly an inch square was found. The main pocket was 15 feet deep and 10 x 12 feet square.

Twenty-five mounted police were sent in and barracks built for them, to maintain order. Prospectors and miners galore were abroad in the country, and nearly every farm within a radius of ten miles of the Richardson mine had a prospecting shaft sunk on it, looking for gold."

Geologist's Report

Mr. Aylsworth quoted at length a geological survey report of progress work during the summer and autumn of 1866. Referring to his examination the geologist said: "Rough as these experiments were, they afforded sufficient proof of the unusual richness of the deposit. At this time no trace of the metal was observed in the enclosing rock, but shortly afterwards some very beautiful and rich specimens were shown to me in which the gold was enclosed in dolomite and calespar.

Shortly after this examination, in consequence of disputes connected with the mine, the shaft was closed up and no further work was permitted. On the arrival of Mr. Mitchel to the west of the properties mentioned of late, a review of the Richardson "rush" is quoted from a paper read by G. Fraser Aylsworth, O.L.S., Madoc, to the Association of Ontario Land Surveyors, and published in their annual report for 1919.

OAK PRAYER DESK IS GIVEN CHURCH BY LADIES' GUILD

Mrs. L. Warren Made Presentation To Wardens Of St. George's Church

DEDICATORY SERVICE

An oak prayer desk, given by the Ladies' Guild in memory of its first president, the late Mrs. Harry Rew, was dedicated at St. George's Church Sunday morning.

In the presence of a large congregation, Mrs. L. Warren, president of the Guild, made the presentation to the church wardens in these words: "With your permission and approval the members of the Ladies' Guild of St. George's Church have caused to be made an oak prayer desk. The ladies, with your consent, have given it in memory of Mary Rew, our first president, and have so inscribed it. We ask you to accept this gift to the glory of God, the beautifying of this church, and in memory of Mary Rew."

Formal accentance of the prayer desk was pronounced by W. Gordon Ray, People's Warden. After the dedication by the rector, Rev. T. S. Gault, Mrs. E. W. Cooper sang "There is a Beautiful Land on High," accompanied by Mrs. R. King.

Attended In Body

The members of the Guild attended in a body, and the floral decoration of the altar was also their contribution in memory of Mrs. Rew, who had been president of the Guild for quite a number of years, and always took an active part in the affairs of the church until her death in June, 1931. During the offertory the choir sang the anthem, "God So Loved the World," from Stainer's "Crucifixion."

The desk was made by Mr. L. Warren, Romaine street, and bears a brass plate inscribed with the memorial tribute to Mrs. Rew.

During the course of his sermon on a text from Genesis, and the theme of the great Biblical personality of Abraham, Rev. Mr. Gault said: "As we look back over the 25 years of the life of this church congregation, one can see in the background the pathetic struggle of the man and women of this section to maintain the spiritual ideals of their forefathers.

His Love of Parish

Here is a story from the history of the parish which speaks for itself: "As a preliminary step in the formation of the new mission, an open air service was held in J. D. Manley's garden, corner of Lock and Braidwood, on Sunday evening, July 7, 1912. Mr. Manley not only allowed the use of his garden, but also lent his piano and all the chairs he had in his house. Alfred Culfe also removed all the chairs he had in his house to the garden.

It was a novel experience to see people coming to the first service with chairs on their backs, and taking them home again when the service was over.

Many a story of equal beauty could be told of the indefatigable labors of the good woman, Mrs. Harry Rew, whose courage and spiritual vision we commemorate in this new prayer desk. Canada can never be a great nation without men and women who in the midst of loneliness and discouragement see the beauty and simplicity of the gospel.

The Ladies' Guild of which Mrs. Rew was president, has played a worthy part in the history of this parish. You can never repay the debt which you owe to your seniors, both those who are no longer with you, and those for whose continuing guidance you can still be thankful. "The world was made for women, too," is a motto which typifies the advance women have made in the life of the world. Man in whom the competitive instinct predominates has messed up things. Woman in whom the co-operative sense is strongest must straighten them out if the world is to be saved for Christianity. Is it too much to ask of womanhood to-day to have that same deathless spirit and to pass on to the younger generation a torch of clear, courageous faith, a faith that goes with a sense of poise and victory and not fear."

Holy Week Services St. Peter's Cathedral

Holy Week services at St. Peter's Cathedral are as follows: Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, at 7.30, chanting of the 'Tenebrae'; Special Holy Thursday Mass at 8 a.m., with blessing of the holy oils; Mass of the Pre-Sanctified at 8.30 a.m., Good Friday, and Stations of the Cross at 3 o'clock in the afternoon; Saturday, blessing of the Easter water commences at 7 a.m., with Mass at 8 o'clock.

On Easter Sunday, the Masses will be at the usual hours of 7.30, 9 and 10 a.m., the last to be a Pontifical High Mass celebrated by His Excellency, Bishop O'Connor.

The chanting of the 'Tenebrae' (Latin for "darkness") on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, is symbolic of the darkness which came over the Jews when they rejected Christ and much of the service, including the Lamentations of Jeremias, is taken from the Matins and Lauds of the Daily Office read by priests. In this service, the candles are extinguished one by one, and finally, the entire church is plunged into darkness for a brief space of time.

one of the early Canadian romances which indicates the human lust for the golden here."

Mr. Aylsworth concluded his narrative with references to later tests of the property, the last 1917:

"There is a lingering abiding faith yet, that there will be something doing on this property some time. However, notwithstanding that failure there have been numerous spectacular mining successes in the Madoc district. I think I am very conservative when I state that nowhere on the American continent has an indulgent nature bestowed such a diversity of valuable minerals although perhaps, and only perhaps, each in small quantities. A descriptive inventory of them would certainly be a surprise to those who are not acquainted with that district."

Body Of One Victim Being Carried From Wreckage

Stepping carefully over the heaped up rubble of stone, steel and masonry that was once the million-dollar consolidated school of New London, Texas, rescue workers carry out the body of one little victim of the terrific blast that demolished the huge structure and claimed the lives of nearly 500 pupils and teachers. Improvised morgues received the scattered bodies as they were carried from the wreckage.

A SIMILAR ACCIDENT.

The accident by which James J. Platt of Peterborough lost his life by falling off the Port Hope viaduct on Friday night, recalls a similar mishap at the same spot on January 30th, 1917, when W. R. Jex of the Port Hope hockey club fell from the same spot on returning from a game at Whitby. He thought the train was at the station and stepped off and fell to the ground, sustaining two fractured legs.

MAGISTRATE'S COURT.

When Mrs. Ethel Pearl Williams appeared before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K. C., on remand and pleaded guilty to a vagratncy charge this (Monday) morning, His Worship remanded her for another week, declaring he believed the woman to need care in hospital. On her first appearance before the Bench the woman said she came here from Orillia. Today the Court observed, "I think this woman needs medical attention. I am not going to commit her to gaol merely because she collapsed on the street".

URGED TO READ STORY OF CROSS

Attend Church Daily Not Necessarily As Communicants But As Hearers

Calling attention to Holy Week services in the current issue of "The Parish Messenger," the Rev. W. P. Robertson rector of St. John's Church states:

"This issue is to remind parishioners of the opportunities provided by the Church to enable us during Holy Week, so to enter into the fellowship of the sufferings of Christ that on Easter Day we may really know the power of His Resurrection. There is no better exercise for the mind and heart at this season than to 'follow' the Story of the Cross as told by the four Evangelists. Their narratives are the gospels for each day in Holy Week."

Mr. Robertson urges his parishioners to attend daily celebrations, "not necessarily as communicants but as hearers of the Gospel."

Celebrations of Holy Communion are being held daily this week Monday to Thursday at 10 a.m., also 8.15 a.m. Tuesday and Thursday and at 6 a.m. on Wednesday. In addition there is a service every evening at 8 p.m., with studies in "Persons of the Passion."

On Good Friday the three hours from noon to 3 p.m., are to be observed. The simple service is to be divided into periods of twenty minutes, an address on one of the Seven Words, and also prayers and hymns.

Easter Day Holy Communion is to be celebrated at 7, 8 and 11 a.m. A children's service is to be held at 3.15 p.m.

GIVEN ONE YEAR IN REFORMATORY

Man Pleaded Guilty To Obtaining Car By False Pretences

Joseph Ellis of Toronto was sentenced to one year definite and three months indefinite in Ontario Reformatory when he appeared on remand before Magistrate O. A. Langley, K. C., this (Monday) morning after previously having entered a plea of guilty to a charge of obtaining a motor car by false pretences from J. J. Duffus Limited.

According to Crown Attorney V. J. McKeown, K.C., the accused recently bought a car here and tendered a cheque for $175 as part payment on a bank at Havelock; subsequently the cheque was returned marked "no account," and Ellis was arrested at Toronto.

Speaking on his own behalf Ellis asked His Worship in passing sentence to take into consideration the fact that he was under the influence of liquor when he made the transaction.

The Crown Attorney producing an agreement signed by the accused, pointed out that Ellis had given a statement of financial ability in great detail which did not look like the action of a man who was intoxicated at the time.

Neville Held On $20,000 Bail To Be Charged With Larceny Before Boston Grand Jury

Charged With Operating An Alleged Get-Rich-Schems In Boston

138 COMPLAINTS

BOSTON, March 22—(AP)—Judge Elijah Andlow today held John Bruce Heath, 35, also known as John Neville, in $20,000 bail for the grand jury after Police Captain John A. Dewey told the court Heath would be charged with the larceny of $87,000 to $100,000 in the operation of an alleged get-rich-quick scheme. Heath, a native of Roblin, Ont., was brought back from New York Saturday.

Heath reputed operator of the Bainton associates, an organization which published financial "tipster" sheets in Boston and New York, pleaded innocent in municipal court to a charge of larceny of $700 from a Boston man.

Captain Dewey, attached to the office of the Attorney General Paul A. Dever, told the court today's action would be followed by 137 other complaints made by a group of investors who claimed they were promised from six to 26 per cent profit.

J. B. Abrams, counsel for the former hosiery salesman, said his client obtained the money from investors to finance two financial advisory services in Boston and New York. He maintained that action against Heath should have originated in a civil court.

Heath's arrest followed an investigation by the Boston Better Business Bureau, an aftermath of complaints that worthless cheques were issued to two Boston investors as dividend payments.

THE STARS SAY . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, March 23

Judging by the important planetary configurations, this should be a day of unusual liveliness and enterprise. The forces and faculties should be keyed to high impetus with new ventures and important projects under excellent prospect for success. But this excellent stimulus to initiative may be put in jeopardy by a tendency to rash, hasty and impulsive acts and decisions.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year of excellent prospects, especially in new enterprises. These, however, may be imperilled by a tendency to impetuous, hasty, rash words and deeds, and possibly immoderate or intemperate personal behavior.

A child born on this day may have excellent abilities, being constructive, versatile, energetic and bold, but at the same time it may be too adventurous, impulsive, temperamental or foolhardy, unless it is given proper discipline and direction.

PLAN PRODUCING SPLENDID RESULTS IN PETERBOROUGH

Home Owners In Some Cases And Contractors In Others Make Arrangements

BANKS CO-OPERATING

The Home Improvement Plan is producing satisfactory results Fred O. Goodfellow remarked to the Examiner today. He completed one plumbing job last week, and had another loan approved at the bank, with two or three more prospects which he expects to yield business.

"So far I have found the banks very willing to co-operate with home owners," Mr. Goodfellow said. "In regard to the job we finished last week the home owners haven't yet seen their banker. They left the financing arrangements to me because they said they were a little bit shy about calling on the bank for a loan. It was something they had never done before. So I took the application form to their home. The husband and wife both signed it because the home is jointly in their name. Their credit record was O.K. with the banker, and they got the loan just as simply as that. I took the money to them and they paid me. The job is done, and their first call at the bank will be in a few weeks when their first payment on the loan is due. There was no reason why they couldn't have gone to the bank themselves, but they asked me to look after getting the loan for them. On the other job that we just got the home owner went to the bank himself and made the arrangements."

Mr. Goodfellow said that home owners who need work done, whether it is plumbing or anything else, need have no hesitancy about talking it over with any of the bank managers. All they had to do was to show that they could make the monthly payments.

"I believe there is a lot of work that needs to be done in Peterborough under this Plan if people will take advantage of it, and not postpone action until the season normally gets busy," Mr. Goodfellow said.

LABOR DISPUTE IS STILL UNSETTLED AT BRINTON PLANT

Trouble Not Spread To Other Departments—Setters Are Still Out

FURTHER CONFERENCES

The labor dispute at the Brinton-Peterborough Carpet Company's plant here was still in an unsettled stage at noon to-day, with a further conference between employers and employees scheduled for this (Monday) afternoon. As reported previously female workers in the setting department staged a walk-out Friday afternoon when a five per cent. increase in wages, said to have been promised them, was not forthcoming.

At a joint conference of plant officials and workers' representatives Saturday morning a general demand of full restoration of the twenty-five per cent. pay cuts effected during the depression period was made by the workers.

Outcome of the negotiations was not divulged either by the plant management or by worker's representatives, but it was self-evident from the stream of workers who came from the factory during the lunch hour to-day, that the trouble had not spread to other departments as earlier indications seemed to threaten.

That the dispute was not settled at Saturday's conference would seem to be a natural conclusion to be drawn from the fact that a further conference was scheduled.

It was understood that the setters were still out on strike at noon.

GOVERNOR LIKED BALL.

CAPE TOWN (CP)—"Give us some more," said Lord Clarendon, Governor-General of South Africa, after a nine-innings baseball game here. He had an hour's leisure on his hands and three extra innings were played.

Welland Beats Peterborough 33-18 In Basketball Final

Niagara Falls And Midland Win Central Ontario Championships

OUTSTANDING STARS

TORONTO, March 22 (C.P.). — A trio of young basketeers, a boy and two girls emerged from the annual Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association basketball championships to-day as the individual stars of an stiff a series of battles as the annual hoop meet ever has witnessed.

The accurate shooting of tall Bill Harwell and Doris McLeod was largely instrumental in Stamford Collegiate of Niagara Falls annexing two titles in the four finals played here on Saturday night. To Phyllis Burrows of Trenton went the heroine's role in defeat.

Beat Owen Sound.

In the Senior Division, the Falls basketballers had little difficulty in registering victories. The boys' quintette, with Haswell scoring 14 points, turned back Owen Sound 49-19, scoring almost at will. The girls defeated Collingwood 25-12. Miss McLeod was Stamford's heavy scorer with 13 points.

The fireworks came in the Junior Division, with little Miss Burrows providing the spark. Midland edged out a 32-29 win over Trenton, but only by beating back a late Trenton rally that saw the Eastern Ontario girls run in nine points in the game's closing minutes. Welland won over Peterborough 33-18 in the other junior final.

Scored 23 Points.

The fast-stepping little Trenton forward scored 23 of her team's 29 points. Midland led 30-21 at the three-quarter mark of the speedy game and Miss Burrows ran in three quick baskets just before the final whistle in a vain effort to stave off defeat. For Midland, Betty Nichols, with 18, was the leading point-getter.

A decided edge in the passing department and more accurate shooting gave Stamford's boys their win over a plucky but less experienced Owen Sound squad. In amassing his point total, Haswell was ably assisted by Frost and Stew Robinson. They scored 11 and 12 points respectively.

Collingwood's hard-fighting girls made little headway against the senior Stamford basketballers. Like the boys, the Niagara Falls team showed more accuracy around the basket on close-in shots and frequently baffled the Collingwood school girls with their swift passes. Miss McLeod led Stamford in its victory, registering 13 points.

Even Battle.

In the junior boys' final, Peterborough and Welland battled on even terms for most of the game until the third quarter. With four personal fouls against him, Sedgewick, Peterborough guard was taken from the game. After that, the Welland juniors rattled in baskets almost at will.

C.G.E. ELIMINATE NEILL TEAM 32-20

Electrics Qualify For Basketball Playoff Berth With Senior City League Win

Though minus several regulars at the "Y" Saturday night, C.G.E. had too much on the ball for Neill's and took a 32-20 Senior City Basketball League win. This victory keeps the Electrics in the running and relegates Neill's into the discard for another year. A. Holmes and G. Hunter played their best games of the season, dividing 20 points. Hunter collected 12. The speedy Palmer also shone for the victors defending well and grabbing off three field goals. Stanger with eight points and V. Holmes with six led the losers in scoring. The latter and Taylor left the game three-quarters way through with four fouls to weaken the squad. C.G.E. led all the way with an 18-13 count at halftime. The teams:—

Neill's: V. Holmes, M. Hunter, Gadd, Stanger, Broadley, Rennie, Taylor.

Referees: E. Ascott and R. Hammell.

P.C.I. GAIN NOD OVER DOMINIONS

Rub Out Insurance Men In Senior Cage Contest By Count Of 17 To 16

Plenty of action was provided in the "Y" on Saturday night when P.C.I. came from behind to eliminate Dominion Life, 17-16, in a Senior City Basketball League contest. The game was as close as the score indicates with the Insurance Crew leading 10-9 at the halfway mark. The Students made better use of scoring chances later to earn their margin in a lively tussle. Gunsolus at right guard for the winners shared the spotlight with Galley, the latter collecting 13 points. MacArthur shone for the losers to gain half their points. The rest all tried hard but were not quite good enough to rank out the verdict. The teams:

P.C.I.: Gunsolus, Galley, Kelly, Smith, Gemmell, Turner.

Dominion Life: Moldaver, Smart, Grose, McArthur, Hammell, Ellis, White, Hunt, Weese.

Referees: V. Holmes and D. Sedgewick.

CURLING

By HERB MARTIN

CURLERS, ATTENTION!

Believe it or not—we came down to the rink this morning fully intending to put on the shutters, put all our tools away, and pronounce "Amen" to the curling season for 1936-37.

But after we looked over the situation, also the thermometer, read the proks, and called up the presidentelect, R. R. Shirley, it was right there and then decided to put more water on and then advertise a bonspiel for tonight.

So, friend curlers, at 7.30 p.m. sharp tonight we will make a draw from the board, three 4-end games, 25c fee, good prizes, and don't be late.

We should have a capacity house tonight.—It may be the last of the season, who knows?—So come on out and help to make history.—And by the way we still think there will be curling on Good Friday.

Cricket Notes

The annual Spring meeting of the Peterborough Cricket Club is to be held at Hamilton's Studio, 221 Hunter St.—near Aylmer—Tuesday evening at eight o'clock. A full attendance is requested as important business is to come up pertaining to club activity for the coming season, especially the question of again taking part in the County Championships.

The club will welcome any new players and would ask any who have played the game in the past to join up. There are three practises a week with suitable equipment and matches on most Saturdays. The new secretary, Gordon Caird, 631 Lock St.—phone 2945W—would be glad to receive names and give information desired. Cricketers may be interested in the all-time record in attendance and gate receipts in the five Test Matches played in Australia this winter. SMITH AWARDED VEZINA TROPHY WITH 102 GOALS

Beats Out Dave Kerr Of Rangers By Four As Maroons Go Wild

LIST SINCE 1926 GIVEN

MONTREAL, March 23 (C.P.). — Puggy Norm Smith, the goalie few figured would last long in National Hockey League warfare, is the 1936-37 winner of the George Vezina Memorial Trophy, the league's highest award to a netminder.

Montreal Maroons handed Norm one of his worst pastings of the season last night, shooting five goals past him. But the little guy with the red-peaked cap had only 102 goals in his cage all season. This was four better than Dave Kerr of New York Rangers.

Smith took the cup with the highest goal total ever dentted against a winning netminder. Previously the 101 goals allowed in the 1931-32 season by the late Chuck Gardiner was record high.

Both Smith and Kerr played right through the 48-game schedule, the Red Wing having a goals-against average of 2.10 a game against Kerr's 2.20.

Following are the winners since 1926-27, when the trophy was up for the first time, showing the number of games played by each netminder and the number of goals allowed:

1926-27—Hainsworth, Can...	44	67
1927-28—Hainsworth, Can...	44	42
1928-29—Hainsworth, Can...	44	43

LOCAL SWIMMERS MISS TOURNAMENT

Car Accident Holds Up "Y" Entrants In Ontario Championships At Kingston

A car accident near Port Hope Saturday afternoon spoiled the chances of Peterborough "Y" swimmers in the Eastern Ontario water meet in Kingston that evening. The Peterborough contingent arrived barely in time to enter one contestant, Vern Janeway, in the final event. It was the 440-yard race and Janeway, without being warmed up, finished fourth, a length behind the winner.

Two cars carried the bunch from here. One consisted of Jim Rogers, Dave Rogers, Jim Devlin, Lou Martin, Jack Londerville and Jack Thexton. This was the car that skidded into a shallow ditch, cracking a spoke on one wheel. The other load was made up of Jim McClenaghan, Gordon Minty, Bill Gerow, Tom Dunlop, Vic Allen and Vern Janeway. After some delay in Port Hope, with the wheel still unrepaired, it was decided to send one car on to Kingston with these members: Jim McClenaghan, Tom Dunlop, Bill Gerow, Vern Janeway, Dave Rogers and Vic Allen. This section of the party ran into further tough luck in the shape of a bad snowstorm on the other side of Belleville which caused further delay.

Greatly disappointed at not being able to compete in the list of championship events in Kingston, the local club has decided to hold a swim meet April 9th here with junior and senior swimmers competing.

C.G.E. BOWLERS DEFEAT TORONTO

Inter-Shop Rivals Finish Home-And-Home Series Here On Saturday

A party of 25 bowlers from the Davenport Works of the C.G.E. Co. was here Saturday in the return matches of the home-and-home bowling tournament with the local C.G.E. plant. The silver cup, donated by R. S. Cotton for annual competition, was won by the Peterborough team with a total of 1233 pins in the tournament. A silver coffee-making set, valued at $35 and given by R. Murray, sales manager of the Canada Atlas Steel Co., was captured by Harold Darling of Peterborough with high six games, having a total of 703 in Toronto and 764 here. The visitors were entertained later with dinner and cards at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club. Bowling was done at Duffus' Alleys.

A team from the Engineering Works at Toronto will be here this weekend to bowl against the local C.G.E. team, which won the Senior City Five-Pin League the past winter.

SPORTS DAY by DAY

Diggins Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

A GOOD attendance of soccer enthusiasts is requested tonight at eight at the meeting in the Chamber of Commerce. Plans are being made to form a district football association taking in several Central Ontario towns but, unless local men turn out for this meeting, little headway can be made. The idea is to have three teams from here, C.G.E., Packers and C.C.F. along with Oshawa, Bowmanville and Dalcro. Such a circuit would guarantee fandom here plenty of keen competition and a flock of new faces in games. But some interest must be shown at this time if anything is to be accomplished.

WIRE DEPT. won the C.G.E. Shop Hockey League championship at the Brock on Saturday afternoon, slapping over Fractional Motors with a 3-0 dab of whitewash. They won the playoff round by 4 to 0 and earned it all the way, though the losers made it a battle. Heal and Pammett did the scoring, the former finding his sniping eye Saturday after misplaying it sadly the previous night against some Barrie boys in Oshawa—but he wasn't alone. The C.G.E. puck loop had a good season and was run off in okay style by officials and players... Congrats to the victors.

SPEAKING OF the ex-Colts, seven of the squad graduate from junior company this year via the over-age route. Yeah, seven, no less! They are Starr, Heal, Wright, Kingdon, Harding, Connelly and Webb. Leaving naught but a defence and a couple of forwards for next year. Looks like the '38 crew will need a bunch of recruits and a couple of imports. Bun Kingdon was the real junior veteran, being signed five years ago and playing fine hockey for the past four seasons in junior O.H.A. competition. Some of the others were with the team several years while others played just one season. But all will be missed in this company, some no doubt appearing in O.H.A. intermediate ranks next winter. Time marches on.

* * * * * * *

BUNNY MORGANSON in the Toly Saturday said of the Colts: "Barrie's edge was just as narrow as the one goal that gave them the decision on the round. And it would appear to be that the edge was in their goaltender, Grunt Goring, who displayed a perfect puck eye and a fine pair of hands to pick the puck out of danger when it appeared as though the Peterborough lads were on the verge of going places. Peterborough thrilled the fans with their passing attack during the first half but, when they were forced to go after goals, their system became a bit foggy and several glorious chances were passed up due to the failure of a spot player being in the right position at the right time. It was a great exhibition of courage and ability by both clubs. The success of junior 'B' hockey has done much to revive fan interest in Peterborough. Over 2,000 fans were in the Oshawa rink from the Lift Lock city, coming by cars, bus and special train."

* * * * * * *

LINDSAY POST Scribe, who saw the game in Oshawa on Friday, says he still thinks the Colts were a better team but were outlucked. Though he agrees somewhat with the fan who remarked that the Peies were faster but Barrie seemed smarter. He goes on to say: "Your scribe has seen some wild hockey crowds in his limited experience. We have heard that hockey crowds in Bobcaygeon, Fenelon Falls, Haliburton, etc., are really rabid—but they are a bunch of shrinking violets compared to that Barrie gang and the crowd from Peterborough. There were more fights, none amongst the players, than we have seen in one place in a short space of time since Popeye went sissy.

* * * * * * *

"THERE WERE crowds of people out on the ice between periods letting off firecrackers and in general making a lot of noise. A crowd from Peterborough would walk boldly across the ice to where the Barrie bunch were sitting. They'd come just close enough to throw some taunt into the faces of the Barrie fans and there'd be a fight. The police tried their best to keep order but the fights were breaking out all over the arena and, as long as no one was being hurt, the police seemed satisfied. When it was announced that there were hard feelings between the two teams, it was the truth. That there was no love lost between the Barrie and Peterborough followers was demonstrated on Friday." Yeah, Utopia is still a long way off, we fear.

* * * * * * *

WITH BOTH last year's receivers gone—Elliott to Kirkland Lake and McCarthy to Hamilton—Oshawa OM-men have been on the prowl for a good catcher. There was talk of Miskimmons from Western Ontario and Dick Mitchell of Cobourg going there, but we understand they have a catcher now from Galt. Napanee has been busy lately and we hear they have acquired Sony Grey of Belleville and an outfielder from Northern Ontario. Kingston is said to have a new battery but all is shrouded in secrecy. There are a few newcomers in around Peterborough recently and they may turn out for baseball when Spring practises are called. If Trenton Fliers come in, they'll pack their team as in hockey. It won't be long till lots of diamond dope is available.

TWO TEAMS were eliminated from playoffs in Senior City Basketball League tilts Saturday eve in the Y.M.C.A. gym. C.G.E. took a 32-20 nod over Neill's to rub out the footwear fellows whilst P.C.I. just managed to squeeze out Dominion Life by a 17-16 verdict. So it would seem that St. Paul's, C.G.E. and P.C.I. are set for the cage playoffs whenever they get under way. A good gang of rooters saw plenty of action in the hoop doubleheader and more will be on deck when the money series gets started. Something on this should be available through the week. A junior girls' game is listed for the Y.W. tomorrow night when "Y" Quakers tangle with Westclox in a postponed contest.

Royal Mail Wins Historic Grand National

Royal Mail, eight-year-old black gelding owned by H. L. Thomas, won the 98th running of the historic Grand National steeplechase at Aintree, England, leading a large field over the treacherous course. Golden Miller, the favorite until a few hours before race time, fell at the water jump on the second round, the third straight time the Miller has fallen. Ego, the last-minute choice, finished fourth behind Cooleen and Pucka Belle. Royal Mail was backed 100 to 6 and covered the four and one-half mile course over 30 jumps in nine minutes and forty-nine and one-fifth seconds. The winner is pictured here.

C.G.E. PUCK TITLE WON BY WIRE DEPT.

Defeat Fractionals, 3-0, To Take Playoff Round By 4-0 Score Saturday

The C.G.E. Shop Hockey League championship for 1937 was captured by Wire Dept. Saturday afternoon in the Brock St. rink when they took a 3-0 decision over Fractional Motors. The first of the home-and-home series had ended in a 1-0 win and the Wiremen won the round by a 4-0 count to wind up the local hockey season. A fair-sized crowd of fans saw a lively game on heavy ice.

Despite the heavy going, play was clean all the way with Field drawing the only penalty. Wire Dept. showed some nice combination and had most of the play, Clarke being good in the Fractionals' goal to hold down the count. He was the losers' only outstanding player. Pammett and Heal teamed up well together and Williams was strong on defence for the winners. Heal got the first goal on Pammett's assist. Pammett scored the next marker and Heal added the third, one goal being scored to a period. The teams:

Wire Dept.: Goal, Harding; defence, Williams and Aikers; centre, Pammett; wings, Heal and Birkheff; alternate, Millard.

St. Mike's To Meet Copper Cliff Team

SUDBURY, Ont. March 22 (CP)—Johnny Godfrey, burly defenceman of the Copper Cliff Redmen, is out of the three-game Memorial Cup playdowns with a broken arm, suffered Saturday night in practice for the series which starts here tonight with St. Michael's College juniors. Norman Perry, who played Nickel Belt hockey this season with Creighton Mines, will replace Godfrey.

St. Mike's won the right to meet the Redmen by winning 5-3 Saturday in Toronto from Stratford Midgets in the fifth and deciding game for the Ontario Hockey Association championship.

At The Baseball Training Camps

(By the Associated Press)

TAMPA, Fla., March 22 — Fresh from a 7 to 3 victory over the Dodgers at Clearwater, Cincinnati's Reds returned here today for the second game. Manager Chuck Dressen slated Paul Derringer and Gene Schott for mound duty.

NEW ORLEANS—Cleveland Indians returned to their training camp today to renew warfare against the New Orleans farm club, after two defeats by New York Giants in week-end contests at Gulfport, Miss.

Despite the heavy going, play was clean all the way with Field drawing the only penalty. Wire Dept. showed some nice combination and had most of the play, Clarke being good in the Fractionals' goal to hold down the count. He was the losers' only outstanding player. Pammett and Heal teamed up well together and Williams was strong on defence for the winners. Heal got the first goal on Pammett's assist. SEBRING, Fla.—Col. Jacob Ruppert, who hasn't had a word from his holdout pitcher, Charley Ruffing, has added another line to his ultimatum. If he reports, Rufus the Red will have to prove he's in condition before he will be allowed to sign, Ruppert says.

TAMPA, Fla.—There's a feud in the making between Burleigh Grimes of Brooklyn Dodgers and Chuck Dressen of Cincinnati Reds. Grimes shouted "rough stuff" after Cookie Lavagetto suffered an ankle injury and Tony Malinosky was shaken up in collisions with Cincinnati Reds. Dressen retorted, "You've got a job now, let's see you keep it.

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif.—Manager Pie Traynor played third base Sunday in the first practice game of the season for Pittsburgh Pirates, batted out three hits and scored three runs. A team piloted by Honus Wagner defeated Jewel Ens' outfit, 11 to 4.

LAKELAND, Fla.—Detroit Tigers saw a possible regular pitcher today in Paul (Dizzy) Trout, rookie, after a no-hit performance in three innings against Boston Red Sox. Trout a right-hander, walked two men.

LEAFS BEAT WINGS 3 TO 2 IN FINAL SCHEDULED GAME

ackson, Boll And Drillon Score While Apps' Best Is An Assist

PLENTY OF ACTION

TORONTO, March 22.—The Leafs round up their regular N.H.L. schedule with a highly entertaining victory over the champion Detroit Red Wings.

Attracted chiefly by the thrilling scoring battle waged by pivotmen Hy. Apps of Toronto, and Marty Barry, of Detroit, over 14,000 fans wended their way into the Gardens —but their vocal efforts of encouragement to Conny Smythe's prize rookie proved in a hopeless cause.

While Apps bested Mr. Barry by drawing down one assist in Toronto's 2 to 1 triumph—"Sweeney" Schriner—the meany—bolted to the front as he collected three points as the Americans went down before Maroons 8 to 4.

Wide Open Action.

It was a wide-open fight for the most part and an excellent line-up for the Leafs' playoff engagements which open here against New York Rangers this evening.

Turk Broda and Normie Smith—in the opposing nets—experienced some very busy moments as the teams went gunning for goals—but when Toronto carried a one-goal margin into the third period the checking was considerably closer, especially when Messrs. Apps and Barry were in possession of the puck.

Apps spent 26 minutes all told on the ice and, though he was very much a marked man, he was a constant menace to Smith. With a little more hyperoxia might easily have had two or three goals. Barry also was dangerous, but his playing was not nearly so spectacular as that of Apps.

Drillon Scores.

Gordie Drillon finally broke the ice with the only goal of the first period. Red Horner and Syl Apps executed a neat combination effort and "Butch" Bod trabbed the puck from Bill Thoms to shoot Toronto ahead two minutes after the game had started. The left winger sped in alone to beat Smith cleanly.

Jimmy Fowler was the instigator of the Leafs' second successful charge. On one of his exciting rushes the young defenseman passed down the boards to Apps, inside the Detroit area. "Hy" struggled a pass over to Drillon and Gordie flipped it in between Smith's pads and the goalpost.

Mickie Sinks One.

A scramble brought Detroit's first goal at 12.35 of the second and Broda was prostrate when young Howard Mackie took Sid Howe's rebound and lifted the puck into the cage.

Reggie Hamilton's penalty for roughing Pettinger paved the way for the equalizer. The Wings attacked with four forwards and a defenseman, but it was a fluke that saw Ike Kilrea deflect the puck under Broda's pads as the goalie threw himself out to another an attack by Johnny Sorrell.

Goodfellow joined Hamilton in the penalty box for tripping "Red" Horner and before the jaggy Detroiter had returned, Harvey Jackson beat Sands one along the ice into the corner of the cage for the winning goal. Drillon gave Jackson the pass and the Buzzer's shot travelled all the way from the blue line.

Maple Leafs — Goal, Broda; defence, Horner and Fowler; centre, Thoms; wings, Conacher and Bell; subs, Apps, Drillon, H. Jackson; Metz, Snell, Davidson, Finnigan, Day and Hamilton.

Detroit — Goal Smith; defence, Goodfellow and Bowman; centre, Pettinger; wings, Mackie and Howe; subs, Barry, H. Kilrea, Lewis, Kelly, Brydgeson, W. Kilrea, Sorrell, McDonald and Gallagher.

Officials—Mickey Ion and Johnny Mitchell.

2—Leafs, Drillon (Apps, Fowler) 16.27
Penalty—Bowman.

Second Period.

3—Red Wings, Mackie (Howe) 12.30
4—Red Wings, H. Kilrea (Sorrell, Goodfellow) 17.41

Penalties—Hamilton and Goodfellow.

Third Period.

Penalties—None.

N.H.L. All-Stars

(By the Canadian Press.)

Bob Gracie, Maroons who scored two goals and assisted in two others as the Montrealers trounced Americans 8-4. Dave Schriner, Americans, whose goal and two assists didn't help the New Yorkers much, but won him the scoring championship.

Dave Trottier, Maroons, who led the Montreal attack with two goals as they whipped Detroit 5-1 last night.

Bill Cowley, Boston, whose brilliant play-making paved the way for four Bruin goals in a 5-1 victory over Chicago.

Harvey Jackson, Toronto, who scored the winning goal for Leafs' 3-2 victory over Detroit after Red Wings had wiped out a two goal deficit.

Allan Cup Survivors

Elimination of St. Jerome from the eastern picture left nine teams striving for Canadian senior hockey honors today. Another will pass out when Toronto Goodyears and Dominions meet tonight. The Allan Cup field, narrowed down to six teams in the east and three in the west, follows:

East

N.B.—Moncton; Quebec—Hull Volants and Quebec Aces; Ontario—Sudbury Tigers, Toronto Goodyears and Dominions.

West

Detroit Plays Cautiously With Playoffs Only Two Days Away

BARRY IS SHORT A POINT

DETROIT, March 22—(CP)—Montreal's Maroons outskating and outpassing the Champion Red Wings, closed the National Hockey League season before 8,000 spectators here last night by overwhelming Detroit 5 to 1.

Marty Barry, Detroit centre needing two points to tie for the league scoring lead not only one, an assist on Herbie Lewis's first-period goal, the lone Red Wing counter.

With the play-offs only two days away, neither team took chances, and only one penalty was called. Carl Voss was off the ice for tripping when Lewis scored. Billy Beveridge stopped all other tries.

The one-goal lead Lewis produced lasted five minutes. Gus Marker tied the score at 17.09 of the first period and Trottier's first counter put Maroons ahead at 13.08 of the second. Runge, Trottier and Northcott each accounted for a goal in the third period.

TWEED CAPTURES HONORS OF T.V.L. BEAT BELLEVILLE

Sailors Lose Chance Of Entering Robertson Cup By 4-2 Drubbing

THIRD GAME OF FINALS

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, March 22. — With both teams out after the second victory in the third game of the Trent Valley Hockey League, Tweed Intermediates waded into the Belleville Sailors at Madoc on Saturday evening, and emerged with a four-to-two victory and the trophy, before one of the largest crowds of the season, Madoc scoring a good game had the ice well prepared for the final game, despite the recent mild and stormy weather.

Belleville went one up in the first canto when Semark tallied the first goal of the game. Both teams went into it and played some of the best hockey of the season, neither team scoring in the second period. Tweed tallied twice when Elsbury opened up on a scoring splurge to tally both counters for the home forces in this period, Semark tallied the second and what proved to be the last goal for the Belleville team.

Going into the last period tied two-all, both teams went to work, and as a result J. Tummon, lefty defenseman on the Tweed rearguard, tallied the third Tweed goal, and Maguire, after some clever stick-handling and passing tallied the fourth goal.

Entering the play-offs as an outsider for any shame of carrying into the finals, Tweed took the winning hand and knocked off Madoc in the first round, while Belleville toppled Stirling. Entering the finals with the top team of the league, Belleville, and the fourth place team of the series, Tweed, it was not expected that the Blue and White would last the series with the Belleville Yacht Club. In the first game of the finals at the Tweed Arena, the Blue and Whites under Coach Dwayne put Belleville down one game by a 9 to 3 count, while in the second game in Madoc went to the Yachtsmen by a 3 to 1 count.

As Madoc proved to be a sport centre this season, the final game was played there, and the crowd cheered lustily as first one side gained a lead and then the other.

Only one penalty was handed out in this game, with Ethier of the Sailors getting the count.

During the series both goalies displayed some very good form, and in many cases made almost impossible stops, especially was this true in the first game when Thompson in the Tweed nets was rushed in the last period, only to rob the sailors of sure goals.

Courneyea, Elsbury, and Maguire of the home forces were standouts, while the Ethier brothers, and Semark were the Belleville team's best.

It was a tough break for Belleville to lose this game, as it is possible that the winner of this series will now enter the Rosseteau Cup series, providing cold weather holds and there is sufficient ice in the local arena.

"Doots" McKinney of Belleville refereed the game to the satisfaction of both teams.

Tweed — Goal, Thompson; defence, Jos Tummon and J. Tummon; centre, Walter Leal; wings, Jos Courneyea and R. Maguire; alternates, Elsbury, Long, R. Leal, and Cornish.

Belleville — Goal, Hinton; defence, "Head" Ethier and J. Ethier; centre, Howie; wings, Harvey and Semark; alternates, Day, Guyer, McGuire, Hammond.

The summary:

First Period.

1—Belleville, Semark.

Second Period.

2—Tweed, Elsbury.
3—Tweed, Elsbury.
4—Belleville, Semark.

Third Period.

5—Tweed, J. Tummon.
6—Tweed, R. Maguire.

SCHRINER TAKES SCORING LAURELS OVER APPS 46-45

Red Wings Produce Best Punching Team, Best Defenceman, Best Goalie

119 POINTS TO FRONT LINE

TORONTO, March 22.—No matter how you juggle final National Hockey League statistics, one team stands out from the others on the season's play—Detroit Red Wings. The champions proved on the record books they have everything necessary for a great club, the result of expert coaching by emiling Jack Adams.

The big Red team scored more goals than any other, had less scored against them, produced the league's leading line and top defenceman in the United States section. But they missed the big prize, the individual scoring award which went to New York Americans' Dave Schriner.

Sweeney closed the season with a rumba to add six points in two games and became the second N.H.L. player to take the honors two years in succession. Charlie Conacher of Toronto Maple Leafs won the title in 1934 and 1935 before the slick-haired left winger from Calgary took over the reins.

Playing most of the season 20 pounds under weight following an influenza attack, it looked as though Dave was not going to make the grade. But he resumed to top form after Ameks had been knocked out of the playoffs and crowned the Allister line with 46 points one better than Toronto's Syl Apps.

Apps' great showing added to his shadows of winning the prize rookie honors which Schriner won in his first major league stand three seasons ago. Apps had 29 assists to lead the league in that department.

Puts Him With the "Greats."

There's no trophy for leading scorer but Schriner's accomplishments sets him beside such greats as the late Howie Morenz, Bill Cook, Babe Dye, Newsy Lalonde and Joe Malone, each of whom earned the scoring honors on two occasions. If he repeats for a third season, he will be in a class by himself.

Wings' ace front line of Marty Barry, Larrie Aurie and Herb Lewis showed the way to all others amassing a total of 119 points. Close behind came Lesley Apps, Harvey Jackson, Gordon Drillon plus with 118 and Americ Art Chapman, Schriner, Carr attack with 109.

The starry Red flank, now minus Aurie, out with a broken ankle, played a big part in Wings' top scoring mark of 128 goals, two more than Montreal Maroons' total. Their goalie, Norm Smith, was beaten only 103 times, eight less than topped by Alec Connell and Bill Beveridge, Maroon teammates.

Burly Babe Siebert of Canadiens, with 38 points, got the league's defencemen, but Wings had a close rival in Hershe Goodfellow, who fronted the American section rearguardsmen with 25, the same total going up by Maroons' veteran, Lionel Conacher.

The season finished with hockey's iron man, Murray Murdoch, still scoreless, New York Rangers's winger, who has played more consecutive games than any player in the big time, marked up 14 assists. He never came closer to scoring than he did last night, but Wilf Cude robbed him as Rangers beat Canadiens 3-1.

BRUINS WALLOP HAWKS DOWN 6-1

Win Gives Boston Choice Of Ice In Playoffs With Maroons

BOSTON, March 22— (CP).—Boston Bruins belatedly finding a way of beating the Black Hawks at home, whipped the Chicago visitors 6 to 1 last night in the National Hockey League's seasonal wind-up.

Only 5,000 saw the game. The triumph was an important one for the homesters, for it gave them first choice of ice in their second-place playoffs with Montreal Maroons. As a result that series will open in Montreal Tuesday.

The tallented Hawks were woeful as they finished their campaign. Their only goal came during the last minute of play.

Bruins' victory was paced by Thornton Lord, his goal-tending brother, "Tiny," out of the Boston cage and passed back to "Peg" Kelly, who was unopposed as he flipped home a close-up shot.

Four of the Boston goals were provided by the speedy Cowley, Sands, Getliffe line, the latter two each scoring twice, Cowley had four assists.

Boston — Goal, Thompson; defense, Portland, Shields; centre, Cowley; wings, Getliffe, Sands; subs, Clapper, Smith, Weiland, Goldsworthy, Bauer, Beattie, Holsta, Dumart, Schmidt.

Schmidt.

Officials—Smith and Stewart.

First Period.

1—Boston, Dumart (Schmidt) 8.00
Penalties—None.

Second Period.

2—Boston, Getliffe, (Cowley) .2.20
Penalty—Portland.

Third Period.

3—Boston, Getliffe (Sands, Cowley) 17

5—Boston, Bauer (Smith) 15.04
6—Chicago, Kelly (Thompson, Romnes) 19.36

GULFPORT, Miss., March 22.—(AP).—Bambo Leslie, who hails from nearby Pascagoula, always puts a big hand when the Giants play anywhere in Mississippi. . . Last year, when the team played here, a group of Sam's admirers presented him with an engraved watch—with his name spelled wrong. It came out "Leaslie". . . Same a few was red; so was the Mayor's. . . If you have hesitated to hop on the Henry Armstrong bandwagon, climb aboard. . . Any guy who can go out of his class and lick Aldo Spoldi has plenty on the ball. . . Frank Kohlbecker, old Southern Association catcher, now is travelling secretary of Cleveland Indians and doing a swell job.

Giants continue to set the pace as the best-dressed ball club. . . Frank Spencer, sports editor of the Winston-Salem (N.C.) Journal, has a junior. . . . New York writers with the Giants were caught off their guard when the Indians came to town and Manager Steve O'Neill went around shaking hands with everybody. . . FALCONS, EAGLES OUT FOR SEASON

Indians And Reds Meet Tuesday, Winner To Battle Ramblers

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 22.—(CP).—Cleveland Falcons and New Haven Eagles, their International American Hockey League campaign ended, slowed their hockey togs away today but the other seven clubs who battled since last November to eliminate and New Haven, headed for the playoffs on two divisions.

Springfield Indians and Providence Reds, who finished second and third, respectively, in the eastern group after a race which wasn't settled until Saturday night, open a two-out-of-three series at Springfield Tuesday night. They'll play at Providence Thursday and, if necessary, at Springfield again Saturday.

The winner will meet Philadelphia Ramblers, who topped seven sections with a 30-point total, in a similar playoff. This will open at Springfield Saturday or Providence Sunday if the first round is finished in two games, otherwise at Philadelphia March 30. Other dates are April 1 on the rink of the first round winner and April 3 at Philadelphia.

Meanwhile Syracuse Stars and Pittsburgh Hornets will finish it out over the three-out-of-five game route, opening at Syracuse Wednesday. The second game is scheduled for Saturday at Pittsburgh and they'll keep alternating on the following dates: March 24, March 31 and April 4.

In the season's final games, Pittsburgh defeated Philadelphia 5-0, Syracuse won 9-3 from Cleveland, and New Haven defeated Providence 4-3 Sunday.

Saturday's games saw Philadelphia win 4-2 from Pittsburgh, Springfield won 4-2 from New Haven, and Syracuse defeated Cleveland 6-4.

BEAVERS DEFEAT DOMINIONS 4-2 IN WESTERN TILT

Quebec Puts St. Jerome Out—Hull Beats Moncton 5 To 3

MIKES OUST MIDGETS 8-3

TORONTO, March 22—(C.P.). — The West blew trumpets to-day for North Battleford as the Beavers continued their march along the road leading to Canadian Senior hockey finals. One victory away from Western finals and three from the semi-finals for the Allan Cup, the Saskatchewan club continues to impress as it goes.

After knocking aside Regina Aces, winners of a powerful group, the Beavers drew a bye in the first stage of Interprovincial playdowns Saturday they swung back into competition and showed no ill effects from the lay-off as they defeated Edmonton Dominion 4-2 at Calgary, scene of next month's cup finals. Edmonton had eliminated British Columbia's winner, Nelson.

It's been no secret North Battleford has strength and the club's week-end display was just another step toward realization of the hopes of a good part of the West. Dominions are by no means beaten yet, of course. The series is on a best-of-three basis and Edmonton, only city besides Toronto with teams still in Senior and Junior playdowns, has been looking forward to a fruitful harvest. But the fact remains the entire West has been touting Beavers all Winter.

Gaye Burke, clever winguan, scored three times for Saturday's winners. Dave Duchak added the fourth goal, and Jerry Brown and Bob Hickey registered for Edmonton. The series will be continued tonight at Regina, and the eventual winner will meet Fort William in Western finals.

Aces Beat St. Jerome

The current week will see the entire Senior scene clarified. Quebec Aces won a provincial title yesterday by defeating St. Jerome, Quebec Intermediate winner, 3-1 for a second successive victory. To-night Toronto Goodyears and Dominions will clash in the fifth and deciding game of their best-of-five series and the victor will be sent against Sudbury Tigers later in the week.

Hull Volants and Moncton Maroons started Eastern intersectional playoffs Saturday, Hull winning 5-3. Maroons tried a mass attack system and Goulie Ray Marion had to be good as Volants swept away early.

MARMORA TEAM IN SCHOOL FINALS

Start Playoff Against London Friday—North Bay, Ottawa Left

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, March 22.—Marmora High school hockey team will be represented with teams of Ottawa, North Bay and London in the C.O.S.S.A. finals which open in London on Friday, March 26, and last two days.

Though Marmora's right to enter these finals was confirmed by the Ottawa Collegiate Institute, the latter's failure to conform with league rules in that they used players who had not obtained an average of 50 per cent. placed them out of the running. Marmora's protest being granted, the boys are now keen upon the trip.

PROPOSE CHAIN FOR THE MAYOR

loath to follow the Mother Country in the matter of historic pageantry, is no good reason why Peterborough should not lead the way," Alderman Dutton believes.

Seeking Information

Vancouver is one of the few Canadian cities whose mayor dons regalia on important civic occasions, and the citizen's committee is seeking information from the civic head of the Pacific coast city, as to the cost of Alderman Dutton's proposal and other details. The cost of mayoral robes from an English firm of robe manufacturers has also been sought.

If the committee decides to adopt the idea—and their decision will of course be dictated by public opinion—the matter of cost would no doubt be an important consideration. It is quite probable the gift to the mayor, which would be handed down to his successors in office for all time, could be made by public subscription, as one of the city's expressions of loyalty during Coronation observances. Details would of course have to be worked out by the committee.

Needs Careful Thought

The sponsors of the idea are all agreed that the scheme would involve a great amount of careful consideration from several angles, as it is pointed out, care must be taken not to cheapen the suggestion, but rather to establish something that would grow in value with the passing of the years and provide a symbol to generations yet unborn of Peterborough's loyalty and devotion to the Crown and the dignity attaching to representatives of British administration.

Here are some of the expressions of opinion obtained by The Examiner bearing on the proposal. Other comments either for or against the idea are invited:—

The Rev. J. Douglas Paterson—"It is an excellent idea. Anything that adds to the dignity of civic life is all to the good. I do not think the business of any municipality should be approached in an inferior way."

He added that at a conference with Alderman Dutton, chairman of the Citizen's Committee having charge of the city's observance of the Coronation, "I presented a definite scheme in connection with the proposed chain of office, which will be divulged by the committee if public opinion is in favor of the proposal."

Dr. H. H. Kenner, principal of Peterborough Collegiate Institute and Vocational School—"It is an Old Country custom of course, but I am all for it. The office of mayor is one that should be invested with dignity, and I feel that the chief magistrate of any city might well wear regalia on important civic occasions. I am in favor of it."

Magistrate O. A. Langley, K.C.—"I would like to see the suggestion put into effect. Besides investing the office of mayor with added dignity and authority, the proposed robes and chain of office would give us a means of helping to preserve some of the glorious traditional things so closely associated with our British heritage. Anything that will help to maintain the proper respect for constitutional law and authority is good for any community. Adoption of regalia to be worn by the mayor would be a splendid thing particularly at this time of Coronation. It would tend to give us closer unity with the Mother Country, where pageantry is so closely connected with all judicial and civil matters."

The Rev. Dr. T. T. Barr, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church: "I am certainly in favor of the proposal because I believe the office of mayor needs to be invested not only with dignity but with authority. The tendency in democratic countries such as Canada and the United States is to regard these matters as being of little moment, but in the face of popular tendencies the reminder provided by such regalia would have a stabilizing effect on the popular conscience. Respect for the office should always be considered above respect for the person who occupies the office, although the best qualified to hold the office will receive respect in both senses."

Dr. J. A. Bannister, principal of the Normal School—"My reaction to the suggestion is there are so many other matters of more importance, that it is not an advisable thing. I think public money could be spent to better advantage."

The Rev. F. J. Kelly, rector of St. Peter's Cathedral—"While some of these Old Country ideas might sound a little extravagant to us, nevertheless the fact is that with all her respect for tradition and custom Old England is holding together in a very fine way. I believe respect for tradition and for the Monarchy is a desirable thing and should be cultivated. For that reason I would be in favor of Alderman Dutton's proposal. The idea compares in some respects to the system attendant on many aspects of church ritual."

The Hon. O. N. Gordon, K.C. — "It's the buzz with a capital B."

RANGERS TROUNCE CANADIENS 3 TO 1

NEW YORK, March 22 (C.P.) — A scoring splurge in the last period gave New York Rangers a 3-1 triumph over Montreal Canadiens before 10,000 spectators here last night in the final scheduled match of the regular National Hockey League season.

The Rangers, who open the Stanley Cup playoffs against Toronto Maple Leafs on Tuesday, rapped three markers into the Canadien cage in the last twenty minutes, against one Canadien tally. Phil Watson, Mac Colville and Lynn Patrick were the successful Ranger marksmen, while "Babe" Siebert, burly Canadien defenceman, rang up the lone Montreal goal.

The Canadiens, leaders of the Canadian group, left immediately after the game for Detroit, where they open the league championship series on Tuesday. Both teams were at full strength and by mutual consent used 19 players, as the rival coaches did considerable experimenting in preparation for the playoffs.

The Day That I Forget

By MARIE BLIZARD

CHAPTER 41

It was fortunate for Janet Paynter that she welcomed Russell Bede back into her life as a friend that year. He had much to offer her that she needed.

It was Russell who was her prop when she had financial worries; Russell, not Joel, who appreciated the thrill she got when she studied the figures and profit on the theater at Grannis. It was Russell who calmed her perturbation over Joel's play. And it was Russell who offered her work that was to occupy her mind.

The play was the first worry that she asked Russell to share with her.

After six weeks of rehearsal, at the very moment the play was scheduled to open, a play doctor was called in to make revisions. There was something radically wrong and Joel shared the producer's worries.

Finally it opened in Philadelphia and received bad notices. Joel was moody, cross and worried. Janet was, in the parlance of the theater, a ham!

He overacted and he underacted. He gave a performance that would have been notable on the screen but which was valueless on the stage. Janet was sick about it. No one would ever have known it.

When the reviews were out a few hours later, she staunchly agreed with Joel that the critics didn't know acting when they saw it. And prayed that the play would survive in spite of the odds against it, in spite of the cutting reviews. The reviews were not as unkind about Joel as they might have been. The critics respected Joel's popularity and personal charm.

In a week it was obvious that the play would survive. The public wanted to see Joel Paynter in person and paid to do it.

Joel recovered his aplomb and was his jaunty self. Not that Joel was the jaunty type but Janet was pleased to label his release from worry by that name. When the seats began selling weeks in advance, he was cantankerous again and he wouldn't talk about his plans for the future.

He took the news about the little theater in Grannis without any outward sign of rejoicing. He was still thinking in terms of $3,000 a week and he couldn't work up much excitement about the $2,000 that had been cleared in profits in the season at Grannis.

Jane had been thrilled to death about it. She had gone up to the Cape to visit the Carletons and spent the closing week there, happily discussing plans for the next season. The little theater movement was beginning to interest some of the first people of the theater and several opportunities had been offered them for the next season. The Carletons were excited about a play that had been offered by a sensational new young playwright and wanted Janet to read it. They began to talk about exploitation and reviews and enlarging the organization. If their plans met with the Paynters' approval, they were going to make plans to return the next season, otherwise, they would not come north. Leslie had been offered the management of a small theater in Florida and for the first time since their marriage, Mary was anticipating spending winter with her husband. It was to be on a partnership basis and Leslie was to collect half the profits. They hoped to make such a success of it that they could make their permanent home in Florida, but they wouldn't let the Paynters down and if Janet wished it, they would make arrangements to return the following summer.

Janet arranged for decorating changes to be made and left the matter in abeyance. She wanted to talk it over with Joel but Joel was deep in his new work and had little interest in it. Anything that Janet wanted done was okay with him, he said.

So Janet put that in the background of her mind. She had something else with which to occupy her thoughts. Russell Bede had again become interested in the merchandising plans she had told him about during the previous summer. Again he offered her a job.

He needed those plans, he said, in his shops. Would Janet work them out relative to the merchandise to be sold and the particular needs of the communities in which they were being sold? He offered her a salary that was pin money to Joel but represented a great sum to her because it meant that she had done a good job worth so much.

Of course, she said she couldn't do it without Joel's consent and she had no reason to feel that Joel had changed his mind about his wife having a career.

Surprisingly enough, Joel had no objections. He tweaked her ear, kissed her on the nose and told her to go ahead. She "might as well have some fun with her pencils and papers and bits of fabric as to spend all her time playing bridge." If it was a pastime, he hoped she'd have a good time.

There was something in Joel's mind then that Janet didn't know about. She didn't know about the long sleepless nights that he spent staring into the darkness and trying to take stock of himself. Joel was beginning to come out of the mist he had lived in for four years, a mist that had begun long before that. There were things that frightened him. He was facing a question that many men before him had encountered and what it would mean to him. There were never two kings to reign the popular market. And if Joel had not the hold and was not the romantic choice of the box office, what else had he?

With this dawning realization came another discomforting thought: Janet. He was beginning to see Janet through clearer eyes. How soon would she see him for what he was? Without Janet his life would be lost.

Janet had little need of him, he thought. She filled up her life with things that had nothing to do with him. She had "some sort of business" as he put it. She was up and out before he opened his eyes in the morning. She had a desk in his unused study where he saw bits of curtain fabrics, samples of rugs, mats of newspaper advertising and neat little piles of notes and sketches.

She was always there when he came home. She was always fresh, sweet and lovely for him at the dinners she took a child-like delight in serving as surprises for him.

But he knew, as his taxi speeded him across town, that in a few minutes she would be off somewhere with her new friends. Friends of Russell Beder's. She always told him about them. But she was vague about table tennis at someone's house...or, "we went to the book fair"...or, "You wouldn't have cared for it, Joel, but it was rather fun watching him work out the

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY'S GARDEN

"Bang! Rattle! Clang! Clash!"

Hearing these sounds coming from the garage, Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy called to Mrs. Longears, the rabbit lady.

"Oh, my goodness!"

"What's the matter?" asked Uncle Wiggily's wife.

"I'm so afraid something has happened to Mr. Longears," squeaked the muskrat lady housekeeper. "Did you hear that?"

Mrs. Longears didn't need to ask what Nurse Jane had heard. From the garage came much louder sounds of

"Lammano! Macno! Ching! Ching!"

"Oh!" screamed Mrs. Longears. "Is Wiggily in the garage, Janie?"

"He went out there a little while ago," said Miss Fuzzy Wuzzy. "I asked him if he was going to take a ride and he said he wasn't."

"What did he say he was going to do?" asked Mrs. Longears.

"He said he was going to make a garden as this was now Spring and some of the little birds had already begun to sing."

Wrong Place

"A garden!" exclaimed the rabbit lady. "Gracious, goodness me! Wiggy couldn't make a garden in the garage."

"That's what I thought," went on Nurse Jane. "It's almost too early to make a garden out of doors, though it is true most of the snow has melted. But I never heard such sounds before when Uncle Wiggily made his spring garden."

"Nor I," agreed Mrs. Longears. "Listen again, if you please, Janie." For Nurse Jane was trying to take a key out of the piano. Maybe she thought she was going to lock herself in so nothing would happen.

Nurse Jane ceased the tinkling sound she was making by fiddling with the piano key. Then both animal ladies heard:

"Clatter! Clatter! Clack! Bang! BAM!"

"Oh, I'm sure some new kind of Bad Chaps must be catching Uncle Wiggily in the garage" said Nurse Jane.

"I think so, myself," agreed Mrs. Longears. "I'm going out there and help him," she said in a brave though quavering voice.

"I'll come with you!" offered Nurse Jane. "But wait a moment." She ran out to the kitchen and got the potato masher. Mrs. Longears took the rolling pin and thus armed the two lady animals started out of the hollow stump bungalow.

Wiggy Whistles

They hadn't gone more than half way to the garage before they saw Uncle Wiggily coming out. He was whistling a merry tune and over his shoulder he carried a spade, a rake and a grubbing hoe.

"Goodness, Wiggy!" cried his wife. "Did you have to use all those things to frighten the Bad Chaps?"

"Ha! Ha! There were no Bad Chaps!" laughed the rabbit gentleman.

"What made all that noise?" asked Nurse Jane.

"I was just getting my garden tools out of the corner where I parked them last Fall," said Mr. Longears. "I have them now and I am going to start making a garden."

"Wiggy!" said his wife, "it's quite too early to make a garden. It may be Spring by the calendar but it is too early, that is around here near the Orange Ice Mountains, to plant a garden."

"Well, I'm going to dig up my garden and get a start," said Mr. Longears. "I like to be early, so here I go!"

Away he hopped, the spade, rake and grubbing hoe rattling, clattering and banging on his shoulder. Off toward the field where he had a garden last year hopped Mr. Longears. Then, all of a sudden, he heard a voice shouting at him:

"Hey! Stop, please! Wait for me!"

And if the horse-radish will give the pickled pig's foot a ride on its back I'll tell you what happened next in the story that is to be about Uncle Wiggily and Jackie's trouble.

THE HUMAN SEAL TAKES COLD DIP

Krikor Hekimian Plunges Into Otonabee River And Swims Thirty Yards

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, March 22.—A large Lakefield crowd was entertained by Krikor Hekimian, who calls himself "The Human Seal," opposite the power house on the Otonabee River, Friday evening.

Surrounded by snow-clad banks Hekimian amused a crowd of young folk of the village. After passing a cap for donations, he plunged into the icy water, clad in a pair of trunks. After swimming a distance of thirty yards, he returned to the bank apparently none the worse for his chilly bath.

EDMONTON NEEDS MORE AIRPLANES BIGGER HANGARS

Western City One Of Most Active Centres Of Aviation In Canada

22 PILOTS OPERATING

EDMONTON, March 22.—One of the most active commercial aviation centres in Canada, Edmonton is suffering growing pains as increased operations in northern mining fields necessitates additional airplanes and overhaul facilities at the civic airport.

Purchase of three large monoplanes by one firm brought to 41 the number of machines operating from the Edmonton hangar. That total includes a number of non-commercial craft used by mining companies and others owned by individuals operating in the north.

Another indicated of the advance in aviation business made at Canada's farthest north city was engagement of eight new pilots and two pilot-mechanics. Now there are 22 pilots operating out of Edmonton besides several pilot mechanics.

Some companies had accepted the practice of keeping one airplane grounded, but demand for increased business has forced full-time use of all commercial aircraft.

This better business reflects increased activity in the north. Edmonton is the jumping off point into Northern British Columbia, the North West Territories and a large portion of northern Saskatchewan. Expansion of established mining fields and properties and opening up of new territory in the north bring direct benefits to Edmonton.

Capt. James Bell, manager of Edmonton airport, warns that unless additional hangar space is provided, Edmonton's position as one of the foremost aviation centres will be threatened.

Aviation brings at least $2,000,000 worth of business to Edmonton every year, Capt. Bell said in emphasizing the need of added facilities.

Flu Epidemic Is Still Severe In Section Around Bailieboro

In Some Cases Whole Families Have Been Down With Disease

DOCTORS ARE BUSY

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BAILIEBORO, March 22.—The flu epidemic has not excepted this district in its rounds. Doctors of the community have had a busy season attending the numerous patients who have required medical attention. The epidemic continues to spread and each day new outbreaks are reported. In some instances entire families are down with the flu at the present time.

There are, however, few cases of other annual diseases such as mumps, measles, etc., and medical health officers are now in hopes, with the arriving of warmer weather, these diseases may be averted.

Reads Blocked

The heavy snowfall which fell on Wednesday and was buried by the high March winds, piled the soft snow into banks on the township roads, which completely blocked traffic. Banks several feet deep were removed from the road east of the village before traffic was possible. Residents claims the snow was the heaviest of the season.

Many of the fields however were blown almost free from snow and Thursday's sun bared fields which faced the south.

It was feared that floods would again swept the country with the melting of the snow, but the fears were groundless however as the light rain which fell Thursday night scarcely raised the streams above the bank levels.

The March sun and penetrating winds have practically removed the snow from roads and countryside.

DOURO PLAYERS ON "MOLLY BAWN"

Dramatic Club Stage Favorite Old Irish Play Very Effectively

(Examiner Correspondence.)

DOURO, March 22.—The Douro Dramatic Club presented the Irish comedy drama, "Molly Bawn" on Tuesday evening in Harmony Hall. The hall was well filled. The acting was splendid, the stage lighting and appointments were very tasteful. The gowns worn by the young ladies of the cast were colorful and lovely. Altogether the play was an unqualified success. It will be repeated at a later date.

The stellar role was taken in splendid style by Miss Mary Walsh, who did some superb acting. Mr. Wilfred Kennedy, as Luttrell, was a splendid actor; John Holland as the crusty, disagreeable grandfather, took a difficult role with unqualified success. His acting was entirely convincing. Fergus O'Connor, as Shadwell, was splendid throughout and had a difficult part. Miss Mary Leahy, in impersonating Marcia, took the unpopular and difficult role in splendid style. Miss Isabel Towns, as Lady Cecil Stafford, a house guest, and an old friend of Sir William's, took her part in her usual efficient style. Harry Fitzgerald, as an eccentric, almost clownish Englishman, a house guest at Herst Royal, certainly made a hit. Miss Elizabeth Fitzgerald, as the old friend and servant, Sarah O'Donnell, took the role in inimitable style. In her queer old clothes, with funny, mincing walk, with her sharp tongue, she supplied plenty of comedy, especially in her encounter with the simpleton, Potts. In minor roles, James Walsh as the butler and Gerald Walsh as legal adviser, also gave a good account of themselves.

Between the acts, songs were rendered by John Sheehan, John Holland, Misses Mary Walsh and Margaret Whibbs, a piano duet by Misses Mary Quinlan and Margaret Sullivan and step-dancing by James Delaney and Victor Kennedy. Dr. Munro's orchestra, consisting of the doctor and the three Leahy brothers, rendered Irish airs which were very much enjoyed.

The cast deserves much credit for their talent and for their faithful attendance at practice. Rev. Father Welsh was the inspiration and director, with Miss Mary Quinlan and Mrs. David Garvey as assistants. Miss Quinlan also carried out the duties of accompanist very efficiently.

HAVELOCK

Miss Josephine Hoffman is visiting friends in Kitchener.

Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Steele of Mountain Grove spent a few days this week with the former's daughter, Mrs. F. Thompson.

The local Badminton Club held a "theatre party" Thursday evening to Campbellford, over twenty-four of the members taking in the show. The party returned to the home of their president, Mrs. Phillip Jones, after the show, where they were served refreshments of hot cocoa and coffee. A splendid time was reported by all in attendance.

Mr. H. W. Rothe was in Peterborough Friday.

Miss V. Robinson of the Public School teaching staff, left Friday afternoon to spend the week-end at her home near Madoc.

A public meeting of the citizens of Havelock has been called for in the town hall on Tuesday, March 30th, at 7.30 p.m., when the possibility of holding an Old Boys' Reunion in Havelock this summer will be discussed.

Shower Is Held

A miscellaneous shower was given Miss Mary Watson by Mrs. Robt. Scott at her home last Monday evening, when over sixty-three guests were in attendance. The guests were pleasantly received by Billie Barbara Watson, niece of the bride-to-be.

During the evening cards and games of various kinds were enjoyed and the presentation of the many lovely and useful gifts was the special feature. Dainty refreshments were served at midnight.

ALDERMAN GORDON WITHDRAWS PRIVATE BILL

TORIES TRYING COVER CROOKS SAYS HEPBURN

Charges Hurled During Security ties Debate Creates Session's Worst Uproar

IS NOT WITHDRAWN

Chairman, Division Uphold Premier Against Furious Opposition

TORONTO, March 23.—(CP)—Worst uproar of the session occurred in the Ontario legislature today when Premier Mitchell Hepburn declared he was "not surprised my honorable friends (the opposition) are trying to cover up a lot of crooks." The words were not withdrawn. James Clark (Lib. Windsor Sandwich) presiding in committee of the whole, ruling them not offensive.

Mr. Hepburn applied the term to what he called "blocking tactics" of the opposition to passage through committee stage of the bill to give the Ontario Securities Commission retroactive power to investigate business dealings between persons or companies.

Mr. Hepburn after the government had rejected Conservative amendment said the bill was not designed to correct frauds in connection with securities only. It would aid the succession duties branch that had already uncovered a lot of frauds.

"I'm not surprised my honorable friends are trying to cover up a lot of crooks," he declared.

About every member of the Conservative opposition was on his feet at once. There was an uproar with the Liberal members joining a chorus of "can't take it."

"Have some decency," shouted Arthur Ellis (Con. Ontario South).

Tit With Henry.

"Withdraw that remark if you have any manhood," shouted George Henry, Conservative House Leader.

"You can't talk about manhood," retorted Mr. Hepburn.

"I don't suppose you can either," said Mr. Henry.

Thomas Kidd (Con. Kingston) was pounding his desk demanding withdrawal of the "insult," to every Opposition member.

"That shaft went home," commented Premier Hepburn to the ministers around him.

Wilfred Heighington (Con. Toronto St. David) said the remark clearly imputed motives. He asked the Premier to be gracious enough to withdraw it.

"I'm prepared to follow your ruling," the Premier told the chairman. "I said their attitude placed them in that position," continued the Premier. "It is quite obvious that is their intention."

"Disgraceful," shouted Mr. Ellis.

"The statement is so offensive it makes me wonder why anybody wants to belong to this House," said Mr. Heighington. "It makes me feel like throwing up the sponge and quitting."

"Right around the buildings now are several prominent Conservatives fearful of the passing of the Bill in case we might collect more money," declared Mr. Hepburn.

"I hope you get what is owing the province," said Mr. Ellis.

"We're getting precious little co-

SUNDAY SALE BAN 92-YEAR-OLD LAW

Besides Cigarette Sale It Forbids Fishing, Playing Ball, Bathing In Public

TORONTO, March 23 (CP) — Prosecutions being made by police against Toronto druggists for selling cigars and cigarettes on Sundays are being launched under a Victorian law passed 92 years ago, Rev. Dr. C. H. Huestis of the Lord's Day Alliance and Magistrate A. L. Tinker confirmed today.

The old British act, incorporated in Ontario law as chapter 104 of the statutes of Upper Canada also forbids citizens of the provinces to bathe in public, attend a political meeting, go fishing, or "play at skittle, ball, football, rackes or any other noisy game" on the Sabbath.

If police carried out the letter of the old law, no citizen could "tipple or permit tippling (drinking of liquor), gamble with dice or otherwise, or run races on foot, or in carriages, or in vehicles of any sort."

The only persons exempted from the provisions of the old law are farmers and barbers. Dr. Huestis said "farmers are exempt because they are regarded as gentlemen and barbers because they were classed as surgeons in those days."

Dr. Huestis said the present drive on cigarette selling was "to stem commercialisation of the Sabbath."

Hotel Is Destroyed In Sherbrooke, Exits Cut Off.

SHERBROOKE, Que., March 23 (CP)—Fifteen persons were carried to safety by firemen and 50 others made their way down fire escapes when flames gutted the old section of the new Sherbrooke House early today with a loss of $30,000 to $50,000. There was no panic.

Fire originated in the hotel kitchen and swept with an explosion right to the roof within a few seconds. Acrid fumes swirled through corridors and stairways rendering escape difficult for 75 guests and 25 employees.

Probe Of Italian Aid To Rebels Is Demanded

Direct Breach of Ban Against Intervention Is Britain's Charge

France Sees Duce At Cross-roads--Must Withdraw Or Help Franco More Boldly

WORRIED BY DEFEAT

May Throw Full Strength Behind Rebels—Valencia Protests Patrol

LONDON, March 23 (CP)—Great Britain pressed an independent investigation today of reported Italian aid to Spanish insurgents in direct violation of the ban against intervention in the civil war.

The continued reports that Italian troops have landed in great numbers in Spain since the control agreement went into effect were investigated separately by the British in an effort to avoid clogging the agenda of the non-intervention committee. This group, of which Italy is a member, made ready today to go ahead with the land and sea patrol plan to isolate the conflict over the protest of the Valencia government.

French official sources in Paris said the French and British foreign offices were in close contract, apparently convinced that Premier Mussolini's unexpected return yesterday from a visit to Libya was connected with the insurgent defeat northeast of Madrid.

(The defenders of Madrid have charged that captured Insurgents disclosed the backbone of the fifth Assault against the Spanish capital on the Guadalajara front was three divisions of Italians.

(Officials in Rome scouted the idea of any political significance in Il Duce's return.)

Duce At Crossroads

The French sources expressed the belief the Italian premier might now decide whether to withdraw support from Insurgent General Franco or to go to his aid more directly, The Associated Press said.

The protest of the Valencia government it would not consent to the patrol of its coasts by Italy and Germany held first place on the agenda for today's meeting of the committee.

The note declared the government would not permit nations it charged with openly intervening in behalf of the Insurgents to control its coasts and would not concede the right to search its ships to the naval units of these powers.

Italian and Germany were assigned patrol of the eastern Mediterranean coasts of government-held Spain under the isolation blockade agreement while Great Britain and France took over the southern and northwestern seas off Insurgent territory.

The Daily Herald called the Italian defeat in Spain the "Adowa of the Saragossa road," likening it to the rout of the Italians in their attempted invasion of Ethiopia more than half a century ago.

The Daily Express reported that Mussolini had gone into conference with his military chieftains and that decisions of major importance would be taken. It was even possibl, The Express said, that Italy would now throw its full strength behind General Franco.

Madoc-Bound Hiking Couple On Final Lap

Mother, Carries Baby, Father Boy 3, And Grip On Long Trek From Huntsville

PASS LINDSAY

LINDSAY, Ont., May 23.—(CP)—A young married couple, a boy aged three and a six months old girl, are hitch-hiking from Huntsville to Madoc. The father, Charles Semard, 32, Mrs. Semard, 26, and the children were here last night and early today proceeded along the Peterborough highway on the last long lap to Madoc.

The mother carried the baby girl. The father had a heavy grip in one hand and with the other he clasped his son's hand and often times carried him.

The long, cold trip from Huntsville, walking miles and taking rides when sympathetic motorists were charitably inclined, they found their way to Lindsay at dusk Monday. The children were tired and hungry. Money was not available and the baby was fed only with a bottle of Lindsay's notorious tap water.

They found their way over to the police station and Constable Alfred Hodgson after hearing their story, phoned Children's Aid Society officials who, after getting in touch with Mayor Dr. H. D. Logan, placed the family in the Children's Shelter for the night. After a comfortable night and some good food the family started on their journey.

Semard said he was in Madoc until last June when he moved to Huntsville. He was unable to find employment, and did not qualify for relief so he was on his way back to Madoc. The children are withstanding the rigours of the trip very well. They are bundled warmly.

Discovery Of Girl's Skeleton Ends 9-Year-Old 'Peg Mystery

Police Suspect Tot 6, Was Slain And Stuffed Into Disused Boiler

FOUND BY WRECKERS

WINNIPEG, March 23—(CP). — Police to-day probed discovery of the skeleton of six-year-old Julia Design 14—Discovery ..... Johnson, who disappeared nine years ago from in front of her home in East Winnipeg, in the belief the child was brutally slain.

Wilfred Adams, a workman, found the bones, a few wisps of cloth and a pair of small shoes yesterday while dismantling disused boiler in a brick-lined brick building on Sutherland street about two block from where Julia disappeared April 28, 1928.

Identification of the shoes and a pair of ragged stockings still clinging to the bones was made by John Johnson, 26-year-old brother, who was but 16 at the time of the girl's disappearance.

Taken in police headquarters, the mother, Mrs. Anton Johnson, pointed to a wisp of dark brown hair and a torn piece of dress as having belonged to her youngest child.

Certain of Murder

Chief Constable George Smith and Deputy Chief Charles MacIver said they were almost certain Julia had been slain and her body stuffed into the boiler with the slayer probably intending to set it afire eventually and erase all trace of the crime.

MacIver revealed police had been seeking since the crime an elderly man with a brownish-grey beard.

Plant 10,000 Acorns On Coronation Day

Toronto, March 23—(CP)

BORN from a Torontonian's enthusiasm for the work accomplished by the organization in London, the Canadian branch of the "men of the trees" will foster the planting of 10,000 acorns and seedlings shipped from the new forest, throughout the Dominion to commemorate Coronation Day.

The organization came into existence here about two years ago with the aim of "planting, protecting and taking care of trees." The Toronto resident responsible was F. E. Robson, president of the Canadian branch. The organization now has 300 members.

A sworn statement by Florian Kovacs, then a neighbor of the Johnsons said Kovacs had seen a girl answering the description of Julia walking with an old, grey-bearded man in the vicinity of the now-deserted warehouse. At times the statement said, she would hold the man's hand, at times skip ahead bouncing the tennis ball found yesterday beneath the tiny pile of bones.

Julia's parents hoped against hope through the years of uncertainty their daughter was alive. Mrs. Johnson called regularly every two weeks during all that time at the office of the chief of police, hoping for some clue that would lead to return of the baby girl.

HURLED OVER HILL LAD LIES 8 HOURS TRUSSED IN COLD

Search Reveals Bartonville Victim 12, Little Worse For Experience

BLAMES TWO YOUTHS

HAMILTON, March 23—(CP). — Pushed and jolted almost a mile over rough country roads and then hurled over a debris-strewn hill with his feet tied tightly together, 12-year-old Hubert Stewart of Bartonville, crawled several hundred yards to his home early to-day.

The boy, found about 100 yards away from his home, drew attention to searchers by whistling. He had been lying on the road for seven or eight hours, but was none the worse for his experience except for sore feet and a face swollen from crying.

Provincial Constable Don Sherville was at a loss to account for the attack on the boy. Reconstructing events from the lad's story, it appears he was on his way home from St. John's school after remaining late for music lessons—and about a mile from his home when the attack occurred.

The boy said he was set upon by two lads of about 15 or 16 years of age. The boys swung at him from a hiding place along the road and with the exclamation "We got you now," compelled Hubert to walk before them to an abandoned house well.

Here they yanked off the lad's tie and bound his feet together eightly, pushing him over a hill some 20 feet in height with a gradual slope.

The assailants then departed, according to the lad, and he apparently was stunned by his experience, making no move to set himself off the side of the refuse-covered hill until they had being gone some time.

Casa Loma To Go For Building Lots?

TORONTO, March 23. — (CP) — Controller Fred Hamilton last night said he would move before city council Wednesday that a tour of inspection be made at Casa Loma, $1,000,000 home built by Sir Henry Pellatt but taken over by the city for back taxes, with a view to reaching some decision on ridding the municipality of the burden.

It is likely the huge mansion might be torn down and the land divided into lots and put up for sale. Five years ago the city took over the home on which more than $90,000 taxes were owing. It was built in 1911 and 1913 but plans to complete the interior were abandoned because of the war and financial difficulties.

TEN DAYS FOR ASSAULT

Also Gets 20 Days for Supplying Liquor to Minor

CHATHAM, Ont., March 23—(CP)—Roy Moore, Dover youth, was sentenced to-day by Magistrate S. B. Arnold to 10 days in jail for indecent assault on a 10-year-old girl. He was convicted one weeks ago, and the sentence will run concurrent with a 30-day term imposed at that time in lieu of paying a $50 fine for supplying liquor to a minor.

Both charges against Moore were made after an investigation requested by parents into the night life of their two young daughters.

Ship Takes Fire At Boston Dock

Boston, March 23—(AP)

FOUR alarms sent sea and land fire fighting apparatus dashing to the East Boston docks today as an electric crane operating in a drydock between the United Fruit Company boats San Gil and San Bruno burst into flames, threatening both vessels.

The San Gil caught fire soon after the first burst of flame.

Firemen, enveloped in a dense cloud of black smoke, poured water not only on this vessel but on the San Bruno as well, in an effort to keep the sparks from spreading.

TRENT BREAKDOWN LAID TO DEFECT

Faulty Workmanship Rather Than Strain To Get More Power Says Lyon

TORONTO, March 23.— (CP).—Inquiry into generator breakdowns at the Trent (Hague's Reach) and Mackenzie plants of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission indicates "that defective workmanship was the most probable cause of the failure," Commission Chairman T. Stewart Lyon said in a statement to-day. Inquiry is still under way in the case of Queenston generator No. 10 "and in that case again defective workmanship rather than method of operation is likely to be indicated as the cause of the breakdown."

Mr. Lyon was replying to Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader, who in a speech at Colborne March 19 attributed the breakages to "strain" and pictured Premier Hepburn as "stepping on the gas to see how much power he can develop." Mr. Rowe said the breakdowns were "the cost of maintaining that there was no shortage of power, to provide a background for repudiation."

Mr. Lyons' statement concluded: "At no time, directly or indirectly, did Mr. Hepburn make suggestions, or issue instructions, as to the method of operation of the Queenston plant."

OSHAWA STRIKE WORST OF GROUP ACROSS ONTARIO

Coulter Plant Is Closed, Workers Egged—200 Pickets On Duty

TWO BREW IN TORONTO

TORONTO, March 23 (CP) —Ontario strike picture was spotty today with 80 Owen Sound tannery workers returning to their jobs, and in Oshawa a fresh disturbance following the close-down of the Coulter Manufacturing Company plant. In the foreground also appeared another industrial union drive as organizers for John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization sought to line up 3,000 textile workers in Toronto.

Labor leaders found great significance in the announcement of Alex. Welch, organizer of the United Textile Workers of America, he would open a campaign to organize Toronto textile workers in industrial unions. This followed disclosure a similar drive was underway among steel and metal workers in Toronto and spells the first major offensive of the C.I.O. in Ontario. Their demands for collective bargaining along with wage demands precipitated the widespread automotive strikes in the United States.

One bright spot was the decision of 80 McQuay Tanning Company, Owen Sound, employees, on strike since Saturday, to return to their benches with 10 per cent. pay increases and time and a quarter for overtime assured. The agreement represented a compromise with President E. W. McQuay.

Workers Rotten-Egged

Most serious of current strikes is at the Oshawa Coulter factory that supplies parts to General Motors.

2 NEARLY FROZEN AFTER SOUSING

Car Goes Through Ice, Lake Captain, Friend Walk Miles Before Reaching Shelter

LITTLE CURRENT, Ont., March 23—(CP)—Capt. Norman McCoy of Manitowaning, widely known lake captain, and William Vair, Green Bound, were recovering today from exposure suffered when they walked two miles in a bitter March wind after they had saved themselves from a hole their motor car plunged through into the ice near Burnt Island.

The men were in their closed sedan Sunday when it broke through the ice into six feet of water. The pair got out of the car, climbed on top of it, and scrambled onto safe ice. They walked two miles in a northwest wind before finding shelter in an Indian cabin on the Wikwemikong Indian reserve.

They were taken by dog team to Wikwemikong village, then by motor car to Manitowaning. Capt. McCoy is known along the Great Lakes, having sailed the S.S. Manitou for 25 years for the Dominion Transportation company of Owen Sound. Mr. Vair is the Manitoulin Island representative of National Grocers, Owen Sound.

Find Another Texas School Gas Menaced

Rigid Inspection Of Every Teaching Institution In Oil Field Area Expected

PUPILS LET OUT

NEW LONDON, Tex., March 23.—(AP)—Rigid inspection of every rural school in the vast East Texas oil field area was the expected aftermath today of the disastrous London Consolidated school explosion—caused, experts agreed, by accumulated gas.

School doors were shut as safety experts began a search for possible similar conditions that killed 455 here.

Extreme caution pervaded the area especially after Gordon C. Hawley, chief engineer of the state's fire insurance department, told a military court of inquiry yesterday he had located another school in the vicinity endangered by escaping gas.

Dr. E. P. Schoch, Texas University chemist, and authority on explosion, said all signs pointed to an accumulation of gas under the basement floor as the cause of the London tragedy, worst of its kind in the nation.

ROME PROTESTS PRESS COMMENTS

Dislikes British Press Dubbing Spanish Defeat "Little Caporetto"

PARIS, March 23 (CP) — The Havas News Agency reported from London today that the Italian government had handed to the British ambassador in Rome a protest against British press comments on the defeat of Italian troops northeast of Madrid.

The Italian note, the agency said, declared the tenor of the British press reports was inconsistent with the terms of the Anglo-Italian gentlemen's agreement.

The note was handed to Sir Eric Drummond by the Italian Foreign Minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano, The Havas dispatch said.

Ciano was said to have expressed Italy's particular resentment at use by the British press of the term "Little Caporetto" to describe the alleged debacle of the Italian forces at Guadalajara. Caporetto was the scene of the Italian rout at the hands of Austria during the Great War.

71-Year-Old Flying Duchess Feared Down, English Marsh

Last Heard Over Monks Woods Thirteen Miles From City Of Peterborough

SNOWING HARD

LONDON, March 23.— (AP). — Emergency workers in the Fenlands turned from their struggle with a flood to-day to hunt for the "Flying Duchess" the 71-year-old Dutchess of Bedford, in the fear she has crashed on some watery field.

It was believed she might have mistaken land covered with several feet of water for a smooth, dry landing place yesterday while flying solo from Woburn, Bedfordshire, on what was intended as a short jaunt. She took up flying when she was 60.

Airplanes reared off in the cold, clear dawn to comb the territory for a sign of the Duchess' missing ship and police resumed search of Monks Woods, 13 miles from Peterborough, where a gamekeeper said he saw a plane late last night.

"I saw a plane flying very low over the wood," he related. "It was snowing hard and the machine disappeared from view. The engine seemed to halt and I think the plane must have come down."

Peterborough is west of the Fenlands and north of London. Woburn, where Woburn Abbey, seat of the Duke of Bedford, is located, is about 40 miles north-west of London.

Five hundred men searched the Woburn district throughout the night, using harricane lamps to penetrate the remote sections of snow-covered woodlands.

Large Deputation Present In House To Fight Measure

Before Committee Commenced Sitting Ald. Gordon Withdraws Bill

SURPRISE EXPRESSED

Minister Of Municipal Affairs Says Government Was Opposed

(By Harry Theobald)

TORONTO, Ont., March 23—Alderman G. N. Gordon's private bill toddled up on the doorstep of the Private Bills' Committee of the Legislature.

Before the committee began its grist of private bills, Ald. Gordon announced to the chairman, R. S. Colter (Liberal, Haldimand-Norfolk) that he wished to withdraw the bill, and to The Examiner later he said he lacked assurance that all its five clauses would receive the committee's approval. Rather than have it stripped of several of the important sections in which he was chiefly interested, Mr. Gordon said he preferred to withdraw the bill in its entirety.

Surprise Expressed.

A large deputation, representing three of Peterborough's manufacturing industries and several of the municipal bodies expressed surprise at the sudden and unexpected ending of the attack which Alderman Gordon levelled more than a month ago at phases of the established municipal order in the city.

Members of the deputation were informed, according to their statements to The Examiner, that Alderman Gordon was advised to withdraw his bill for the reason, it was said, that it was due for complete relation by the committee.

His bill asked for cancellation of the Canadian General Electric Company's lease of the watercourse power dam; invalidation of the fixed exemptions granted by the ratepayers to the Canadian Raybestos Company and The Defoyal Company. It also sought to change the municipal electoral system requiring that all the members of the City Council, Board of Education, Utilities Commission and City Trust Commissioners be elected annually by general vote. At present five members of the council are elected each year for two year terms, and ratepayers must vote for four candidates. The City Trust Commissioners are appointed by the council and only one member of the Utilities Commission is elected annually for a three-year period.

Open Up Street.

The fifth clause in the bill asked for permission to expropriate with compensation, a strip of land not more than 100 feet wide from Murray street south to the Sherbrooke street, and between George and Aylmer streets for the purpose of opening another main street in the centre of the city.

Alderman Gordon was an early arrival in the committee room, and with a nod to the Peterborough deputation, he consulted the chairman, and afterwards announced to

He Beat Steve Out But Cost Comes High

San Francisco, March 23—(AP)

THE dubious distinction of outdoing Steve Brodie by diving 186 feet from the San Francisco-Oakland bridge was held by Ray Wood today—at the cost of a broken back. It was 51 feet more than Brodie's jump.

He probably will have to live in a wheel chair the rest of his life, partially paralyzed, physicians said. That is, if he lives.

WINDSOR MOVING SALZBURG RESORT

Enght-Room Tyrolian Farmhouse To Be Hideout For a Month

SAINT WOLFGANG, Austria, March 23.—(A P)—An eight-room brick Tyrolian farmhouse, the Appesbach, in the picturesque Salzkammergut region near Salzburg was being polished up today for the Duke of Windsor.

Unless the Duke changes his mind, he will arrive here on Monday for a month's stay.

In an isolated section, the Appesbach, a typical farmhouse, but with its second storey fitted out like a modern hotel, has its own tennis court near a golf course. It stands at the water's edge where there is a dock for motorboats.

There are villages along the six-mile stretch of Saint Wolfgang Lake, hemmed in by cliffs and stately mountains. In summer months, the Appesbach sector is regarded as one of the most beautiful spots in the Salzburg playground.

With snow on peaks and the roads muddy, the gay hotels in this section are now closed, and the Duke probably will find even greater solitude here than behind the walls of Ensfield Castle, where he had stayed since he abdicated last December.

John Marsh Elected By Greatly Reduced Margin Over Liberal

Will Take Seat In House Of Commons Formerly Occupied By Wilton

THREE CANDIDATES

Former Minister Of Highways In Quebec Elected In Bonaventure

HAMILTON, March 23 (C.P.). — John A. Marsh, City Council member, choir leader, astronomer, and radio announcer, will take the Conservative seat in the House of Commons left vacant by the death of Herbert E. Wilton.

Mr. Marsh is the son of the late Rev. Dr. D. B. Marsh, who for some years was Presbyterian minister at Springville. The member-elect is well known in Peterborough where he attended Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Marsh retained Hamilton West in the Federal by-election yesterday for the Conservatives who have held away in the riding for more than 30 years. He faced two opponents, Kennedy Conner, Liberal, and John O'Hanley, Co-operative Commonwealth Federation candidate.

The vote was: Marsh 6,107, Conner 7,291, O'Hanley 3,536.

Sunny, bright weather drew a fairly heavy vote to the polls although the total figures were 5,000 less than in the 1935 general elections in which Mr. Conner was defeated on a Liberal ticket in a five-cornered struggle which saw Mr. Wilton victorious.

Six Candidates in 1935.

Find Canadian Auto Makers Profit Higher

More Margin For Same Type Car Than U.S. firms—Waste In Distribution

MAKING MOST OF TARIFF

OTTAWA, March 23 (CP).—The Government today had before it a comprehensive report of the Tariff Board following a long inquiry into the automobile industry.

The report, presented yesterday, found among other things, there was unnecessary waste in Canadian distribution methods and that the net return to Canadian manufacturers is larger than that to United States manufacturers for the same type of car.

To counteract this, the board suggested the Government invoke Section 17 of the Customs Act empowering it to reduce duties where it can be shown Canadian producers are taking advantage of the tariff to maintain enhanced prices.

Canadian manufacturers of safety glass, used in the industry, continue to experience difficulties with the European plate glass cartel, the report found. The sole producer in the United Kingdom has not filled all Canadian requirements, in spite of the fact he is given a premium of seven per cent. over continental manufacturers. For him to do so would result in increased prices; but the board suggests that in this event the government should declare all Canadian safety glass as being 100 per cent. British content, irrespective of the origin of the plate glass.

Copper producers in Canada, the report declared, are still taking advantage of the tariff, despite narrowing of the margin between domestic and export prices.

Trouble With Freight.

Lack of uniformity in railway freight rates is a difficulty which Canadian auto manufacturers have to face, the report said. Agreements on unit prices were established with the railway companies, and a reduction granted on the understanding the manufacturers would ship by rail. One firm, however, paid more than $70,000 last year in excess of what it would have paid, had highway and water transport been also used.

Free entry of certain parts entering make-up of bus bodies were recommended as a temporary measure to enable manufacturers to adjust themselves to developments in this industry. The Board, however saw no reason why bus body operations cannot be fitted into the automobile schedule proper.

Proposals to raise British Empire content, which will be from 60 to 65 per cent on March 31, 1938, have already reflected expectations of Canadian manufacturers. Some have substantially enlarged their plants, in anticipation of a broadening of operations, said the report.

The Board recommended that certain sections of the automobile schedule of the customs tariff be amended to include various articles entering into the manufacture of vehicles under the free items in some instances and lower rates in others.

Percy Cooper, while playing hockey in Lakefield on Tuesday evening had his chin accidentally cut so that he had six stitches put in. Dr. Fraser dressed the wound and Dr. Munro is attending the patient here.

GOLF WINNINGS EXEMPT.

LONDON, March 23 (A.P.). — Golf professionals were free to-day of the burden of income tax on their winnings on the links.

Judge Is No Sissy He'll Shoot "Dibs"

Waltham, Mass., March 23—(AP)

TO prove he's not the "sissy" he was branded today, Judge Peter Cunniff of the Juvenile Court will meet a 7-year-old challenger in a game of knuckle down marbles.

An erring youngster argued to Frank Beady, State Public Welfare Agent, after appearing before Judge Cunniff, "If he ain't a sissy, why does he wear a long, black dress?"

Learning of the youthful impression, Judge Cunniff sent word to the boy to bring a bag of "dibs" with him when he reappears April 3.

MRS. SIMPSON'S DIVORCE OF 1927 MAY PROVE SNAG

Freedom Obtained From First Husband In U.S. Suspected Invalid In England

AFFECT FUTURE CHILDREN

(By Henry Tetil Russell.)

LONDON, March 23. — British legal experts warned last night that Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson's first divorce, obtained in the United States ten years ago, may be invalid under British law.

The new complication, they said, may jeopardize the early marriage of the former Baltimore girl and the Duke of Windsor if the case is brought into British courts.

Arthur Berriedale Keith, outstanding authority on Constitution law, was responsible for the latest surprise development in the "world's greatest romance." He wrote to the Edinburgh Scotsman saying that Parliament might be obliged to enact special legislation legalizing Mrs. Simpson's first divorce. She divorced Earl Winfield Spencer, U.S. naval officer, at Warrenton, Va., in 1927.

A specialist in English "family law" told the United Press that Keith's disclosures were legally sound. He predicted that British law would not accept Mrs. Simpson's first divorce as valid.

Technicality Cited.

The warnings were based on the fact that British courts recognise only divorces granted in courts of a State in which the husband lives at the time the suit is filed. Spencer, they said, appeared not to have been a Virginia resident.

The expert said that distinction must be drawn between the willingness of British registrars to solemnize marriage in which one of the parties previously was divorced in Reno or some city of "quick divorce" and the attitude of British courts when confronted with the validity of such decrees.

He pointed out that a British registrar, in issuing such licenses, adds a note of caution:

"The validity of this decree is accepted only at the applicant's own risk."

BUDGET DEBATE VOTE GOES 63-16

Victory For Government—Tory Bill For Repeal Of School Tax Next

TORONTO, March 23—(CP). — Ontario Legislature to-day prepared to debate a bill repealing amendments to the 1936 Assessment Act, regarding division of corporation taxes between Public and Separate schools.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn informed George S. Henry, Conservative House Leader, before adjournment last night the Opposition bill for repeal of the amendments would be called for second reading to-day. Mr. Henry assured the Premier the Opposition would co-operate in winding up Legislature business to permit prorogation Thursday.

The budget debate ended in a 63 to 16 Government victory on the time-honored motion to go into Committee of Supply. Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, who concluded the budget debate claimed the Conservatives were afraid to vote against the budget.

Sam Lawrence (C.C.F., Hamilton East) voted with the Opposition; while the only other Independent in the House, Farquhar Oliver (U.F.O., South Grey), voted with the Government. Dr. A. D. Roberts (Lib., Sault Ste. Marie), read out of the party recently by Premier

TELEVISION FOR ILLS

Development Expected to Enable Doctors to Listen to Patients' Lungs, Heart.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 23 (A.P.). — Use of television by doctors in diagnosing patients' ills was predicted at the convention of the American Pharmaceutical Association here.

George R. Flint of Decatur, Ill., president of the association, said the development of television would enable a doctor to listen to a patient's lungs, his heart and even record his temperature.

Mass Detroit Labor Rallies Called Today

Auto Worker Leaders Predict 200,000 Will Heed Summons

PLEDGED PEACEFUL

DETROIT, March 23.—(AP)—Organized labor mobilized for a show of strength in Detroit today under an agreement with Mayor Frank Couzens the demonstration was to be "peaceful and orderly."

Leaders of the United Automobile Workers, predicting nearly 200,000 would heed their call to a mass meeting in Cadillac Square, near the County building, gave and won concessions after defying the common council's earlier denial of a permit for the meeting.

The union deferred decision on —a general strike in Detroit's automotive industry—but warned it was "not bluffing" about plans to order a city-wide walkout in protest against police eviction of sit-down strikers in small plants.

Meanwhile, undercurrent talk about an impending meeting between Walter P. Chrysler, chairman of the Chrysler corporation, and John L. Lewis, leader of the committee on industrial organization, grew insistent. One version was that it might take place tomorrow in Lansing, the state capital.

Governor Frank Murphy was at Lansing. He talked by telephone with Chrysler and "labor leaders" last night. James F. Dewey, federal labor conciliator, who was here, talked with Lewis, who was in Washington. Both Murphy and Dewey withheld comment.

There have been several efforts to bring Lewis and Chrysler together in New York.

Homer Martin, U.A.W. president, had announced a city-wide walkout would be ordered if police persisted in their activities against small sit-down protests. Two such strikes were broken up Saturday, and two more yielded quietly to police pressure yesterday.

Cup, making a total of 128.

JILTED BY DUCE GIRL ATTEMPTED SUICIDE SHE SAYS

Was His Mistress From April To July Last Year, Madeleine Informs Judge

COUNT BROKE IT UP

PARIS, March 23.—Madeleine de Fontanges, held for the shooting of the Count de Chambrun because he shattered "my hours of unforgettable love" with Premier Mussolini, yesterday told an examining Magistrate that she was Il Duce's mistress between April and July of last year.

Referring to her last rendezvous with Mussolini in July, she said:

"He was as tender and sweet with me as he had been on the previous occasions."

She described how, last November, she tried to commit suicide in Rome after Mussolini had jilted her.

The man responsible for Il Duce's lost love, she said, was the Count de Chambrun whom she tried to kill last Wednesday. He violated her confidences, she explained, and caused Mussolini to end their clandestine romance.

De Chambrun, she said, shattered "my hours of unforgettable to me."

The dark-haired beauty, whose lurid diary of "confessions" threatens to create an international scandal if ever made public, told of repeated rendezvous with Mussolini. Then the Magistrate adjourned the hearing until April 8.

Duke Of Connaught To Grace Crowning Of Nephew, George If His Failing Health Permits

Grand Old Man of Royal Family To Do Homage To New King

LIVED IN CANADA

LONDON, March 23 (CP)—Popular governor-general of Canada from 1911 to 1916, the Duke of Connaught, only surviving son of Queen Victoria, will, if his health permits, attend the coronation of his grand-nephew George VI on May 12.

Nearing his 87th birthday, the Duke has already taken part in two crownings of British kings, those of his brother, Edward VII in 1902, and his nephew George V in 1911. At the latter ceremony he made his homage immediately after another grand-nephew, the then Prince of Wales, afterwards Edward VIII and now Duke of Windsor.

The Duke's sister, Princess Louise, Duchess of Argyle, also a former resident of Rideau Hall at Ottawa, was 90 on March 18. As the wife of the Marquess of Lorne (later Duke of Argyle) she enjoyed influential association with Canada when her husband was governor-general from 1878 to 1883. Another daughter of Queen Victoria, Princess Beatrice, who married Prince Henry of Battenburg, will be 80 in April. These widowed grand-aunts of the King are rarely seen in public nowadays.

The Duke of Connaught, like his mother before him, has in his later years become to the people of England and the Empire at large something more of a legend than a mere personality. From his earliest years he devoted himself to service in the Army, serving in practically every part of the world. He was taught to play the kettledrum by a man who fought at Waterloo, and rose to command the force which captured the Malakahoof in the Crimea.

The Duke's only son, Prince Arthur of Connaught, has performed great service in many capacities, notably as governor-general of South Africa. For some time during the war he was attached to the Canadian Headquarters Staff in France.

Princess Beatrice, one of the Duke's surviving sisters, was held in high regard over a long period of years by reason of her gracious manner in fulfilling the smaller functions which fall to the lot of members of the royal family. Her husband, the Duke of Battenburg, died in 1896 on active service with the British forces in Africa. Her only daughter, Victoria Eugenie, was married to Alphonso, now the ex-King of Spain, in 1906.

During his term as representative of his nephew, George V, in Canada, the Duke of Connaught, with his affable and democratic manner, came in close personal touch with the people. His Royal Highness, together with the Duchess and their daughter Princess Patricia, entered enthusiastically into the life of the Dominion and in the warm greetings extended to them wherever they appeared in public, religious differences, party factions and racial divisions were forgotten.

The Duke was in his 87th year when he returned to England in 1916, when the nation was midway in the war. The Duchess died the following year. Princess Patricia, who had given her name to a regiment of Canadian infantry which gained a glorious record, married Commander Alexander Ramsay in 1919.

Some years previous to his appointment to Canada, the Duke was High Commissioner o fthe Mediterranean with headquarters at Malta. It was during the reign of his brother Edward VII.. The Duke resigned this post—much to the annoyance of the King—because he considered the duties of the office did not justify either the salary or the status attached to the position.

His eldest daughter, Princess Margare, was married in June 1905 to Prince Gustavus Adolphus, Crown Prince of Sweden, and died on her father's birthday in 1920.

A glass automobile revealing every detail of the construction was shown at this year's Berlin Motor Show.

Asked To Retire

In his report to the Ontario legislature following a lengthy investigation into the Guelph Reformatory riots, Judge Madden of Napanee, recommended immediate retirement of Senior Sergeant Alfred Maguire, (ABOVE), and one other guard. His recommendation was based, according to the report, on the conduct of the officials in the face of the serious outbreak among prisoners.

ITALIANS TAKEN IN GUADALAJARA CHANT RED SONG

BADLY BEATEN IN NORTH

(Copyright, 1937, The Havas News Agency.)

MADRID, March 23 (CP-Havas).—Fifty-seven Italian prisoners broke voluntarily into the strains of the Italian Communist song, "Blanders Rossa" (Red flag) here Sunday, following questioning in which they admitted the defeat of Italian forces in Guadalajara had been a disaster.

The Italians—among the most recent batch captured on the front where the Government are waging a victorious counter-offensive—intoned the refrain after listening to a short address by Dolores Ibarruri, fiery Communist deputy, known as La Pasionaria.

After singing the Communist anthem they cried "Long live the Spanish people!" and "Long live the Italian people!" Their action came as a surprise to Leftist authorities and foreign newspapermen assembled in the room where the questioning took place.

Thought Ethiopia Destination.

One of the prisoners, who spoke Spanish fluently, recounted his Spanish odyssey. Shortly after leaving Italy—for Ethiopia he believed—he had learned he was going to Spain. He accepted because Italian propaganda had stressed the necessity of fighting Red propaganda in the Mediterranean.

He said he landed at Cadiz in December, participated in the capture of Malaga and was dispatched to the Madrid front, firmly believing Madrid would fall as easily as the Mediterranean seaport.

These hopes were partially fulfilled when the Italian contingents made their first successful advance in Guadalajara but crumbled before the sudden terrible air, tank and infantry attacks of the Government, he said.

BUTTER SUPPLY IS INCREASING

Storage Supply Much Greater Than a Year Ago—Production Is Booming

TORONTO, March 23. — Recent figures which indicate that butter production in Ontario increased in the past month while in most parts of the Dominion the output was diminishing, only tell part of the story.

The tendency during 1936 was definitely toward an increase in production, especially in the latter half, each month's output being well over that of the corresponding period of the year before. A total of 87,500,000 pounds is on record as against 84,494,000 pounds made during 1935.

This latter situation obtained in the face of sweltering temperatures, prevailing during the summer. But it must be remembered that production already had shown a movement upward in the early part of the year. Pastures came back with a bang in the fall and enjoying comparatively warm temperatures continued good late into the season. This also conserved feed supplies.

Month to month figures have actually shown a decline in the rate of increase. The increase of February, 1937, over February, 1936, being not as great as that of January last over the same month of the year before. This situation exists in the face of the fact that a shortage of feed is reported.

Ontario has been running ahead of the rest of Canada in boosting production, and is accounting for a large part of the increase attributed to the Dominion as a whole. For example, the figures for November, 1936, show this Province production 8½ per cent. greater than the same month in 1935, while for Canada as a whole the rise was only 3.7 per cent. when the whole country only produced 3.1 per cent. more.

Milk men deny that an increase in the price of milk had the effect of reducing consumer demand for fresh milk, thus restricting producers' ordinary outlet for supplies and forcing milk into other channels, creameries getting their share. Better prices for butter and cheese are attracting more milk for their manufacture.

In spite of the fact that dairying is reported to be declining in Germany and that New Zealand production has been less in the past year, there is little or no demand for Canadian butter for export. Local demand is taking up all offerings in Ontario. However, on March 1, there was over a million pounds more in storage here than there was on the same date in 1936. Solids in storage have mounted in volume as compared with a year ago in the Western Provinces also. Although supplies are reduced in Quebec, Prince Edward Island, and to a lesser extent in Nova Scotia, an increase is shown for Canada as a whole. The last report revealed a total of 12,329,050 pounds, as against a quantity of only 11,278,822 pounds a year ago.

Government orders are keeping industries of Dair astive.

FIVE HELD IN ROBBERY

Lads Charged With Breaking Into Drug Store.

WINDSOR, Ont., March 23 (CP).—A number of Windsor youths arrested in connection with a drug store robbery here Sunday was raised to five with the apprehension Monday of Howard Vollans, 17. Vollans was arrested at his home.

No plea was taken from the lads when they were arraigned in police court on charges of breaking and entering, and the quintet was remanded to March 30. Crown Attorney James Allan said more time was needed for investigation.

J. C. BOWEN NAMED TO ALBERTA POST

Succeeds Late Hon. P. C. H. Primrose As Province's Lieutenant-Governor

OTTAWA, March 23—(CP)—J. C. Bowen, Edmonton, has been appointed Lieutenant Governor of Alberta to succeed Hon. P. C. H. Primrose who died last week. Announcement was made today by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Mr. Bowen is a former member of the Alberta Legislature and once acted as floor leader for the Liberals. He was born at Osgoode, Ont., near Ottawa and was educated at Brandon College and McMaster University. He became a Baptist minister and was pastor of churches in Winnipeg, Dauphin and Edmonton.

He enlisted in 1915 and served in France with the Canadian Field Artillery. He was invalided home. He left the ministry in 1918 due to serious eye trouble and went into business. Mr. Bowen was elected alderman in Edmonton and later became a member of the legislature.

At present he is chairman of the board of governors of Brandon College. In 1905 he married Edith Oliver of Bleuheim, Ont., and they have two daughters Margaret and Ruth.

Death Wednesday of Lieutenant Governor Primrose caused a break in administration of the affairs of the province. The British North America Act makes no provision for anyone to act between the death of a lieutenant-governor and appointment of his successor. The appointment will make it possible for the Alberta legislature to reconvene Tuesday.

Class Sends Out 110 Invitations Sets Covers For 40 And 3 Show Up

MONTREAL, March 23.—(CP)—McGill University's art class of '36 was to have held its first re-union Saturday night. Optimistically, President John McDonald sent out 110 invitations; optimistically 40 covers were set for 40 plates.

The president never dreamed of the response from the grads. He had been a little too optimistic. Three turned up at the banquet hall—the president, Secretary Doug McKenzie and Doug Amaron, who didn't have an officer's position.

Food, however, had been provided for 40, palatable drink ordered for 40 and extra waiters hired. So the three banqueted.

They toasted the King and brought in an outsider to propose the toast to the class. They ate, and they drank and they made speeches. They even held election of officers—Amaron drawing the only two vacant positions. Now he is treasurer and Vice-President Doug Amaron.

A Limit To Taxation

The idea seems to be growing that when any sort of government takes office then it must proceed with the business of raising more revenue. Montreal, whose local finances have been muddled for years by poor management, now seeks to recover a financial standing by placing a three per cent. tax on revenues earned in that city by persons or incorporations not resident there. The people who reside there can be dealt with rapidly, but the reach is now for those who dwell elsewhere. It is meant to apply to banks, insurance companies and all other firms which may have branch offices in that city.

It was stated in the House of Commons a few days ago that the revenue of the country now amounts to $384,818,000, and that is equal to about $35 per capita, or for a family of five, to $175 per year. And that of course does not include provincial and municipal taxation. The exact amount paid by the average family in all forms of taxation is not known. Hon. R. B. Bennett estimated during a recent speech in the Commons that by the time the sales tax of 8 per cent. went through the process of being passed along until it reached the consumer it probably approximated 12 per cent.

From Ottawa comes another report telling of cases where the duty, sales tax and excise tax on certain imported goods amounts to more than the price paid for the goods in the first instance. Two dozen silk pillows were imported since the latest budget went into effect, and the cost price was $13.72; the duty and sales and excise tax brought the total to $26.09, and before the consumer secured the goods there would be the mark-up of the retailer.

We are approaching the state where it is being taken for granted that the effort of the individual or the company is looked upon as something which exists to a large degree for the extraction of revenue for some form of government, and that process continues without interruption. If there is no pause in the movement it will ultimately produce a form of defiance on the part of the taxpaying public. The worth of our government and municipal bonds is based only on the ability of the people who hand over the revenue and on the willingness or anxiety of governments to force them to do so. Once the demands of government exceed the paying ability of the people there is bound to come that increasing degree of defiance. It has worked that way before and it will do so again.

The Way of the World

A despatch from Sianfu, China, stated rain inside of two weeks would be the one agency which would save a million people from dying of starvation in the drought and famine area. The famine bureau states 4,000,000 people are on the verge of starvation in the 40,000 square miles area.

Actually those figures are impressive. There are more people on the verge of starvation there than we have in Ontario. A further piece of information is that parents will soon begin selling their children for $2 or $3, with daughters of marriageable age destined for the white slave traffic. And all that in the year 1937.

What will the world do about it? About 4,000,000 people being on the verge of starvation—about bits of girls being sold off for the white slave traffic because parents cannot feed them—about the million people who will probably die if it does not rain inside of two weeks? The answer to all that is: Probably nothing at all.

The world at the moment has gone armament crazy. Every nation which calls itself civilized and Christian is spending its millions for new war ships; for new war planes, for new guns and for new poison gas. So why bother about China or any section of it? If the Lord spends much time looking down from the high parapets of heaven upon this earth, we cannot but wonder at times what He thinks about it.

The Muskrat Season

The season for taking muskrats opens on the 25th, and as a rule it marks the taking of the best crop the Indians and trappers find during the year. As a rule most of the rats are caught when they leave their homes in the banks and start for their feeding places in the marsh or out in more open water. The ice is still quite heavy in most districts and that makes trapping easier.

There are some who will have as many as 250 traps on their line, but most of the trappers are content with a lesser number. We have been told that if a trap line is from 10 to 15 per cent. effective daily that business is considered pretty fair.

One Indian who has trapped a long time in the Curve Lake area told us today there were only about three good nights in the season, and after that one had to just take what he could get. His explanation was this: "When traps are placed in the first place they are laid according to signs or marks which show where the rat has been in the habit of going. You likely catch your rat right there the first night for they move about late afternoon and nights. You put your trap in the same place again and you may be successful. You can do that about three times and then you catch nothing there because the scent is becoming less each time."

We were also informed that little of the meat of the muskrat is now allowed to go to waste. More of the Indians have been learning how to preserve the meat after skinning the animal for its fur. They can pack it away in a strong brine so it will remain good until the last of it is used, which may be some months after the muskrat season has been legally closed. And as long as an Indian has a supply of muskrat to eat he is not likely to ask for or anticipate anything better.

We Must Be More Careful

We learn from the Toronto Star that the Examiner has done serious injustice in suggesting that Toronto runs buses away outside its own city for the purpose of taking people to Toronto to spend their money in that city. It all happened when the Examiner sought to explain there were queer and strange things in connection with Toronto which one was inclined to forget after listening to the Mendelssohn Choir of that city. And the running of these buses was one of them. The Star makes no mention of the comment in its entirety, but prefers to tackle the buses as an issue in itself.

The contention of the Examiner is an absurd thing; the Star says so. The buses which Toronto operates not only bring people to Toronto but they take them home again, and that is something of which few people would think. Toronto is also supplying transportation in this way for many communities which need it, and Toronto is also carrying tourists to see the quintuplets.

It may be we have made a mistake in thinking Toronto was planning for itself in this bus service business, but from the Star we gather it is something like the Big Brother movement; the city feels grieved when it hears of a community whose people cannot get about and comes to relieve isolation by penetrating to that point and giving the folk a ride. Of course the fact that the ride terminates in Toronto is the merest of coincidents. We are glad indeed to have the Toronto Star reveal that side of Toronto. We have been a trifle harsh in thinking Toronto was using its buses to bring trade to that city, while the motive has been merely that of a regular old Santa Claus who wanted to give the men, the women with their shopping bags and the children a ride.

The New Kind of Strike

Detroit is seeking to determine whether officials can handle the sit-down strike situation, and there may be trouble enough before it is settled. The most outstanding example is in the Chryaler plant where 6,000 strikers remain in the factory, having been there for several weeks. There have been sit-down strikes in printing plants, in packing plants, in stores and warehouses.

The method in Detroit is for the police to enter the premises and force ejection of the strikers. They go prepared for any form of resistance which may be offered, and in several of the raids the striking workers have left the building without any show of resistance. The answer to the last move of the police is the calling of a large meeting to "protect the right of strike."

We do not believe the right of strike has ever been seriously questioned. Men possess that right in United States as they do in this country, but it is what they do after they strike which is the big question. In other days when men went on strike they walked out of the premises as evidence of the fact that they were on strike. Then they proceeded to place pickets outside to try and dissuade any other workers from entering to take their places.

The new method is different. Entirely so. When the strike is called the workers merely quit their occupation, but that is all. They stay right on the premises; they sleep there and eat there, and provisions are brought in from outside. They follow that course so no strike-breakers can be brought in, and so they can keep closely in touch with every move which is being made by the management to deal with the situation. In the securing of injunctions it has been claimed and admitted that the strikers are trespassing, but that in itself has not been sufficient to cause them to move. Officials have now turned to the police to give effect to such orders.

We are quite certain any striker would resent it if some person came along and took possession of his home. He would say he had no right to be there, and his impulse would be to put him out for which he could not be blamed. The intruder would be trespassing. By the same token the striker is trespassing when he remains in premises where he has no intention of working and we can see no good reason why he should not be made to leave the premises. It is a new method of conducting a strike but it is not a good one and it interferes with the one objective most desired—that of making a settlement as soon as possible and returning to work.

What Will Happen?

Fred Deadman of Woodstock was driving toward his home from London at night, and he had tire trouble. He stopped his car on the side of the road, and then it was things began to happen. A second car pulled up behind him to let traffic from the other direction pass, and a third car struck the back of the second which struck the Deadman car and started it across the road toward the left-hand side. It was promptly struck by a car coming from the opposite direction and tossed into the ditch. The fifth car in the picture then piled into the one which had hit the driverless car.

Perhaps you can understand how this all happened. There were five cars, two in the ditch; then there were three occupants who had to be taken to the hospital.

One begins to wonder what will happen if the speed limit is increased to 50 miles an hour because that five-car accident happened under a 35-mile law.

NOTE AND COMMENT

New York state man has broken his leg thirteen times, and his doctor has him listed by this time as a permanent asset.

Prince Edward Island did not have a divorce case last year, while Ontario had 511. The comparison is all in favor of the smaller province.

It is estimated the coronation will cost $2,270,000 out of public funds. However the money put into circulation by visitors to Britain will undoubtedly counterbalance this outlay.

Prince Edward's all Liberal Legislature opened its session on Monday and a harmonious and brief sitting is expected. At all events any rows that develop will be merely family affairs.

Railway workers' representatives and company executives have been engaging in closed door conferences. There is, however, nothing secret about the opinion of the general public that a railway strike would be entirely unjustifiable.

President Roosevelt has been proclaimed by a movie actress as the world's handsomest man. As however she picks George Bernard Shaw as her second choice the honor is not as complete as it sounded at first.

And now having played hockey for four months to eliminate two teams, the remaining six clubs of the N.H.L. will proceed to decide the championship. It is an Alice-in-Wonderland system, but the public seem willing to pay for it.

Premier Aberhart says that he can only be ousted by the will of the people. That of course is the agency that has driven all defeated governments out of office so we cannot give the Albertan premier credit for digging up a novel thought.

PASSING IT ON

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Both A and C went off to kirk, the Sunday law won't let them work, and both were looking glum; and A was thinking of a deal, about the ducats that he'd peal, when it was through and done.

¶ And C was thinking of his trade, or roaring profits he had made, of wealth he'd laid away; and as he sat within his pew, he turned to bolder schemes he knew, he'd start them right away.

¶ Both A and C are hard as stone, each has good victuals and a home, more wealth comes every day; you could not pry a scad from them, for they are both hard-thinking men, and they give none away.

¶ The preacher talked and shook his fist, of lives hard knotted in a twist, of good that could be done; he scorned at those who hoarded gold, while others shivered from the cold, of victuals they had none.

¶ The world called for a kindly heart, to help some poor man get a start, one who was down and out; and rich men had to change their view, and turn to something bright and new, and spread their goods about.

¶ And A walked home and smiled with glee, the preacher slammed right out at C, he saw it right away; and C quite gaily shook his head, he'd heard just what the preacher said—he had struck out at A.

Our Statesmen At Their Labors

(Parliamentary Debates)

MUCH LOBBYING

Miss AGNES C. MACPHAIL (Grey-Bruce): Frankly another reason why I am opposed to the bill is the lobbying that has been done for it. I do not mind anyone asking me to dinner, but not for the purpose of lobbying me in connection with a bill, and there are now in the gallery people who are paid substantial salaries and who have been spending money, which I judge is not their own, asking people to lunch. If there is anything I hate worse than another it is just that. If their bill is as good as we are led to believe they could have saved their money and the common sense of the house—because there is a good deal of common sense scattered throughout the house—would have seen its virtue. Intensive lobbying is suspicious, and is a good reason why we should investigate very carefully any bill that is supported in that way.

There is only one reason why I should like to support the bill, and that is on account of its sponsor (Mr. Duffus). But one cannot allow friendship to carry one so far. I shall therefore vote against the bill on the general principle that such bills are wrong.

MORE ABOUT MEALS

Mrs. MARTHA L. BLACK (Yukon): I intend to vote for this bill's going to the committee. We all know that even a criminal has the right to be heard before a judge and jury. I do not know that I approve of the interest rate, but I do approve of the bill being examined by the proper committee. I should also like to state that while I have had luncheon with one of the so-called lobbyists in the gallery, I do not feel that that luncheon purchased me. It is ten or twelve years since I had my first luncheon with that so-called lobbyist, and neither did that lobbyist intend to purchase me then nor did I intend to purchase her by the meals I have given her at different times. I shall vote for the bill's going to the committee.

Mr. T. C. DOUGLAS (Weyburn): I should like to say a word—

Some hon. MEMBERS: Tell us about the meal.

Mr. DOUGLAS: The only meals I have had so far are those I have had to pay for myself, unfortunately. The hon. member for Grey-Bruce (Miss Macphail) has offered to take me out for dinner—

Mr. MacNICOL: That is bribery.

Mr. DOUGLAS: Very delightful bribery.

IN TIME OF WAR

Mr. CAHAN: Medical officers from Montreal are at present enlisted with and engaged as part of the royalist service in Madrid. They are rendering surgical and medical aid and assistance, and form part of the forces and of the medical service of an army. Should that be prohibited? Mr. DOUGLAS: That would depend entirely on the definition of "armed forces." Paragraph (c) of section 2 says:

(c) "Armed forces" includes military, naval and air forces, combatant or non-combatant.

We are waiting to see what the minister has to say with reference to the definition of armed forces. I do not think the term "armed forces" has ever applied to the Red Cross or to medical services rendered in some other country for purely humanitarian reasons.

Mr. DUNNING: To medical services, yes.

Mr. DOUGLAS: In the last war the Swiss forces helped both sides. The Red Cross is recognized as a non-combatant.

Mr. DUNNING: Yes, the Red Cross, but not the medical staffs of armies.

Mr. DOUGLAS: I believe people rendering humanitarian or medical services on either side—

Mr. DUNNING: No, it is strictly limited to the Red Cross.

Mr. DOUGLAS: That depends entirely on the definition of "armed forces." If we want to preserve the right to any country to send medical units to render humanitarian services, we can do so by dealing with paragraph (c) of section 2, rather than leaving in the words "without permit," which would cover military units.

Sir GEORGE PERLEY: With reference to the suggestion of the hon. member to the effect that medical men looking after the wounded are not treated as combatants, may I refer to a clear example in the late war, about which I happened to know. I refer to Doctor Beland, who was a member of the Laurier government and of the House of Commons. When war was declared he was in Belgium, and he remained there. First he looked after Belgian wounded, and then, when the Germans came to Belgium, he went on with his work in the hospitals, helping the German wounded. Eventually, however, he was taken to Berlin and put into prison. Why? Because he had been a minister of the crown in Canada—at least, that was the reason given. Although he was not a combatant and under international rules of war should not have been taken prisoner he was imprisoned in Berlin and kept there for several years during which time he was badly treated. So the hon. member is entirely wrong when he suggests that a medical man looking after the wounded is not classed as a combatant.

Mr. DOUGLAS: Is it not true that the gentleman in question was a national of a country at war with Germany?

Mr. DUNNING: Yes, that is right.

A Bit of Nonsense

Top Note

It was after the opera. The expensively dressed woman approached the broad-shouldered man.

"If I am not mistaken," she said, "I have the honor of speaking to the renowned tenor, have I not?"

Its ego fattened.

"And what can I do for you, madam?"

"I can't find my car," she answered pleasantly. "Would you be so kind as to call out 'Charlie' at the top of your voice?"

Causes of Crime.

(From the Chatham News.)

ACADEMIC discussions on the causes of crime will never cure crime, but they do bring to the attention of the public conditions that few know to exist. For every result there must be a cause, and according to the discussions taking place in the congested centres of population there seems to be a multitude of causes, any one of which might be removed and the conditions improved if the people of any community can be brought to think uniformly on the subject.

A noted psychologist at Northwestern University, Chicago, cites ten major causes of crime as responsible for present lax conditions. They are summed up as follows:

Heritage of mental, moral or physical defects from one or both parents.

Unhealthy home environment.

Infective environment as distinct from home environment.

Lack of moral training.

Lack of respect for constituted authority.

Commercialized recreation.

Social or economic injustice.

Immigration of riff-raff from Europe.

Maladministration of justice.

Lack of enforcement of the laws.

The above seem to be common to all parts of the world, for the crime wave as it has been called, is sweeping all countries without discrimination. The moral sense with respect to law enforcement seems to be lost, and citizens of apparent good repute even, boast nowadays of their success in evading regulations made for the good of the country. The law is far from perfect, which is no reason it should be ignored.

The causes enumerated are worthy of deep thought and consideration, particularly so from the fact that they cannot be remedied by law. The reform must come from within and must be personal. Punishment of the mentally diseased can never change the direction of their lives. Education will help to show them the folly of a career of crime and point out a better way.

Lack of moral training is stressed as one of the chief causes of crime, and a casual acquaintance with conditions forces the conclusion that the charge is well founded. Home training is not what it used to be and the agencies that endeavor to take the place of home training fall signally to perform the functions that can be performed only at the home fireside.

The other features of the indictment are evident to all. The law is not regarded as having any right to control if it can be avoided. Its lax enforcement all over the world has brought it into contempt, and it can never be properly respected until it safeguards the rights and privileges of all classes and individuals, in whatever will be for the well-being of the nation.

Dairy Factory Legislation.

(From the Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

HON. DUNCAN MARSHALL'S bill to amend the Dairy Products Act, a copy of which has now come to hand, provides in a new Section 3 that no creamery, cheese factory or milk shipping station may hereafter be constructed without permission from the minister. That permission is to be contingent upon a certificate from the Milk Control Board that such building is required, "and in such determination the board shall have regard to the sufficiency of water supply, sewage disposal facilities and the supply of milk and cream in the locality." There is a sub-section prescribing the nature of foundation, floors and plumbing, and another setting forth that all such dairy factories, new or old, may operate only under license from the department.

All of which is designed, no doubt, to prevent establishment of additional factories in areas already adequately served, and particularly to check the starting up "on a shoestring" of plants which are not properly equipped. It may mean more in eastern Ontario, where the cheese factories average much smaller than those in this part of the province.

The legislation is likely to have a definite bearing upon cheese curing conditions. Among the revised regulations soon to be promulgated is said to be one requiring that no cheese be placed in the boxes until eight days old. Cheese boxed within that period, departmental experiments show, are virtually certain to develop soft ends. To ensure proper finish, as one of the requisites to satisfactory condition of export cheese, the cheeses must be kept on the shelf and turned daily for the full eight days. A majority of factories lack the necessary accommodation, and while there is not likely to be rigorous enforcement immediately of the requirement referred to, it is evident that the dairy branch intends to make sure that any new factories have plenty of curing-room accommodation. The licensing provision, along with the licensing of makers, which already prevails, will give the necessary control. Incidentally, the development factory of coolroom accommodation will probably make it unnecessary, and in fact impossible to proceed with any plans for central warehousing.

The Stranger In England.

(By C. Norman Smith, Ottawa Journalist in the London Morning Post.)

MUCH is being said and done to make Coronation visitors from Overseas feel at home. The plans vary in scope and method, but to a Canadian "three months green" it seems the fundamental object should be to assure the visitors a peep behind the flags and bunting.

Pomp and ceremony there will be, and rightly, but that's pretty heavy as a steady diet. Let them alone to find your England; and they'll go home wagging their tails behind them.

What will they find? Probably just what they came to see, according to their nature. The rolling downs, the shipyards; the thatched roof, the coalmine; the mad Metropolis, the village green; the quaint, the novel and the well-worn.

Let them ramble, let them wander, for quite possibly he's not the rube he looks.

On the other hand, they'll exasperate you by everlastingly making comparisons. "At home we do this better ...." has been worn so ragged as to warrant a poster at all ports advising members of the home lovers' club to stay on board. They may be rude about your coffee, sigh at the sight of another spout, and shiver in your damp home. And if you retort that the Englishman likes fresh air and cold baths, the visitor may ask you why in the name of English cleanliness and hardihood you don't take a shower bath after a round of golf as do all self-respecting Canadians.

But enough of this "everlastingly making comparisons."

Yet it may be that a generous understanding will more genuinely please your Coronation visitor than painstaking kindness. Respects begets respect.

MANY CANADIANS.

(Saint John Telegraph-Journal)

FIGURES may be dull reading at times, but often they are not only important, but of special interest. This is the case in a Boston dispatch which discloses that every sixth person living in Massachusetts is either a Canadian by birth or descent; that they number 286,001 in Boston alone, and 436,793 in the state.

It is particularly interesting to note that more than 80 percent. of the Canadians now resident in Greater Boston are from the Maritime Provinces, while Quebec has supplied many to other parts of the state.

HARD ON PROPHETS.

(Galt Reporter)

FOR prophets, this is a winter of discontent and disrepute. Seldom in many years have weather conditions conspired so effectively to discredit those who profess extraordinary gifts in the matter of foretelling the exact nature of the seasons as one swiftly succeeds the other.

The record is disillusioning to those who placed deep faith in the wisdom of wild life—the squirrel, the chipmunk and the wild goose, the robin, the bear and the beaver—all of these animals, we have been taught to believe, anticipate the coming character of the season through innate instincts and prepare themselves accordingly.

Such an important authority as the great naturalist, John Burroughs, questioned the soundness of this theory and produced a great deal of evidence, gathered through actual experience, tending to show that nature's wild children have no advance knowledge with respect to the season. They are often fooled, as many a wilderness tragedy proves.

QUOTES RULE SIX.

(Sault Ste. Marie Star)

MUCH of Britain's greatness today rests on the philosophy of "Rule Six," Hon. G. Howard Ferguson said in an address at Chatham the other day. Rule Six, he said, he discovered while talking to a minister of the Crown in England, but its spirit pervades the race. There are no rules one, two, three, four or five—just rule six. It is: "Don't take yourself too seriously."

Howard, we are afraid, has been guilty of an euphemism. Rule Six, as we understand it, reads: "Don't take yourself too damn serious."

Body Of Actor Floats Ashore

LONDON, March 23.—(AP)—Dr. Percy Vosper today definitely identified the nude body of a man washed up from the English channel near Beachy Head as that of Frank Vosper, his actor son who had been missing since he disappeared from a champagne party on a liner at sea March 6.

Vosper disappeared from the cabin of Miss Muriel Oxford, British beauty queen, where a farewell party was being given aboard the liner Paris as it neared Plymouth after a transatlantic crossing from New York.

BIG DEPUTATION TO FIGHT BILL

the group of fellow citizens that he was not going through with the bill.

So ended one of Alderman Gordon's early "bombshells" which he had proceeded to level at three concessions to Peterborough factories and also the accustomed system of electing members of the principal municipal administrative bodies conducting the city's affairs.

Among those present from Peterborough were Mayor G. A. Macdonald, Alderman Robert Cotton, City Clerk S. R. Armstrong, City Solicitor J. R. Corkery and T. J. Carley who had assisted him in preparing the council's objection to the Gordon bill; Gordon S. Matthews, chairman of the Utilities Commission and R. L. Dobbin, its manager; W. R. Breyfogle, general manager of the DeLaval Company, Robert A. Abbott, general manager of the Raybestos Company; J. F. Strickland, K.C., solicitor for the Raybestos Company; Mrs. W. R. Morris of the Board of Education and G. R. Langley of the C.G.E. Company with Hugh McLaughlin, solicitor for the company.

The Canadian Press in its report of Ald. Gordon's action said:—

"An act respecting the city of Peterborough was withdrawn at a session of the private bills committee of the Ontario Legislature today. It was unusual in the fact that it was not sought by the municipal corporation but by a ratepayer, George Newcombe Gordon. The bill would have declared null and void: A land lease between the Peterborough Public Utilities Commission and the Canadian General Electric; fixed assessments on the DeLaval Co. Limited and the Canadian Raybestos Company Limited.

Hon. David Croll, Minister of Municipal Affairs said the government was opposed to the bill.

Workmen Enjoyed Ribbentrop Fete 300 Gallons Of Beer Is Consumed

LONDON, March 23—(CSP)—Observing the German custom of "Richtfest," Ambassador von Ribbentrop joined host to 400 British and German workmen reconstructing the German Embassy.

"Richtfest" is a celebration for workmen given by the owner of a house undergoing repairs. The stone-masons, plasterers, carpenters and handymen, trooped into exclusive Carlton House Terrace for a meal of pork knuckles, sauerkraut and potatoes, washed down by German beer.

Von Ribbentrop sat beneath a big, garlanded pictograph of Hitler, in a room hung with flags bearing the Nazi swastika. At the head of the table sat the British and German foremen, beside important German Embassy officials. The ambassador made speeches in German and English and the workmen of both countries cheered both lustily despite the fact they understood only their native tongue.

Frau von Ribbentrop chatted with the British workmen who were dressed in their Sunday best. Both national anthems were sung and while the German workmen gave the Nazi salute, the Englishmen cheered.

Sedate Carlton House then saw its unusual party develop merry proportions. British workmen danced hornpipes while German workmen sang national songs. One Englishman produced a mouth-organ and the German workmen were taught the music of "Tipperary" and "Two Lovely Black Eyes."

Vital statistics: Within the first hour 10 barrels of beer were consumed and by the end of the evening 300 gallons.

Disturbance flared anew to-day when pickets threw rotten eggs at a carload of would-be workers, apparently unaware the plant was officially shut down by the management following a more serious outbreak Monday night, after picketers broke every window in five cars and drove 30 other employees to seek shelter of the plant.

Their numbers swelled by many sympathizers, more than 200 men and girls were on picket duty and surrounded the factory. Large squad of police officers also were on duty but outside the one incident in which eggs were showered at the car, nothing happened to cause police intervention.

Jack Lowry, arrested last night on charges of assault occasioning actual bodily harm, was released on bail. Police said no other charges have been laid. Mayor Alex Hall, Chief of Police Owen Friend and Hugh Thomson, organiser here for the C.I.O. held a three-hour conference last night.

Thomson maintained it was not their policy to cause trouble such as happened last night, but held to right of striking employees to picket peacefully. Mayor Alex Hall said he would do all in his power to bring local manufacturing heads together with Thompson.

So far, Mayor Hall said the situation is that the union has signed up practically all employees in several plants here, but officials have refused to meet Thompson when one of the chief aims is to gain recognition of the union.

Coulter Manufacturing Company plant, crippled by strike since last Wednesday night, will remain closed indefinitely, officials said.

More Welland Trouble

At Welland trouble threatened again as 3,000 employees of Empire Cotton Mills, Limited, balloted on giving a shop committee of union and non-union workers power to bargain for all workers. Ontario government mediators meanwhile failed to iron out grievances over alleged violation of terms that were to have settled the textile strike six weeks ago.

One hundred and fifty-six employees were out at the Brinton Carpet Company, Peterborough, demanding restoration of a 25 per cent wage cut, while 200 tobacco workers at Kingsville pressed their demands for more money from Consolidated Tobacco Company. Officials promised police protection to any who wanted to work, declaring interference would be dealt with "to the full extent of the law."

TORIES TRYING COVER CROOKS

operation from you," retorted the premier. The opposition attitude and the "smoke screen" they had thrown up "puts them in the position of protecting crooks" the premier said.

"The prime minister's position is shorter than his memory or his sense of proportion," said Mr. Heighington. "It is a preposterous and insulting remark."

Sees No Reflection

Cross fire continued. Finally Chairman Clark was heard ruling he "didn't take anything from the words reflecting on the members of the opposition."

The Conservative protested the ruling. A standing vote was taken and the chairman upheld. On the same division a motion to call Speaker Norman Hipel to the chamber was defeated.

Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon said he wanted to know how Sam Lawrence (C.C.F., Hamilton East) voted. Mr. Lawrence said he misunderstood the first motion but his stand was with the opposition.

"That suits me fine," said Mr. Nixon. "I like to see you with the opposition."

"I stayed with my party more than you ever did," said Mr. Lawrence.

Mr. Ellis said the bill was a direct attempt to deal with criminal law, a matter in the federal jurisdiction. Sections of it would be ruled ultra-vires.

The bill went through committee without amendments, the Liberals defeating changes as fast as the Conservatives offered them.

The measure now stand for third reading.

KING EDWARD SCHOOL

Ringworm in Inspetgro was the subject of an interesting talk given by Mrs. Gillespie at the regular meeting of the King Edward Home and School Association on Monday evening, March 22. Mrs. Gillespie who is King Edward School representative at city health department monthly conferences conducted by Dr. Murray Fraser pleased the audience with her fine report. Mrs. Hubel presided over the meeting and R. J. Bolton, principal gave a short talk on home and school activities, also making a strong plea for a larger membership.

For the musical part of the program, chorus singing was given by Classes B3 and 3, Miss Dixon's choir while Classes 2 and 3 rendered several numbers together. Mrs. G. W. Craw accompanied Miss Dixon's choir.

PILOT SAYS MAPS YUKON RANGE ERR

States Mountains And Distances Higher Than Shown On Government Maps

EDMONTON, March 23.—(CP)—Government maps of the Mackenzie mountain range in the Yukon are inaccurate, it was contended here by J. C. F. Dalziel, "flying trapper" of the Northwest Territories, when telling of a narrow escape from a crack-up on a trip from Fort Simpson, N.W.T., to Mayo, Yukon.

Dalziel told of searching for the tiny settlement of Mayo, "sitting in a hole in the mountains," with only "10-minutes-worth" of gasoline in the tanks. He was flying through the Mackenzie range of mountains. He nosed his machine past the mountain peaks with nothing but jagged crags below him and no sign of Mayo.

"There isn't even a snowshoe track leading to Mayo," he said in explaining the difficulty in finding the silver mining town. "You just come over the mountain and there it is."

Fortunately he "came over the mountain" the village flashed into view before his fuel supply gave out.

Dalziel said he had a few "bad moments" before he found a gap in the forbidding mountain range on the western border of Yukon territory. He flew for nearly an hour before finding a pass.

The "flying trapper" complained government maps show about 450 miles between Fort Simpson and Mayo "but it's a good 500 miles."

"To get through the mountains from Mayo we had to get 5000-feet altitude and then here were peaks above us on both sides," Dalziel continued. "The maps only show about 4,500 feet altitude but then the surveyors haven't been in there."

Trapping was poor throughout the north this year, he reported, adding the marten catch in his own section—the Nahanni river country west of Fort Simpson—was about the best of any. Dalziel said scarcity of furs was due to the usual fur cycle.

Time Spent In Baking Cakes Could Be Much Better Used

Cakes Do Not Belong To Group Of Necessary Basic Foods

BUT HERE ARE RECIPES

By MARY MOORE

IT IS grudgingly that I give you the flour mixtures of this week's and last week's pages. They do not belong to the group of necessary, basic foods, and only require much precious time to prepare, that you could use more gainfully taking what I present, so that when we get home, they are asking me "What is for lunch Mamma" and are ready to eat everything in sight.

Cake is no food for children. Most houses have some of these precious little individuals. Start pondering on how you can spend time you might have used to bake a cake to provide more healthful foods.

Now that my duty is done, I can give all my thoughts to some of the easy cake recipes I have found in the last few months, for I know that in spite of preaching, training and imploring you still will bake cakes, because you like them—you must keep that sweet tooth pampered. (Barnum!)

Ives Cream Cake

If you have women friends that consider themselves expert cake bakers, you can puzzle them with the fineness of the texture and richness of flavor of this cake.

One and one-quarter cups heavy cream, 3 cups sifted cake flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs well beaten, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Sift the flour, measure, and sift with the baking powder and salt 3 times. Beat eggs and add the sugar to them. Sift the flour into the egg mixture and beat well until very smooth. Then carefully fold in the cream which has been whipped very stiff, almost to the point where it becomes buttery. Bake in buttered loaf pan in oven 350 deg. Fahr. for about 70 minutes. Frost with Chocolate Butter Frosting or Cooked Fudge Frosting. (If you have clipped Chocolate Nut Diamonds you will have the recipe for frosting there. It is also good on the above Cream Cake.)

Maple Syrup Cake

You probably succumb to the amber beauty of maple syrup when it is first on the market and get a gallon, just as I do, and then wonder how you will use it up. This is one way:

One-half cup butter, ½ cup sugar, 2 eggs beaten light, ½ cup maple syrup, ¼ cup milk, 2½ cups sifted cake flour, 2½ teaspoons baking powder, two-thirds teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon ginger. Cream the butter, then add the sugar, eggs and syrup and beat very well. Alternately add the milk and flour sifted with baking powder, soda, and ginger. Pour into loaf tin or layer tins and bake at 370 deg. Fahr. Frost with:

Coffee Nut Frosting
For Maple Syrup Cake

One-third cup butter, 1 cup confectioner's sugar, 1 tablespoon very strong coffee, ½ cup chopped blanched almonds. Cream the butter so well it is soft, full of fine bubbles and light colored, then sift in gradually the sugar, adding coffee made by adding 2 tablespoons boiling water to 1 tablespoon finely ground coffee, letting stand 4 minutes then straining through cheesecloth into frosting, beat well then add almonds and spread. Almonds may be left out of frosting—instead shred and toast them and sprinkle on top. This is a sensational cake. Both flavor and appearance are superior.

Mrs. Toler's Orange Cake

Using ½ cup cornstarch in place of some flour.

One-half cup butter, 1½ cups sugar, yolks 4 eggs, ½ cup orange juice, grated rind 1 orange, 1½ cups flour, ½ cup cornstarch, 4 teaspoons baking powder. Cream the butter well, and add sugar gradually, while beating constantly. When mixture is creamy add the yolks of eggs, beaten thick, orange juice and rind and flour and cornstarch, and sifted with baking powder, then fold in egg whites beaten until stiff. Bake in flat pan buttered and floured, at 375 deg. Fahr. Frost with:

Orange Rind Frosting

Cream one-third cup butter very well, sift in 1 cup icing sugar, and the grated rind from 1 orange, beating until of consistency to spread easily.

Hickory Nut Cake

This cake and one of my chocolate cakes are tops for flavor in my opinion. We very often use this for a birthday cake if Grandpa will come into town and crack the nuts. Use the yolks for mayonnaise.

One cup sugar, ¼ cup butter, ½ cup milk, 2 cups sifted flour, ½ teaspoon baking powder, whites 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup hickory nut meats finely chopped. Cream butter and sugar very well and sift in flour and baking powder alternately with the milk. Fold in nuts and vanilla, then stiffly beaten whites and bake in layers at 375 deg. Fahr. Put Sour Cream Filling between layers and sprinkle top with icing sugar, then spread more filling over it thinly or frost top with butter frosting.

Sour Cream Filling

One cup sour cream, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1½ tablespoons cornstarch. Boil till thick, stirring, then add salt and ½ teaspoon vanilla. While still hot pour over 1 beaten egg, stirring fast. When cool spread on cake.

Frosted Chocolate Gingerbread

Contains marmalade.

One beaten egg, 3 tablespoons marmalade (if none on hand use sugar instead), ¼ cup butter, 1 teaspoon each ginger, cinnamon and soda, ½ teaspoon allspice, 1½ tablespoons cocoa, (good quality such as Fry's), 1 cup molasses, 2¼ cups flour, 1 cup warm water. Dissolve soda in warm water. Sift flour, cocoa and spices together. Mix other ingredients in order given and sift flour into them. Bake on sheet pan at 350 deg. Fahr. Frost with:

Gingerbread Icing

One cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon butter, ½ cup milk. Boil 4 minutes, stirring. Add 1 teaspoon flavoring such as vanilla or maple flavoring, beat until creamy, then spread on cake.

Frosting may be omitted and cake served with hot stewed, dried or fresh apple sauce or whipped cream flavored with orange rind grated.

These are all unusual cakes—of course that is why I yielded and give them to you. But don't overdo making them, will you? Remember that if you care about the health of your family dessert should automatically mean fruit.

This is not such a brilliant idea as I would like it to be, but it is more like what I think a cheese dish should taste, has good texture,—does not collapse as a Cheese Souffle will if "The Master" is late for dinner. I concocted it by the trial and error, the taste and look, and other famous methods. To make it short, firstly the Master ate it, I liked it—hence it was a success.

Emen's Cheese and Crumb Custard

Warm 2 cups milk and to it add ½ cup very fine cracker crumbs; let stand while you beat 3 eggs frothy and add 1½ cups grated cheese to the eggs (old cheese is preferable). Mix milk and egg mixtures, add ¾ teaspoon salt and pour into buttered baking dish (preferably glass or enamel) and sprinkle top with paprika. Stand in larger pan containing hot water and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for about 45 minutes. Serve hot with either Chili Sauce, catsup or Tomato Sauce.

If fancy a Mushroom Sauce over it would bring it up into the Company Class.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by
MRS. MARY MOORE

Question.—May I intrude on your precious time to ask you if it is possible for you to locate in your systematic files of September or October, 1936, a sweet pickle relish made of finely minced green cucumbers? This was very green looking as I have been fortunate enough to have a little jar given to me. The recipe came from your nice articles in pickling time last Autumn, but unfortunately the rule cannot be found. I was not back from holidays at that time or it would have been carefully cut out, and put with many other cherished recipes cut from your page. Kind thanks and every good wish for "The Management" of our Cookery page. Long may SHE (?) reign!—S.T.B.

Answer.—That question marked "Blue" was the best laugh I have had to-day. You would not doubt my femininity if you had been in our house last week.

Besides being the doting mother of two—one boy 2½ years, one girl 4½ years, I had the fond responsibility of caring for my 16-month-old mother and sister were all sick with flue at once—he had to be salvaged from the epidemic. So our home was just one big nursery-dormitory. Marianne graduated by her high chair to give way for the visiting baby, and the business of caring for the lot of them was a full time job for any woman. How mothers of families of four, five and six manage is a genuine puzzle to me. I admit though that the dawning of usefulness was apparent in Marianne—she could easily be a help in many little duties—even to the point of wanting to feed Brian (the nephew) his vegetables.

All of last Fall's files do not yield a Cucumber Relish recipe. The nearest thing I can find is a recipe for Sweet Saratoga Relish that was made of diced cucumbers. I wonder if the following recipe could be the one you want?

Sweet Saratoga Relish

Soak 25 3-inch cucumbers diced (or sliced if desired) and 10 medium sized sliced or diced onions in brine of 3 tablespoons salt and 1 quart of water (increase these proportions to cover pickles), let stand three hours with piece of alum size of hickory nut, then drain. Add 1 pint good vinegar, 1 lb. sugar, 1 teaspoon celery seed, 1 tablespoon cinnamon bark and peppercorns and whole cloves mixed and tied in muslin bag. Boil all together for 5 minutes, then pour into sterile bottles and seal.

If this is not the right recipe, find out more details and write to me again. Many thanks for the laugh.

Question.—I am one among all other women who comes to thank you for your devotedness to us through the Cookery Page.

It is always a joy to read and keep these precious recipes, but still a greater one when they are tried.

I don't remember you publishing a recipe for "Yums Yums." May I have it? I am much obliged to you for many services; please keep up your good work and as a result you will be keeping many housewives happy.—Mrs. J. L.

Answer.—The complimentary tone of this week's letters is fairly turning my head. Dont stop sending them though for I love it and will try to deserve your kind thoughts.

The only Yum Yum title I have is a Pudding.

Yum Yum Pudding

One cup cooked leftover cereal (any kind), ¼ cup white Karo or honey, ½ cup milk, ¼ cup raisins or dates, 2 eggs, ¼ cup nut meats. Cook in top of double boiler, stirring, until smooth then turn into buttered baking dish and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. and bake 40 minutes. Serve with cream.

If you wish to turn the above recipe into cookies, substitute the cereal for white flour, and add 1 cup Graham flour, reduce the amount of milk to 2 tablespoons, and drop on buttered cookie sheet and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. I am afraid this is not what you want—if not, try to give me more details or maybe some of our kind readers can send us the correct recipe for "Yum Yums."

SINGING REDUCES BLOOD PRESSURE

Secret Lies In Making Larynx Offer Most Resistance To Exhaled Breath

LONDON, March 23.—(CP).—Reduce your blood pressure by singing is the advice of Dr. Herbert Biehle of the Berlin Technical High school.

Biehle has completed a study of the relation between the voice and lungs and blood pressure.

Eighty-three well-known German professional singers were examined and not one of them was troubled with high blood pressure.

He carried his experiments into hospitals and found that blood pressure decreased after patients had a few singing lessons.

He cited the case of a woman whose condition was considered critical was cured in a comparatively short time when she took up singing. She was discharged from the hospital on condition she keeps up with her singing.

Dr. Biehle said the secret of the treatment lay in teaching the patient how to make the larynx offer the most resistance to the exhaled breath.

Food Notes

NOTE No. 1: While the new imported carrots are still quite a treat remember to serve them in your celery dish, by cutting them into long thin strips and soaking in ice water for about ½ hour before serving.

NOTE No. 2: If you must have something plenty different for your approaching dinner party, corn on the cob (fresh cobs), very hot is it. Recently an imaginative hostess served at her bridge supper, Chilled Boiled Salmon with Russian Dressing and Capers, Hot Corn on the Cob and Hot Tomato Tea Biscuits. It was a color and flavor poem.

THERE'S ONLY ONE WAY TO STOP CONSTIPATION

You have to correct the cause. Simply taking a pill now and then is just temporary — and often harmful.

Most constipation is due to meals low in "bulk." Put enough "bulk" in your diet and you can really correct common constipation.

That's why millions of people eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day. This cereal furnishes "bulk" which doesn't break down in the body. ALL-BRAN absorbs twice its weight in water, gently sponges and cleanses the system.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a food—not a medicine. You buy it at the grocery store. Besides "bulk," it has vitamin B to tone up the intestines, and iron for the blood. Eat two tablespoonfuls daily, with milk or cream. Three times daily in severe cases.

WINS HIGH PLACE IN PLANT CULTURE

Ottawa Woman Official Canadian Authority On Hybridizing Flowers

OTTAWA, March 23 (C.P.).—Miss Isabella Preston, specialist in ornamental gardening at the Experimental Farm here, is the only official woman authority on hybridizing flowers in Canada. She now is in England on a brief holiday and R. W. Oliver, looking after her work in her absence, was able to give this resume of her world-famous results.

Miss Preston's aim, he explained, is to obtain by crossing two species or varieties a plant that will be hardy and beautiful and will bloom at different periods than the parents. For instance, in the lily she developed a Siberian lily which blooms later than the ordinary garden type and before the Japanese lily, so that the new variety filled the gap between and ensured a continuous bloom from almost May 24 on into July.

Miss Preston's chief work has been in lilacs, roses, lilies, and irises.

The hybridizing of flowers can be exemplified by a description of Miss Preston's crossing of the lilac, as explained by Mr. Oliver.

She used Syringa Villosa, the ordinary Chinese lilac, a hardy and fast-growing type, as the female seed parent and Syringa Reflexa, the nodding lilac, a drooping spreading plant, with clusters long and narrow and pinkish in color, as the male. She crossed them to get a tall, blooming lilac that would be hardy and of a beautiful pink shade.

The result in this case has been a new race of lilacs which is called Syringa Prestoniae after Miss Preston. The "children" vary in color from pale, pinkish lavender to a deep lilac. The clusters of bloom are bigger than those of either parent and the plants are more vigorous in growth.

In the second generation, according to Mendel's law of heredity, the characteristics will again split.

Some of this second generation of the Prestoniae lilac are growing now and are exceptionally good so far. From the number of seeds in the original cross there have been about 50 varieties good enough to name and all of these except the first two, which were named after the late Dr. W. T. Macoun and Miss Preston, have been named by Miss Preston after Shakespeare's heroines, Jessica, Calpurnia, Cleopatra, and so on.

Miss Preston has achieved her chief fame in the crossing of lilies. The most outstanding result, the Grace Marshall, won an award of merit from the Royal Horticultural Society in England in 1935 for the best lily hybrid of the year. The plant stands about five feet high and has up to 50 blooms. The bloom is of an orange-scarlet shade.

MRS. WATT HOME FROM LONG TRIP

Canadian Leader In England Reports World Progress For Women

LONDON, March 23.—(CP). — Mrs. Alwred Watt, the white-haired Canadian who introduced women's institutes to the United Kingdom and is president of the Associated Countrywomen of the World, has returned to England, after travelling 100,000 miles and attending 300 mass meetings, 200 governmental banquets and 50,000 handshakes.

Mrs. Watt visited Canada, the United States, Australia, New Zealand, Ceylon and Palestine, travelling to her meetings by plane, bullock cart, canoe, rickshaw and motoring and coming in contact with more than 1,000,000 women.

She found dark-skinned Ringalese and Hawaiian women absorbed in the task of improving plantation life for the workers and introducing domestic science into rural schools. Radio has played a prominent part in helping women escape drudgery and isolation, she said.

"A new type of women is evolving everywhere," Mrs. Watt said. "She is avid for facts about world affairs and is no longer satisfied with the sugar-coated knowledge for women only."

Despite the tradition of the lack of solidarity among women, Mrs. Watt declares that she has found women in every country better organized than men and much more effective at co-operation. She is looking forward to the next triennial conference of the Countrywomen of the World in London in 1939. Ten thousand women are expected to attend.

KEEPING TRADITION ALIVE

Officers In Mechanized Cavalary To Take Up Hunting.

LONDON, March 23. — (CP) — Aimed at keeping alive the cavalry tradition, a decision has been made by which the officers of cavalry regiments, converted to mechanization, will be provided with riding horses for hunting and point-to-point meetings. One horse will be made available to each officer as against two horses allowed him previous to mechanization.

The conversion now proceeding will mean the availability of a larger number of animals in the remount department. They are not to find their way on the market, but will be absorbed in the service.

Automobile mudguards will carry cameras which begin operating at the instant of a crash and keep on recording the scene on a film until stopped. If the invention recently filed in the Berlin Patent Office is used.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted By Roberta

ALAS! You know the cause too well;
The salt is spilt, to me it fell.
Then to confirmate to my loss,
My knife and fork were laid across;
On Friday, too! The day I dread;
Would I were safe at home, in bed!
Last night (I vow to Heaven 'tis true)
Bounce from the fire a coffin flew.
Next post some fatal news, or ill
Will follow me my German fro' me well!

Dear Friends:

How many superstitions do you cherish? Don't pretend you have not any, for we all have some, but what exasperates us is when someone or other carries it to excess.

I knew a man who would not do any important thing on a Friday, and if it fell on the thirteenth, oh boy, he lay low and would hardly stir out of the house. I asked if anything bad had ever happened on the thirteenth, or on Friday, but he thought it over and he said no it had not.

So he determined all by himself he would get over this superstition, and the very next Friday when he was striding down to his office feeling like a conqueror, he fell and broke his ankle. No use telling him the streets were icy, nor that he had no rubbers on. He felt justified in all he had ever dreaded from Friday.

And just what is superstition? It is a belief that if we do certain things or other things happen, something, generally bad is sure to follow. You may scoff at it as we used to do, but when you see it occur time after time, you realize that there is a mysterious force at work in the world, which tries at times to be on guard against evil.

It used to be supposed that the devil was let loose in the world at times to try the patience of mortals, and couldn't it be possible that good angels are loose also, to get us braced against him? Your guess is as good as mine in this respect.

All I know is, that I have seen personally, things happen to which no reasonable answer could be given. Of course we all have a tendency to believe in our own superstitions, while thinking the other fellow is goofy to believe in his.

When you have lived, and studied and thought, you never say you would not believe this or that, because you know truly that things can happen which no one can account for.

A minister told me this about ten years ago. In Ireland during the war, there was an old lady lived, who could neither read nor write, and one day, either she was not of his faith, she came to him crying that her son Danny had been killed in the war. She vowed that she had seen him dead, with a bullet hole in the middle of his forehead, and no one could comfort her. Next day a telegram came for her, and as her priest was away to another village, the operator brought it to this minister, asking him to break it gently to her, that her son was dead.

When he went to her, she said I know what you want to tell me. A paper came saying Danny was killed, and all the women came into her cabin and keened and wailed for the dead. This minister thought he would find out exactly how Danny died, the hour, and the circumstances.

The Captain wrote him that he had been killed at 4 a.m., shot in the middle of the forehead, and that was the exact hour when his mother saw it happen. Many hard-boiled soldiers saw things happen in the war that no one could explain away.

I have been in houses in Scotland, England, and Ireland that made you shiver, and you knew that evil had predominated there, and its presence lingered on.

What are my own superstitions

Government Would Receive Gas Tax Before Assuming Repair Costs

AT CAMPBELLFORD

CAMPBELLFORD, March 23 — At a special meeting of the Town Council held in the Clerk's office, William Anderson, Assistant Superintendent of the Department of Highways, addressed the Council on the matter of the government's share of the costs in repairing the highway which runs through the town.

It was pointed out that the town must assume fifty per cent. of the cost of repairing the highway and 100 per cent. of the cost of repairing the pavement that is not a part of the said highway unless they are willing to give the government the taxes derived from all gasoline pumps located on the roads so repaired. After giving the matter some discussion as to the best time to make the repairs and the probable cost the matter was left over till the next regular council meeting.

Following this J. C. Birmingham, Tax Collector went over the tax roll, after which the meeting adjourned.

BUDGET DEBATE VOTE GOES 63-16

Hepburn, was not present for the division.

The bill to make Percy Wilson, Ontario Official Guardian, successor to Hon. David Croll, Welfare Minister, as one of the Dionne quintuplets guardians, went through committee stage. Mr. Hepburn promised to table contracts made by the guardians on behalf of the babies.

The Public Interested

Leopold Macaulay (Con. York South) declared the financial dealing of the quintuplets were of public interest.

"I have no objection to making the contracts public, but further contracts will be handicapped by publication of this information," the Premier said. "If it becomes known companies pay for using the quints' names in their advertising, they might not want to renew the contracts."

"But there is nothing we want to cover up so we'll table them," he added.

The bill for the guardianship change then passed without objection.

Arthur Ellis (Con., Ottawa South) charged that behind the Government's bill to make the investigatory powers of the Securities Commission retroactive was a thinly-disguised motive to "besmirch" Senator Arthur Meighen. Conservative Senate leader. He said a royal commission already had inquired into dealings of companies with which the Senator was connected.

"If he (Senator Meighen) is in the clear, he'll have nothing to worry about," commented Premier Hepburn.

Rowe Warns Conservatives Election May Come In 1937

Leader Has Five Reasons Why He Thinks Hepburn Will Go To Polls

"PARTY WEAKENING"

TORONTO, March 23.—An urgent warning to Conservative party followers to organize now for a general Provincial election in 1937 was sounded last night by Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative leader.

He gave five reasons why he thought the Premier would go to the country this year, and he predicted more Liberals would support the Tory party than ever before in the history of Ontario.

Sees Party Weakened.

Simultaneously he declared the Conservative Party was fired by a new spirit, and that the revived forces of Conservatism would sweep the Province. His party would restore hopes of those who wanted jobs by restoring the opportunity to get jobs, declared Mr. Rowe.

His reasons for predicting an early general election, given at the annual meeting of the East York Provincial Conservative Riding Association in Simpson's Arcadian Court, were:

(1) Premier Hepburn feels the Liberal Party is growing weaker every day. "Hepburnism is repudiating Liberalism," said Mr. Rowe. "He has discarded his party."

(2) Separate school supporters know he has "tricked" them.

(3) He wants a snap vote to trick the electors.

(4) His beer and wine policy is out of control and he is "ashamed to let it go another year."

(5) He told the people of Ontario his Government would never buy Quebec power; since then he has signed two new contracts with Quebec power firms.

"Reckless Spectacle."

Premier Hepburn had surrounded himself with men who were not known to the Liberal Party a few years ago, the Conservative Leader charged. These "inexperienced" men were turning the Government of the Province into the "most reckless spectacle" to be seen from the Atlantic to the Pacific, he claimed.

Mr. Rowe was introduced to his audience as "the next Premier of Ontario" by a former Premier of the Province, Hon. George S. Henry, House Leader.

The banquet was tendered by the Conservatives of East York, Mr. Henry's riding, in honor of the two party leaders.

JOHN MARSH IS ELECTION WINNER

4,817, William Ainslie (Liberal) 3,434, J. Connor (C.C.F.) 2,303.

Elections of 1935 saw a split in Liberal ranks with two candidates in the fray, but in the by-election the ranks were welded.

Three Liberal Cabinet Ministers took part in the fray. They were Hon. C. D. Howe, Transport Minister; Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Revenue Minister; and Hon. J. C. Elliott, Postmaster-General. They campaigned in Mr. Connor's behalf.

Two Federal Party leaders also joined in the vote-appeal. Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Conservative Leader, took the platform in support of Mr. Marsh and J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F. Leader, spoke in Mr. O'Hanley's favor.

By failure to obtain at least half the number of votes which went to the victorious Conservative, Mr. O'Hanley lost his deposit.

Has Big Margin.

NEW CARLISLE, Que., March 23.—(CP).—Pierre Emile Cote who lost his Quebec Legislature seat in the last Provincial election by less than a half-hundred votes, will represent the riding of Bonaventure in the House of Commons.

The former Provincial Highways Minister was elected in a by-election yesterday to succeed Hon. Charles Marcil, who held the Federal seat for the Liberal party from 1896 until his death last month. They stopped counting the ballots late last night after the New Carlisle lawyer had obtained a majority of 1,591 votes in 81 out of 90 polls over his nearest opponent. Actual count of the vote was not given immediately.

The other two lawyer candidates, William O'Connell of Quebec, and Maurice Thibault, were left far behind in the voting from the start. Both defeated candidates were nominated as Independents.

The Conservative party, which held the seat from 1867 until 1891, did not nominate a candidate.

SCOTT'S SCRAPBOOK By R. J. SCOTT

CAMPBELLFORD

ORIGIN OF NAMES SUBJECT OF TALK

Outgrowth of Famous Doomsday Book, Earl Bell Tells Campbellford Rotary

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, March 23. — "Surnames" formed the subject of a rather unusual address delivered by Earl Bell before the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon held in the St. Lawrence Hotel on Monday.

Originating in England in the year 1066 surnames were an outgrowth of William the Conqueror's Doomsday Book which presented the necessity of more accurately classifying people according to their names. Up to this time people in towns and villages had derived their name from the geographical description of the country in which they were born such as Hill, Moor, Lake, Walter and so on. During this same period nick names became very popular as evidenced by such names in history as Edward the Confessor, William the Conqueror, and Alfred the Good all of which denoted some particular characteristic of the person so named.

The Norman Method.

However, with the coming of taxes the assessor found it necessary to adopt a different system of naming people and so the Norman method of giving names was adopted by which John, son of John was given the name Johnson and Jack's son became Jackson. In the same way the Irish O'Donnell, O'Brien, and O'Connor came into existence when in the year 1400 the English King passed a law requiring the Irish to adopt a method of naming similar to the English which they did with the adoption of the "os" pre-fix which corresponds to the English "son" suffix with the same meaning. "Mac" is the Celtic word for son which explains the origination of the MacDonalds, MacLarens and McGregors.

"Nearly one-third of the early Anglo-Saxon names originated as nick-names," Mr. Bell asserted. Some of these were flattering such as Goodfellow Grand and Fine, while others such as Cruickshank, which denoted crooked legs and Waghorn which was applied to persons who wiggled their noses when they spoke and Blackeye from which come the names of Blakely and Blake. The speaker gave numerous other examples of these classifications such as Fairfax from Yellow Hair; Piggot meaning one who is pock marked and Pettifer a person with an artificial foot. The Stuarts, who followed the Plantagenate line of kings were no doubt annoyed by the thought that their name indicated that their ancestors had been Stile wards, men who looked after the hogs, which name slowly evolutionized through Styward, Steward, Stewyard and Stuart.

In conclusion the speaker asserted that the first travelling salesman was a Chapman which originally indicated a person who sold leather from door to door.

Outstanding Achievements Accomplished During Year By Chamber Of Commerce

F. W. Turner Addresses Annual Meeting Of The Chamber Of Commerce

KEEN COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Pointing to a peak year of splendid achievement as chairman at the annual dinner meeting of Peterborough Chamber of Commerce held at Empress Hotel on Monday evening, President Fred J. Overend acknowledged the support the Chamber had received from the citizens generally and from the mayor and council and the press in particular.

In the course of the outstanding achievements of the year under review as being organization of Kawartha Lakes and Haliburton Tourist Association; the Winter Sports Committee under whose auspices the ski jump was erected; and the Central Ontario Highways Association headed by Aldermen James Dutton.

Treasurer J. J. Turner, a veteran member of the organization presented the financial statement, showing a credit balance on hand of $353.92, with disbursements for the year totalling $6,612.27.

Introduces Speaker

F. W. Turner, industrial agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company Toronto was introduced as the guest speaker by Alderman R. M. Glover, chairman of the Manufacturer's Committee of the City Council.

Mr. Turner held his audience of sixty representative business and professional men keenly interested with his delightful and educating address on the subject of Canada's development along economic lines. In the words of F. D. Kerr, K.C., who subsequently moved the vote of thanks, he, "Visualized the progress of this great land from its beginning down to the time of its present achievements and envisioned all the great possibilities that lie ahead."

During the afternoon, Mr. Turner said, he had met the mayor and members of the city council and was impressed with the fine community spirit which was so evident on all sides. As an industrial representative he paid tribute to the work which City Clerk S. R. Armstrong has done in this regard for Peterborough.

Keen Community Spirit

In the large gathering of members of the Chamber of Commerce present at the meeting, the guest speaker saw further evidence of the keen community spirit which he believed was one of the secrets of Peterborough's prominence as a manufacturing centre.

In order to present a clear picture of industrial progress, Mr. Turner reviewed a number of phases of Canada's growth from its founding period of slow growth on through its period of rapid expansion and development and to the present day when he declared new opportunities are beginning to present themselves with a return to more prosperous times.

He showed how Canada's expansion had come about through the settlement of people from other lands dealing to better themselves and create new opportunities, and he spoke particularly of the important part played by the fishing, fur, lumber, agricultural, mining and transportation industries.

Fourth In World

Early development in this country and in the United States, he declared was along the waterways of the continent until the railroads came and spread the development to other sections and opened up trading opportunities that had been undreamed of, until last year Canada had attained to prominence as the fourth trading nation in the world.

From that point, Mr. Turner spoke of the growth of individual communities and expressed the opinion that Peterborough had attained to its prominence as an industrial city because it had a fine type of civic-minded citizens; good labor conditions; water power; splendid educational and recreational facilities; and by no means least adequate transportation facilities.

With the belief that the period ahead is going to be one of general prosperity and expansion, Mr. Turner believed, "You in Peterborough have great advantages otherwise you would not have attained to your present growth and importance," and he urged that every citizen should learn to value the advantages possessed by the community and on all possible occasions endeavour to broadcast the fact.

Moves Vote of Thanks

In expressing thanks on behalf of the Chamber to the guest speaker, Mr. Kerr felt the address had visualized the progress of this city since he first came here twenty-five years ago. At that time he recalled E. A. Peck, K.C., E. F. Mason, City Clerk S. R. Armstrong and Dr. H. R. H. Kenner, all present at last night's meeting were members of the Chamber of Commerce while Rollis Denne and Rollie Glover were just about to come into the organization. And Mr. Kerr said, "they have all been doing a man's job ever since."

Mr. Kerr expressed an abiding faith in the value of the Chamber of Commerce to any community, and speaking more particularly of the local Chamber paid tribute to the work of J. J. Turner and George Gillespie.

The vote of thanks was seconded by Roland Denne, who as former chairman of the Manufacturer's Committee of the council expressed the firm opinion that the city must be prepared to spend more money if it wishes to attract more industries.

The Northrop String Trio entertained with a splendid program of instrumental selections during the dinner hour, while Mack Gordon contributed two vocal solos entitled "The Tinker's Song" and "The Water Boy" accompanied by Harry Northrop. A violin solo "Hostierings", was played by Stan Northrop.

GENERAL STRIKE IS THREATENED BRINTON PLANT

Journeymen Weavers Join Setters In Walk-Out Demanding Pay Increase

CONFERENCES FAIL

Fifty-six journeymen weavers in the Axminster and Wilton departments cast in their lot with the setters, in staging a walk-out at the Brinton-Peterborough Carpet Company's plant to-day as a protest for failure of the company to grant pay increases.

Each pay envelope contained a printed slip last Friday stating that a 5 per cent. increase would go into effect dating from Monday, March 15, but when employees checked the amounts they are said to have found the increase was not there. The slips were to have been signed by employees acknowledging the raise, but none of them did so.

Twenty girls in the setting department are said to be out, along with twelve men from the dye house, and fifty-six weavers from the Axminster and Wilton departments. A general strike is planned for Wednesday, it was said.

Weavers are definite in their demands. They want a 25 per cent wage increase, to go into effect immediately. Forty weavers held a conference in the Trades and Labor Hall on George street Monday afternoon, but no announcement was made at the conclusion of the meeting.

Employees contend that the company promised a full restoration of all depression cuts, which totalled twenty-five per cent., as soon as normal times returned. The amount of work now going through has led them to believe the company can well afford to place wages on a pre-depression basis. It is believed pay cuts effected during the depression period were two 10 per cent and one of 5 per cent.

The Brinton plant employs upwards of 900 men and girls, many of whom have been working overtime during the past two months. The last half year period is said to have been the busiest since 1929.

SCHREIBER ROAD PROBE BLOCKED

Roebuck Refuses Committee Extra Power—Says No Scandal Exists

TORONTO, March 23 (CP).—Expenditures on the 23-mile Schreiber-White River section of the trans-Canada Highway after March 31, 1936, were not a matter for the public accounts committee of the Ontario Legislature, the committee decided today. Without specific authority from the House the committee cannot look into things beyond the end of that year.

Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck told the committee the Conservative Opposition was looking for scandal where none existed. He refused Mr. Macaulay's request for a promise to ask the House to extend the committee's authority.

R. M. Smith, Deputy-Minister of Highways, told the committee work on this and other sections of the highway was stopped in June, 1936, because appropriations were exhausted. James Clark (Lib., Windsor-Sandwich) said everybody in the district knew the work was a waste of money.

Mr. Smith said the job was closed down because the estimates for northern road work had been exceeded.

"You said you closed down all these trans-Canada jobs, did you open up any of them?" asked Mr. Macauley.

"Yes, from Port William to Kenora because part of the road had been torn up and there was a lot of traffic."

She has been unable to raise $10,000 bail since her preliminary hearing early in February when Miss Lapine identified her in the abortion charge.

Mrs. Beaudoin was arrested after a complaint by Miss Lapine December 15, 1936. While the young woman remained in a critical condition in hospital here, Mrs. Beaudoin was held in Timmins police cell without bail for seven weeks.

Crown Attorney Caldbick has started plans for an inquest into the young woman's death.

Happy Days Here Again, Pan-Handlers Now Ask For Quarter To Get Slim Meal

It was an open winter for the pan-handlers. Bare highways, lack of snow on the ground, and springlike winds which are tempered to bare hands on grab irons of rumbling freight trains, lured members of the wandering fraternity into the open. In contrast to previous years when the bitter chill of subzero temperatures recalled in their semi-hibernation.

Varied and numerous are the requests of the scrounger, as was indicated by the report of one of the victims of the pan-handling racket.

"How's chances for a quarter, buddy, to get a slim meal?" gaily queried a fairly well-dressed hobo buttonholing a local resident whom he obviously took for an easy mark.

"Quarter? You fellows used to be glad of dimes," was the response.

"Happy days are here again," countered the spiritual unabashed. "Prosperity's just 'round the corner. They all give quarters now."

From Namesake City

From the ancient city of Peterborough, England comes this picture showing one of the city's former mayor's attired in his chain of office and robes. He is Alderman Matthew Hooke, J. P., who occupied the mayor's chair in "the other Peterborough" in 1931. The picture is interesting in view of Alderman James Dutton's proposal that the Mayor of Peterborough (Ontario) be presented with a chain and robes in connection with Coronation observances.

Cathedral Players Present Sacred Drama At The Mount

Story Of What Preceded And Followed Crucifixion Is Told

BEAUTIFUL MUSIC

"The Upper Room", a drama of Our Lord's Passion written by Monsignor R. H. Benson, and presented with such success last year in Holy Week by the Cathedral Players, was repeated on Monday evening in the auditorium of Mount St. Joseph before a most appreciative audience, watching with reverent interest the unfolding of the tragic story of scenes which directly preceded and followed the Crucifixion of Christ.

The simple words used by Monsignor Benson to convey an impression of intense emotion, struck with powerful force on the perceptions of those who watched, and listened to, this old yet ever-new recital of the sufferings of the Savior in those last grim days of His earthly pilgrimage. The effect of that sublime tragedy was heightened by its presentation by a group of clever young people forming the Cathedral Players of the Cathedral parish. Every member of a superb cast appeared to be imbued with the spiritual significance of the sacred drama, and the power to reproduce in each individual role the original aspect, thus giving an usual atmosphere of verity to the episodes. The costuming was splendid, as were the lighting effects, with a particularly fine bit of lighting in the "spotting" and back curtain for the Jerusalem scene, which is one of the most realistic in the production. In this the raucous voices of the blood-thirsty mob, and the terrifying storm of the Crucifixion hours, are depicted with awe-inspiring realism. It is seldom that a sacred drama is presented with such force and simple power. The credit, in addition to the splendid acting, goes in a large measure to skilful direction by Rev. C. J. Carroll.

Music provided another attractive element in the introduction to each scene. Singing excerpts from Stayner's "Crucifixion", the Stabat Mater and other appropriate selections, an invisible choir, singing back stage, was composed of members of the male voice section of the Cathedral with three additions, in Leo and Joseph Begley of Lindsay, and James Johnson. Cathedral choristers included Joseph Nolan, Anthony Sechal, Harold Coulson (director), James Weger, Arthur Temple, George Daly, Thomas Williams, William McFadden. Miss Marion Best, A.T.C.M., played the harp for the choir.

In the 'Upper Room'

The action of the drama takes place in the Upper Room at Jerusalem, with a most effective representation of the Passing of Christ later, on His way to Golgotha, done by means of the large open window at the rear of the room, where the cries of the mob bring the room and the tip of the Cross is seen passing by. Here later also come the Gentle Mother, silent and grief-stricken; the heart-broken Magdalene; the conscience-stricken Judas; the other mourners for the stricken Lord.

The cast is as follows: Jack Roach (the doctor); Vincent McCabe (Archas, landlord of the Upper Room); Malcolm Buchanan (Samuel, his servant lad); Elmer Crough (Joseph of Arimathea); Jack McCabe (Peter); Wilfred Lever (John, the beloved disciple); Ferdinand Wolf (Judas); J. Roach (Longinus, the Roman soldier); Marguerite Madden (Mary); Miss Helen Brady (Mary Magdalene); Miss Helen Ross (Veronica).

"The Upper Room" will be repeated again tonight (Tuesday) in the auditorium on the Mount.

HOWE INTRODUCES AIRWAY MEASURE BEFORE COMMONS

Setting Up Of Five Million Dollar Corporation Is Given First Reading

GOVERNMENT IN CONTROL

OTTAWA, March 23 (CP) — A coast-to-coast air mail, passenger and express service for Canada, linked with the proposed Ireland-to-Canada trans-Atlantic air line, has moved a step nearer with the introduction of legislation setting up a $5,000,000 corporation largely controlled but not owned by the Dominion Government.

Some details of the proposal were given by Transport Minister Howe in the House of Commons last night when, without debate, the necessary resolution was adopted and the trans-Canada airway bill given first reading. Mr. Howe urged that quick action be taken so that no time would be lost in setting up the necessary machinery.

Construction of necessary ground facilities would be complete at the end of this year, Mr. Howe said, "and now the time has come to fly that route." All indications pointed to the likelihood that such a service could be operated successfully, he said.

Organization arrangements will be placed in the hands of the Canadian National Railways which will underwrite the capital stock and distribute it among those organizations heretofore interested or engaged in aviation who wish to participate. The government will not own any stock directly but will be enabled at any time to acquire all stock at book value.

Heated Debate On C.N.R.

Introduction of this measure came after a stubborn debate in committee over the government's bill to write down the capital structure of the Canadian National Railway. An involved discussion of railway finance and financing developed between Mr. Howe, Conservative leader Bennett, Finance Minister Dunning and W. A. Walsh (Cons. Mount Royal) and others. The bill was not changed in committee and stands for third reading when further debate may arise on the mode of procedure.

The bill scaled down some $643,000,000 of federal advances to the railway to $270,000,000 and converted that amount into certificates to be held by a securities commission set up by the new legislation.

Attacking the measures Mr. Bennett charged the step was a "juggling" of public accounts, a deliberate evasion of the federal audit act, and a futile effort to conceal facts which spoke for themselves.

Mr. Howe denied the bill did violence to any principles of honesty in public funding, and contended that it simply represented a write-down of capital such as English government railways had carried out.

Late in the day several matters were quickly dealt with, including first reading of a bill to replace the biological board of Canada with a fisheries research board; first reading of a bill to establish a national park in New Brunswick; and second reading of bills respecting feedstuffs and seeds.

During initial operations of the trans-Canada air lines, the company which will be incorporated with a provisional board of transport department officials, the government will pay any deficits through subsidies for carriage of mails. From Jan. 1, 1940, the government will enter into straight mail contracts, expecting to place the corporation on an efficient basis.

How It Will Be Used.

Of the $5,000,000 capital $1,750,000 will be required for equipment, $2,000,000 for reserve for such expansion as may be considered in the national interest, and $1,250,000 as Canada's share in the capital of the proposed England-Ireland-Newfoundland-Canada trans-Atlantic service. Operating costs are estimated as $1,600,000 annually.

No details were given as to frequency of trips on the trans-Canada service but it was stated as the objective that Canada have a "first-class" coast-to-coast service at a tariff rate comparable to those of other North American services. It will link the chief Canadian cities, but will not disturb existing services.

Conservative Leader Bennett, commenting on the resolution preceding the bill, said it was apparent Canada should have such an air service as proposed but the question of finance was one that had to be considered. He referred to the circumstances under which Canada's previous air mail service was suspended.

Mr. Bennett said he would withhold further comment until the bill was introduced, but he urged that every safeguard be set up to avoid getting out of control of the government.

Existing air service organizations would be invited to contribute what they could of personnel, experience and equipment and the details would be worked out after the bill was passed, Mr. Howe said.

The proposed company will fly only the main arteries and such supplementary services as may be considered in the national interest. There was no intention, the minister said, of interfering with existing services.

An exclusive contract to carry mails, passengers and express over the coast-to-coast system would be given the new company and for the first two years it will be subsidized in lieu of mail contracts. Following the first two years of operation the mail carriage will be placed on a contract basis.

Ottawa To Pay Deficits.

Deficits will be paid by the Dominion government, assuring the corporation against loss in its initial operations. At the same time, Mr. Howe said, definite limits will be placed upon the profits that may be made. It was believed that the company would operate at a profit.

Canada, Mr. Howe said, was one of the few countries in which there was no scheduled air service between its principle cities. On the other hand the Dominion provided services second to none in linking otherwise isolated communities with civilization.

Head office of the corporation will be in Ottawa or at such other centre as the board of nine directors may decide. Directors will not necessarily own stock but must be British subjects ordinarily resident in Canada.

In distributing shares the Canadian National, as underwriters, may accept equipment in lieu of cash for shares, providing such exchange is approved by the minister. Shareholders must be British subjects resident in Canada or corporations under control of Dominion or Provincial incorporation laws.

Emergency landing fields, lights and radio beams and weather reports will be furnished by the government free of charge until such time as in the opinion of the minister the revenues are such that a charge for these services may be levied.

Turtlenap Plot Upon '36 Winner Only A Hoax Says Racer's Owner

DETROIT, March 23 — (CP). — An alleged plot to "Turtlenap" Joe Palooka, speedy winner of last year's University of Detroit annual turtle race and an entrant again this year, was owned to-day by Paul P. Sanderson, chairman of the event. The race goes on to-morrow in the Alumni lounge of the university.

At the same time, Sanderson refused to divulge the whereabouts of the betting favorite, who has been moved from his stall in the paddock. The 15 other entrants are quartered in specially-constructed cages.

Donald Ramsey, whose alias Palooka sports from his broad back when flying down the stretch, was equally secretive about the alleged kidnapping of his favorite racer.

"We've just moved Palooka to a safer spot," Ramsey said. "The kidnapping story is all nonsense."

SEED CLEANING MILL KEPT BUSY

Farmers Are Taking Advantage of Government Cleaning Plant

EFFICIENT PLANT

Separating mustard seed from flax is just another job done at the Peterborough Flour and Feed Mills where the government cleaning plant has been in operation since February 18.

Grading barley or knocking the ends off it, and taking smut out of oats, are simply other variations of the routine which has established the efficiency of the new cleaning mill.

J. W. Hambidge, proprietor of the Peterborough Flour and Feed Mills, south of Romaine Street and east of George Street, told The Examiner that this cleaning mill is the only one of that kind between Stirling and Markham. Most of the business has been coming from all parts of this county and some from across the Durham boundary.

Tom Martin, who with Hugh Hunter, are the operators of the cleaning mill, figured in the first job which had been done this morning, as an example of the efficiency of the machine in handling all kinds of grain. The rates charged for cleaning are set by the government.

Establishment of the cleaning plant in the Hambidge building is another project accomplished by A. D. Runions who had advocated it among many of the farmers of the county who had felt the need of this accommodation to produce clean seed.

GEORGE SELMES IS GIVEN FIVE YEARS

Five Strokes Of The Strap Also Ordered By Judge J. A. McGibbon

George Selmes of this city, found guilty of a serious offence earlier this month, was sentenced to five years in Portsmouth Penitentiary with five strokes of the strap, by Judge J. A. McGibbon in the County Criminal Court to-day. He directed that the strap be administered during his first three months in the penitentiary and said that he would ask that the prisoner be thoroughly examined, mentally and physically.

W. J. Arthur Fair, counsel for Selmes, told the court the prisoner was suffering a neurotic condition as the result of a head wound received in the war. He asked that the man be extended leniencegon this account and that, if a prison sentence was found necessary, provision for examination of his physical and mental health be made. Crown Attorney V. J. McSherry, K.C. pointed out the seriousness of the offence and asked for a prison term with lashes in accordance with the provisions of the Criminal Code.

"You have been convicted of a very serious offence — one of the most heinous of our whole criminal code," Judge McGibbon said. "I am sure that you, as an ex-service man himself, be found guilty in sentencing one who had served his King and country in time of war a particularly different case.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

DOWN IN Belleville, they're preparing for their B Minor puck playoffs and ye Quinte scribbler remarks—after the Barrie-Colts' thing last week—that we can now join the Oshawa writer and talk about summer sports. Alas, there's truth in them thar syllables. But at least we will have some summer sports to chatter about without having to stick solely to men's softball or adopt a team from the district, like Trenton Fliers, for instance. However, we will take his advice for the space of a few paragraphs and discuss some on the summery sport of baseball.

* * * * * *

KNOTTY LEE sent us this letter the other day: "The Ottawa and Ogdensburg clubs intend to make about a week's tour of Eastern Ontario before the league season opens on May 19th. I would like to make some arrangement with the Peterborough Ball Club or some organization in town to put on a game in Peterborough on Saturday, May 15th. I am sure we could could draw a large crowd. We will work on a percentage the same as the House of David and whoever runs the game in Peterborough will not have to take much of a chance. If the park is not ready by that time, we could play on the fair grounds."

* * * * * *

SUCH A game should prove interesting to local fans, but we think May 15th is too early. It just hustles things to have the fans, weather and grounds right for the C.O.B.I. opener here on May 24th. It might be better to have these pro teams transfer a league game or put on an exhibition tilt in Peterborough sometime through the summer. This is just our own opinion and we pass the info on to local ball officials. If they want to contact Knotty they may do so either at his Toronto home, 32 Harcourt Ave., or at the McConville Hotel in Ogdensburg, N.Y.task.

* * * * * *

AND FROM 'way out in Colorado comes another letter asking about chances of staging one of those donkey baseball games here through the summer. Again we refer 'em to the local club. Donkey baseball was played in a number of towns around this neck of the woods last year and might go over okay here for a game. It's a hilarious sort of spectacle with some dumb baseball, smart mules and guys of both types all mixed up in a diamond parody that will lay the customers in the aisles. You occasionally see donkeys play ball—two-legged donkeys—but seldom two teams of 'em. And those who come to scoff remain to bray!

* * * * * *

JUST A few more clippings on the Colts before we turn 'em out to pasture for the summer. This from the Oshawa Times, a bit belated maybe but showing a few more fan angles on that final Barrie-Peterborough joust of Friday last: "Did you hear about the hockey game here in Oshawa last Friday? Barrie nosed out Peterborough 6-5 to advance to the junior 'B' round-robin championship tourney, but the demonstrations provided by the enthusiastic rooters of both clubs gave Oshawa something to talk about for years. It didn't matter which team you were rooting for you were apt to get popped, and what's more that is what happened to lots of them.

* * * * * *

"ONE CHAPPIE was found down at the arena behind a corner and sitting on a box about 1.00 a.m., when they were closing up—and when aroused he thickly inquired as to when the game was going to start. Sirens, noise-makers, rick-racks, sparklers, firecrackers, any kind of noise was good fun and so goes for all that went on. Inebriated supporters were much in evidence and there were fights galore. One lad from Trenton came out of a free-for-all with teeth-marks on his leg. The 'weaker sex' were in the fights as often as the male and, according to many fans, Kipling knew what he was spouting with that 'female of the species is more deadly than the male', etc.". It was a bit boisterous, at that.

* * * * * *

AND FROM the Lindsay Post: "The hockey season is over here and also in Peterborough. The fans from Peterborough expected their Colts to go right through this year, particularly after their 7-3 victory over Barrie in Peterborough some two weeks ago. The Barrie team deserves credit for the win but we also think something should be said of the stolen goal in Barrie, if it really was stolen—and it seems to have been. If the Peterborough paper raised much of a squawk they would be accused of raising alibis and being poor losers, but since we have no great interest in either squad—and we have heard pretty definitely that the disputed goal in Barrie was not even close—we might be able to broadcast it a little. It is unfortunate that such things can happen in an important round particularly," Thanks, fellow, but what can one do about such things?

A POSTPONED Junior Ladies' Basketball League game was run off in the Y.W.C.A. gym last gloaming with Westclox pulling out a 9-2 win over "Y" Quakers. The win for the Clockmakers broke a second-place tie in the standing with St. John's, giving last night's victors undisputed grip on that spot. Five points for Audrey Flynn in an otherwise close tussle was a highlight. Two other postponed tilts from last Friday—one betwixt C.G.E. Seniors and Maroons and the other between C.G.E. Juniors and St. John's—will be held this week; dunno what night yet. We may hear in time for today's paper. Playoffs in this cage loop are just around the corner. And ditto the money serial in the men's Senior City Circuit at the Y.M.C.A.

NEW RECRUIT IS BASEBALL GAMBLE BUT LOOKS GOOD

Feller Fanned Five Of Six Batters To Face Him in Last Workout

COST YOU $250,000

(By Eddie Brietz.)

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 22 (A.P.). — So what about this Feller feller? Well, he's one of the nicest kids you ever saw and he's got one of the hardest high ones you ever saw. . . . At 19, he'll collect about $35,000 for his first season with the Indians—$10,000 salary plus another $20,000 for endorsements, radio appearances, etc. . . . He's still a baseball gamble, but if you want to buy him you'll have to pay $250,000 on the line. . . . Alva Bradley, president of the Indians, is considering having the lad's right arm insured for $10,000 or so.

Feller keeps up with his studies. They've dug up a private tutor for him and he goes through his academic paces each afternoon after working out in the morning. . . . In May he'll go back to Iowa to receive his High School diploma. . . . He's the No. 1 guy around town for the New Orleans kids who pack the bleachers every time he pitches. . . . For the tourists he's almost as much of an attraction as the old French Market. . . .

There was a story going the rounds that the Cleveland front office wanted to make a Sunday pitcher out of Feller. . . . That is, work him only on Sundays and jam the parks around the American League until his box office value slumped. . . . It didn't take Manager Steve O'Neill long to spike that one. . . . He considers Feller a sure fire bet to win 20 or more games and will use him as often as is consistent. . . . Last time he worked, Feller fanned five of six batters to face him, and said he'd have fed the last man if he'd had a little more resin on the ball.

The 'Bad Man' Of Hockey One Of Finest Family Men

Big, Tough Rad Horner The Best Of Fathers To His Three Children

NO QUARTER ON ICE

(By Bill Reese).

TORONTO, March 23—"Oh, that big guy, Horner?"

"Yeah, you're right. He ought to be barred from hockey."

"Gosh, I'd hate to be his wife. I'll bet his poor kids are scared of him . . . he's so tough!"

Now, no doubt, gentle reader, you are not one of those who have been guilty of uttering some of the above specious, but there are thousands of perfectly well-meaning folk who are guilty—and that, incidentally, includes this sports writer.

However, there's just one unfortunate thing about all these misguided people who have hushed their misbehaving children by issuing the dire threat that big, bad "Red" Horner would get them if they were not good. They do not know the REAL "Red" Horner!

About four weeks ago when Maroons were due to play a Saturday night game here, your observer and his wife were invited to visit the Horner home after the game. There had been some talk of a families golf game in the spring because ye scribe's better half shoots a fair game, and ye scribe talks a positively great game.

"Off-the-Record Stuff."

So that was the apart-from-hockey way in which I was given the privilege of really getting to know the National Hockey League's "bad man." And, acthally, it's off-the-record stuff—the sort of thing one isn't supposed to write about. However, there has been so much "bad man" stuff written about Horner, maybe it's only fair that somebody should break the ice and paint the other side of the picture.

The Saturday night on which we were to visit the Horner home after the hockey game was the night of Montreal Maroons' visit to Maple Leaf Gardens, and you will recall that it was also the night of the big battle on the ice with Horner, Conachers, n'everybody slinging fists.

The first tip-off came when we met "Red" near the dressing-room after he had changed into street clothes. Nary a cop was having to hold him back from tearing up and down the Gardens' halls in search of Maroons—instead, he was with his wife and his mother who were receiving exactly 100 per cent. of his attention.

After "Red" had stopped often to autograph programs and scraps of paper for youngsters, we reached the door of the sports goods store in the Gardens.

Turns To Golf.

"Please, come in here," said "Red." I want to ask the opinion of you folks about something."

A clerk handed "Red" a big box containing three matched golf clubs—wooden clubs—and presto, the "bad man" of the N.H.L. was transported to another sphere of sport. And he begged his mother's pardon for keeping her waiting while this business was being transacted.

On the way home "Red" quickly proceeded to turn the talk away from hockey . . . he didn't want his wife and mother to rehash that game. . . . It was over with and was to be forgotten. But his mother was still a little nervous—and "Red" proceeded to give an exhibition of very careful driving in the heavy traffic, to make sure she would not be worried further before arriving at her home.

I had really begun to size up "Bad Man" Horner when I saw his solicitude for his mother.

The Real Family Man

Right after we had doffed our coats in the hall of "Red's" home, he excused himself to pay a visit upstairs to the room occupied by little Misses Sybil Suzanne and Judith Ann, aged five and four years. Then the home-coming wakened very little Miss Patricia, aged four months—and the N.H.L.'s "bad man" promptly went into high gear as a real family man.

Only about three-quarters of an hour before that "Red" was manhandling 200-pounds on the ice—but you should have seen the tender and delicate manner in which he handled that 18-pound baby!

And in the living-room while assisting his gracious young wife at the coffee table, "Red" was the personification of hospitality. He wanted to talk about anything else than hockey and penalties and resultant publicity. If hockey was discussed at brief intervals, "Red" was the most charitable in all his views . . . held no grudge against those with whom he had scrapped that night . . . and had no words of condemnation for the referees, who so persistently thumb him toward the penalty bench whether he deserves the thumbing or not. He had no alibis and no axes to grind . . . his views were broad and well expressed.

On and Off the Ice

Hard and rough on the ice? Yes! But asking any quarter from others on the ice? No. And, off the ice, one of Canada's cleanest-cut and kindliest young sportsmen and business men.

Certainly not lacking in humor. "Red" gave the writer a hearty laugh and had one himself while telling the following little yarn:

Not long a-o "Red" posed for a photograph that was used to advertise a well-known commercial product. The photographer posed "Red" with his elbows resting on a dining table.

Soon arrived a letter at the Horner home. Enclosed was one of the pictures, clipped from a newspaper, and the following note: "Dear Mrs. Horner: If your big lug of a husband had a couple of plates under his elbows on the table, he'd look a lot better."

Westclox Juniors took undisputed possession of second place in the Ladies' Basketball League standing last night at the Y.W. gym with a 9-2 win over "Y" Quakers. It was a postponed league game from last Friday night. The victors showed an edge last evening to hold a 6-2 lead at halftime and outscore their rivals 3-0 the rest of the way. Play was fast and clean all the way with the "Y" girls making it a battle from start to finish. Audrey Flynn's shooting made the main difference in this tilt, five of the points being racked up by her. J. Crowe got two and P. Davis two. The long basket for the Quakers was tallied by R. Dalliday. Only five personal fouls were called altogether, with the East City crew cashing in on one. The teams:

FATAL CHARGE ACCOUNT

Dog Dies Of Overeating After Years Of Daily Hamburger At Store.

HURON, S.D., March 23 (CP).—Duke, eight-year-old springer spaniel who gained wide mention a year ago as only dog in the United States with a charge account, is dead at the home of his master, F. C. McKenzie. A veterinarian attributed death to plain overeating.

Duke attracted much attention a year ago last January when it became known that every afternoon he entered a grocery store and received a portion of hamburger which was charged to his account. The bill was paid monthly.

CURLING

By HERB MARTIN

On ice that was fit for anything but good curling the largest "two-bit" bonspiel of the season took place Monday night.

The boys came to curl—and curl they would—and did. . . some of the ices had a little pebble on them and some water. . . other ices no pebble and lots of water.

It was no place for anyone with a weak back. . . only the fittest survived.

And the best part of it all, they paid their shilling without a murmur. . . in fact glad to do it. . . Some of them were so afraid we would overlook them that they wanted to pay before the fun started.

It was a good finish to a season filled with lots of fine curling. . . Some one remarked, that the 1936-37 season ended in a blaze of glory . . . We think it ended up in a pool of water.

Winners

First prize: D. Miller, E. Sackville, V. Currie, R. Best; each a ham.

Second prize: M. Wells, W. Fisher, T. Hetherman, O. McGill; each a pair of bath towels.

Third prize: J. Pirie, W. Fletcher, Dr. Green, W. Pratten; each package of 50 cigarettes.

Redmen Upset Southern Ontario Junior Dope In First Of Playdowns

DOMINIONS WIN 3-0

North Battleford Ousts Edmonton 15-3—Saskatoon Juniors Beat Edmonton Rangers 5-1

TORONTO, March 23— (CP) — Following a night of the winter's wierdest amateur hockey happenings the smoke cleared a little today and revealed a possibility of two Canadian championships for Saskatchewan. Represented by North Battleford and Saskatoon in senior and junior ranks, the western province is setting a remarkable record in playdowns.

North Battleford's Beavers gained country-wide attention weeks ago. Now they're in western finals after drubbing Edmonton Dominions 4-2 and 15-3. But it's only recently Saskatoon's junior Wesleys have attained prominence, reaching western semi-finals after setting down Edmonton Rangers in two straight games.

Most imposing of last night's results was North Battleford's 12-goal verdict over Edmonton. Other surprises, however, included the size of Wesleys' margin over Rangers, 5-1, Copper Cliff's 5-2 upset of Toronto St. Michael's College in junior play and Toronto Dominions' 3-0 win over Toronto Goodyears among the seniors.

Perth Fights Hard.

Perth gave Ottawa Rideaus a terrific fight before bowing out in Ottawa and District junior finals, forcing a 6-6 tie in last night's game and dropping the total-goals round 8-6. The only score that didn't create much shock was Winnipeg Monarchs' 6-1 decision achieved against St. Boniface in the first of Manitoba semi-finals.

The Thundering North Battleford squad will play Fort William in Allan Cup semi-finals and the winners opposition in finals there will be Sudbury Tigers, Toronto Dominions, Hull Volants, Moncton Marcons or Quebec Aces, all still in the eastern fight.

Jack Shillington starred for Beavers last night, getting five goals, while George Allen followed with three. North Battleford scored four times in the first period, five in the second and six in the third.

Only group of the Ontario Hockey Association's Senior A classification, the Toronto and York mercantile league did not finish until last night when Dominions eliminated Goodyears, league leaders during the regular schedule. Coached by Happy Day, Dominions include on their lineup Roy Conacher and Jim Primeau, brothers of men who have made names in professional ranks. They will face Sudbury in the northern city tomorrow.

Maroons, Volants Meet.

Moncton Maroons and Hull Volants will continue their best-of-three round at Ottawa to-night and Hull, winner by 3-2 in the opener, can earn the right to play Quebec Aces in Eastern semi-finals by taking this game. Whoever emerges from among Moncton, Hull and Quebec will play the Sudbury-Toronto victor for the right to journey west.

Saskatoon's good junior unit scored four times in the final period to oust Edmonton. But Abel, who got all Wesley's goals in their 6-0 triumph Saturday, got two last night.

Southern Ontario fans were stunned by what Copper Cliff did to St. Mike's. The Irish had just finished winning the Ontario Hockey Association title, scoring 28 times in their five-game final with Stratford, before they journeyed north. They led 2-1 at the end of the second period and seemed headed for victory when Red Hamill spurred Redmen to life. He tallied two quick quick goals and Zuke and Webster bagged two more. The second game of the best-of-three round will be played at Toronto tomorrow.

After winning 3-2 in Perth, Ottawa juniors were expected to step through the second game with ease at home. Perth soon changed that idea by scoring three times in the first period and going ahead on the round. Rideaus outscored their rivals 4-1 in the second, though, and each counted twice in the last chapter.

Rideaus Meet St. Pats.

Rideaus will entertain Amherst St. Pats, Maritime champions, in a round which starts at the Capital to-morrow night. The winner will face Montreal Victorias for the right to play the St. Mike's-Copper Cliff survivor in Eastern semi-finals.

Winnipeg Monarchs became pronounced favorites to enter Western junior semi-finals against Port Arthur by drubbing St. Boniface. And if Monarchs go by the lakehead city they will play the winner of the Trail-Saskatoon series for the right to travel East for Memorial Cup finals.

Allan Cup Survivors

(By the Canadian Press).

When Toronto Goodyears and Edmonton Dominions slipped out last night, the number of teams in the fight for the Canadian senior hockey title was reduced to seven. The Allan Cup field, made up of five clubs in the east and two in the west, follows:

East.

N.B.—Moncton; Quebec-Hull Volants and Quebec Aces.

Ontario—Toronto Dominions and Sudbury Tigers.

West.

Ontario—Fort William.

Saskatchewan—North Battleford.

OXFORD'S CREW CONFIDENT JINX IS ALMOST DONE

Superior Brawn, Experience Expected To Snap Run Of Thirteen Losses

THE 89TH RACE

PUTNEY-ON-THAMES, March 23 (A.P.). — Superior in brawn and experience a veteran Oxford eight will attempt to snap Cambridge's string of 13 straight victories in the annual boat race between the two universities over the winding Thames course here to-morrow.

Despite the face the polished Cambridge crew has been made a 9 to 1 favorite in the betting, supporters of the Dark Blue are confident the powerful Oxford boat will win the 89th race between the two universities.

Trial rows indicate the two eights are ready for one of the best races the historic event has ever produced. Oxford has broken two records on the Thames and equalled a third. Early in the month the boat clipped 45 seconds from a mark that has stood for 40 years. The Dark Blue has done 22.36 for the 4 mile 300 yard course in training with A. B. Hodgson (Oriel), stroke, keeping the beat between 28 to 35 strokes a minute.

Cambridge will not row over the course, which extends from Putney Bridge to Mortlake, before the race, but the Light Blue with R. J. L. Perfitt (Trinity Hall), at stroke, has been consistently fast over a three-mile course.

Five veterans in the Oxford boat and a much heavier crew have encouraged Oxonians, but the only time both eights were on the river simultaneously the Cambridge boat was much the smoother.

In the 88 races which have been rowed since the first brush in 1829, Cambridge has 47 victories and Oxford 40. In 1877 a dramatic race ended in a dea dheat. The course record was set by Cambridge in 1934 at 18.08.

Placed Second

According to word received by her parents, 16-year-old Kathleen Hughes-Hallett placed second in the ladies' Scotch fencing championships held at Edinburgh, Scotland. The title was won by Miss M. E. Angus of London, England, who defeated Miss Hughes-Hallett in the finals in scoring five hits against her. Miss Hughes-Hallett, ABOVE, was a representative for Canada on the 1936 Olympic fencing team.

ATHLETICS GOOD SAYS CONNIE MACK

Not Predicting a Pennant But Claims They Won't Be In Cellar

MEXICO CITY, March 23 (AP) — Connie Mack heads back to the United States this week with another charge of diamond dynamite, prepared a la Mexicana, in his pocket.

While predicting no pennant nor even first division berth for the 1937 Philadelphia Athletics—he likes New York Yankees and Detroit Tigers in the race—the 74-year-old manager, beginning his 54th year in the game, nevertheless is enthused over his young club.

"We've come along fast here lately," said Mack, "and we'll be an improved—greatly improved—team over 1936 (when the A's occupied the cellar berth).

"We have as good an outfield as there is in the league. Our catching will be first-rate. This crop of young pitchers we've got together has some of the finest prospects in it I've ever seen."

APPS ACCLAIMED ACE OF ROOKIES IN '36-'37 SEASON

Is Awarded Calder Trophy With Gord. Drillon As Runner-up

TOP SEVEN CHOSEN

By Elmer Dolmage
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, March 23 (C.P.). — Conny Smythe and Frank Selke, with enough ivory in their Ontario backyard to stock at least a whole minor league, pulled in the choicest hockey rookies of this season. No other National League hunters found the pickings nearly as good in a year when the crop was bumper.

Best rookie of the season and first winner of the Calder Trophy is Sylvanus Apps, Toronto centre from Paris, Ont. Runner-up to Apps in the annual Canadian Press poll of hockey writers is Gordon Drillon of the Leafs. From Moncton, N.B., Drillon came under scrutiny by Smythe and Selke while playing as an amateur here.

Among the Top seven named by the newspaper selectors are two other Toronto players—Defenceman Jimmy Fowler and Goaltender Walter (Turk) Broda. Fowler is a Toronto boy and Broda is from Brandon, Man.

Other ace rookies—Ray Getliffe of Boston Bruins, Neil Colville of New York Rangers, and George Brown of Montreal Canadiens—lined up in that order behind Apps and Drillon. Somehow the Leaf board of strategy missed Getliffe, who comes from London, Ont.

Freshman Sensation.

But in Apps the Leafs signed the year's greatest young player. An amateur with Hamilton Tigers in the Ontario Hockey Association last season, an Olympic pole vaulter in Berlin in the summer, Apps was the Freshman sensation of the campaign.

He all but won the scoring championship in his first try, finishing one point behind Sweeney Schriner of New York Americans. He and Drillon and Buster Jackson formed Toronto's most potent forward line, a division second only to the Aurie-Datz-Lewis line of Detroit in points getting.

The Paris centre will hold the new trophy offered by President Frank Calder of the N.H.L. for one year. A miniature of the cup will be his for keeps.

Writers who participated in the poll ranked three players and three points were given for a first selection, two for second, and one for third. Out of a possible 84 points Apps had 70. Other totals were: Drillon 28, Getliffe 17, Neil Colville 16, Brown 13, Broda 8, Fowler 8.

"THEODORA GOES WILD."

It was just about enough to make any red-blooded young person go wild, the life that Theodora Lord led in Lynneville, where two maiden aunts and the village gossips prescribed an existence that included singing in the village choir and serving refreshments for the weekly meetings of the Literary Society. So she rationalized herself in a book and that's what started all the trouble. When she went to New York to interview her publisher, she met an erratic young man who had a grandiose family, went in for a profession by way of the illustrating channel, and thought he was a law unto himself.

Theodora, by the way, is the beautiful Irene Dunn, who sings charming ly once or twice in the picture and gives a noble presentation of a young woman whose liberation goes to her head, in a manner of speaking. What she does to the governor, and the unhappy publisher whom she lures on a wild expedition to deposit him later at the feet of his wife, in a perfectly "sane" condition, what she does to the feelings of the smart young man (Melvyn Douglas) and to the ideas of Lynnville generally, is a caution. You have to see them to appreciate the funny episodes that fill the reels of "Theodora Goes Wild," which is a pseudo-farcical comedy with plenty of excitement and fun in its unrolling.

This is a well-rounded program that brings in a delightful little "Novelty Shop" colored cartoon, and a community sing-song led by Wendell Hall, who sings his own composition, the well-known "Ain't Cha' in' to Rain No Mo'" ditty.—C.L.M.

MARMORA GIRLS TO PLAY HAMILTON

Four Teams Will Compete In Secondary Schools Hockey Tournament

LONDON, Ont., March 23 (CP)—Four teams will compete in the annual Canadian Secondary Schools hockey tournament to be held here Friday and Saturday nights. The tournament is sponsored by the University of Western Ontario Athletic Association.

Five teams qualified but J. H. Crocker and N. C. Hart of Western, officials in charge, pointed out a 5-team tournament would be unsatisfactory and it was agreed to reduce the number of contesting teams to four.

Marmora, winner in the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association, has been ordered to play Hamilton, winner in the Hamilton district, in a sudden-death game at Toronto this week. The winner of the playoff game will qualify for the tourney.

North Bay, Ottawa Technical School, London Central Collegiate and Canadian Collegiate Hamilton game will compete here. The draw will be made Friday afternoon.

Two games will be played Friday, the winners meeting in finals Saturday. The defeated teams on Friday will playoff Saturday night in a consolation game.

NORMANDIE FLIES THE BLUE PENNANT

French Liner Claims Average Of 30.99 To Queen Mary's 30.63 On East Crossing

LE HAVRE, France, March 23 (A.P.)—The French liner Normandie steamed into Le Havre today flying the blue riband, symbolic of east-bound transatlantic speed supremacy.

The riband, stowed in a locker since the Cunard liner Queen Mary took the record last August, was unfurled on the stern mast as the Normandie moved slowly into port while all the boats in the harbor sent up a din with sirens and whistles.

Commander Pierre Thireux reported he had made a 2,970-mile passage between Ambrose Light, New York, and Bishop's Rock, off the southwestern tip of England, at an average speed of 30.99 knots, completing the trip in four days, six minutes and 23 seconds.

The Queen Mary's west-east record was for a 2,939 mile passage between Ambrose Light and Bishop's Rock. Three days, 23 hours and 57 minutes at an average speed of 30.63 knots.

The French claim to honors is based on average speeds.

More tourists visited Jamaica during the winter than in recent seasons.

CHAPTER 42

JOEL GAME in quietly about half past 2. He left his stick and top hat in the foyer and, seeing a light in the living room under the closed door, whistled. There was no answer and, thinking that Janet had gone off to bed without turning out the light, he went in boldly—then hesitated, embarrassed and angry on the threshold of the room.

"Oh, sorry!" he said in a tone that said plainly that he had no idea his wife was entertaining but that he respected it and would never have broken in on them unannounced.

That tone made both Janet and Russell Bede embarrassed as neither of them would have been under any other circumstances.

Joel didn't notice their embarrassment; he only knew that he had seen their two brown heads outlined in the radiance of the table lamp at their backs as they sat on the big lounge; knew that he had seen them draw apart.

"It's all right," Janet said easily without betraying that she was angry with him for making her feel guilty when there was nothing to feel guilty about.

"Come in, darling. I've been trying to persuade Russ to have something to eat. Suppose I make some coffee?"

"Not for me, thanks," Joel answered and politely stifled a yawn. "I've got to get up early in the morning. I'm going to see some polo practice."

"I'd better be running along," Russell said and got up. "If you think that whole thing has been ironed out, Janet, I'll leave it in your hands."

Joel wanted very much to know what Russell was leaving in Janet's hands but he maintained an aloof silence. Joel never took Janet's job seriously and it didn't occur to him in that uncomfortable moment that Russell could be talking about work.

Damn the fellow! He had something to offer a woman and Joel knew that he was in love with his wife. He had background, an assured present and a secure future to give Janet whereas, he . . .

Joel thought of that and said curtly, "Good night, old man. Night, Janet."

"Good night, darling, I'll be along in a minute."

She saw Russell to the door and lingered for a few minutes. Russell was leaving for a trip to Canada and she had been working out some promotion booklets for him to take with him as well as an advertising plan which one of his New York stores was anxious to get out.

They had returned early to discuss the final details since this was the last opportunity they would have to do so.

Janet, closing the door at Russell's back, sighed a little and wondered what Joel was going to say now. It didn't occur to her to wonder where Joel had been.

Once she would have hastened back to him to tell him that she had been glad to see him, that Russell's being there alone with her at that hour had been simply because they had business to talk over.

Once she would have been unable to think of what Russell was saying to her during all those hours after the theater was out and Joel was not with her. Once she would have been tortured by the jealous fears she could not control. Her attention would have been for the man she was with but a thousand questions would have tripped over each other in her mind. What woman was Joel with? What was she saying? What was Joel saying to her? Did that woman have some allure that would take him from Janet?

Oh, she had known them all, but repetition had dulled the edge of the mental pains she had suffered. Time had stilled a sharper fear and lessened the consciousness of anything being wrong between them.

There was something wrong between them, for the bond of companionship that is closely knit only when two people share everything, was unravelling so slowly, so very slowly that it did not seem dangerous to them.

Janet would have been horrified to find that it was she and not Joel who was making that gulf wider. Joel had his new friends and his new admirers but he had them in quantities.

Janet had new friends but she also had a constant companion.

She had Russell Bede and because she was not in love with him or, believed that she was not falling in love with him, she would have been startled out of her calm to realize what import the rest of the world might put on that friendship and companionship.

Russell fitted neatly into her scheme of things. And because he fit so neatly, he tightened up the edges of her life. It began with their liking for each other, their sharing the same likes and dislikes. It flourished on their mutual business interest.

Janet devoted a great deal of her time to her job albeit she did not have office hours from 9 to 5. Her intelligent interest had developed into and intelligent approach and the result of her work was tremendously important to Russell. He had come to the point where he consulted her about merchandising problems beyond the sphere in which she operated and often leaned on her for the right answer to them.

Russell was beginning to make Janet feel important. Russell was to bind himself to her in many ways that she would have recognized as danger signals had she seen them happening to another woman.

It was Russell and not Joel who had insisted that she pack her bags and go off to Atlantic City to recuperate from a gripe cold. Joel [illegible] eating little and not recovering from the ravages of her illness be it ever so brief.

Masterfully, Russell had ordered her tickets, made reservations for her and driven her to the train in his car on a matinee day.

It was Russell who volunteered to take over the perplexing money matters that Janet had to take care of for both herself and Joel when there were deposits and withdrawals to straighten out when they transferred their account from Beverly Hills to New York.

It was Russell who thought that Janet ought to get more sunshine and who took her for long walks in the winter sunshine. It was Russell who saw that she blinked over her books and who suggested having her see about getting reading glasses.

Janet slipped into the convenient acceptance of Russell's care and thoughtfulness. And doing it, she was blind, utterly blind, to what was happening to Joel.

She who had felt that her heart beat with the cadence of Joel's!

If she had wanted to know what Joel was doing, whom he was with and where he was, she had only to ask him. Joel hadn't a secret from his wife. But Janet never asked him.

In the early days after her first trip east, fear had bound her; she had been afraid that it would have annoyed Joel to have her ask questions. She said then that she would never let him experience the possessiveness in her that he had once told her emphatically he could never stand.

Later she had asked no questions because she was tired. She was weary but unprotesting. She accepted the pattern of a life that she had not wanted because it was obviously the only one that she could have. She was uncomplaining always. And most of the time she was quite content, if not happy.

She would have screamed and torn her hair and then hit the heights of happiness had she known that Joel wanted her as she had once been. Had she asked him just one jealous little question!

But Joel didn't do it. He let the hurt inside him spread out in a great mushroom in his mind until it began to press on him and eventually have effects far greater than any that Janet could have made with any conscious effort.

FIGHT MARKS TIME

Union Delegates on Wage Issue Hold Conference.

MONTREAL, March 23 (CP). — Canadian railway labor's fight for a collective raise of 10 per cent. was suspended temporarily Monday after the re-opening of negotiations between the men and the railroads.

For the day, the general conference committee of the railway unions postponed consideration of wage questions while the half-hundred delegates of 117,000 workers split into committees for discussion of preliminaries to the yearly meetings of their 18 organizations.

To call attention to the danger of the road, for which they long have been demanding a speed limit, a procession of 250 fathers, mothers and children crossed the thoroughfare at Shepherd's Bush, England, again and again.

Bedtime Story

By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND JACKIE'S TROUBLE

With a clitter, a clatter, some bumps and some thumps, Uncle Wiggily hopped very fast with his garden tools over his shoulder. He had started out the very first day after spring to make a garden and then, all of a sudden, heard a voice telling him to stop.

"Will those Bad Chaps never let me alone," Uncle Wiggily asked himself in a whisper. "How they bother me! And I wanted to be left alone to make my garden!"

He hopped faster and the spade, the rake and the grubbing hoe made loud noises. Uncle Wiggily again heard the voice calling:

"Wait! Stop! Please!"

"Oh, ho!" said Uncle Wiggily to himself, all of a sudden. "That can't be a Bad Chap. They are never impolite as to say 'please.' It may be this is a friend of mine who wants to go gardening with me. I had best turn around and look before hopping any more."

Only One Puppy

So, doing what he might have done in the first place and so saved himself many fast hops, Uncle Wiggily stopped and looked behind him. He saw, hurrying toward him, Jackie Bow Wow, the puppy dog boy. There was another puppy dog boy named Peetie, but he wasn't there just then.

"Oh, Uncle Wiggily! Wait, please!" barked Jackie.

"I am waiting," said Mr. Longears. "Yes, but you tried to run away from me," whined Jackie.

"I wasn't exactly running away from you, Jackie," said Mr. Longears, with a laugh, "But I thought, when you called to me, you were one of the Bad Chaps. Naturally I ran away."

"Oh, of course. I didn't know that," and Jackie also laughed.

"Where are you going, Jackie?" asked the rabbit gentleman as the two walked on together.

"I'm going hunting," said Jackie. "Why, this isn't the hunting season," spoke Mr. Longears. "And, besides, you never go hunting, unless it's for fun. Even then you need at least a popgun that shoots corks. Hunting? Don't be silly, Jackie."

"But I am going hunting, Uncle Wiggily," said the little puppy chap. "That is I shall go if you will lend me the grubbing hoe."

"Take my grubbing hoe that I need for my garden?" asked Mr. Longears. "How can you hunt with a grubbing hoe, Jackie? It is made for digging out roots and stumps and other things."

Almost a Secret

"That's what I want it for—another thing," said Jackie.

"Oh, if it's a secret don't tell me, Jackie," said Uncle Wiggily, sort of hurt like and sensitive.

"It isn't exactly a secret," Jackie said. "But there's no use telling you why I want your grubbing hoe to go hunting with until I see if I am going to have any luck. You won't need the hoe right away will you, Uncle Wiggily?"

"No," said Mr. Longears. "You may take it. I'll just spade up the soft part of my garden and rake that smooth. You may take the grubbing hoe." So he gave it to the little puppy dog boy and Jackie ran off one way and Uncle Wiggily hopped the other way. The rabbit gentleman had dug a little while in his garden, when, all of a sudden, from over the hill he heard Jackie calling:

"Help! Help! I'm in trouble! Help me, Uncle Wiggily!"

"Of course I'll help you!" shouted Mr. Longears.

And if the salt shaker will sprinkle some powdered sugar on the spinach to make it taste like chocolate cake I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and Peetie's fun.

FOUR LADIES TIE FOR HIGHEST SCORE

Jolly St. Patrick's Party Is Held At Home Of Mr. And Mrs. Sisson

LIFFORD LINE, March 23—A jolly St. Patrick's Day party was held on Thursday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Sisson, Eighth Line of Manvers. Thirty guests were present, eight tables being occupied for a series of twelve games of progressive euchre. At the conclusion of the games the scores were called by Miss Isobel Sisson and it was learned that four names, Mrs. Harvey Gray, Mrs. Fred Gray, Mrs. Earnest Beer and Mrs. Page were tied for high score. Mrs. H. Gray won the draw and was presented with a caling china sugar and cream set.

Mr. Earl Lathangue was the winner of high score for the men and was presented with a handsome pack of cards. At the close of this part of the entertainment a very appetizing St. Patrick's luncheon was served by the hostess' family. A very attractive color scheme in green and white was carried out in various ways. Score cards in white boasted dainty miniature green shamrocks. Luncheon clothes in white were prettily decorated with larger shamrocks in green. Novel decorations in green topped dainty edibles of many varieties.

The winners for this group of contests were Mrs. Fred Gray and Thomas Staples, who secured the total number of correct answers. The former was presented with a beautiful framed dual-toned Irish Scene, while the latter received a deck of cards as reward.

COUNT DE CHAMBRUN

Arrested by Paris gendarmes after she had shot and seriously wounded Count Charles de Chambrun, a hereditary citizen of United States and former French ambassador to Rome, Madeleine de Fontange, beautiful French journalist, declared she shot the diplomat because he betrayed confidence she had imposed in him, thereby causing her to lose the love of a highly placed Italian statesman. French and British newspapers linked the name of Premier Benito Mussolini to the triangle. Mme. Fontanges reportedly had many pictures of the Italian dictator in her studio. She twice interviewed Il Duce in 1936. Rome denied that Mussolini was involved.

CHINESE VICTIMS

Blast Occurs While Ship On South Pacific Run In Tahitian Island Group

HONOLULU, March 24 (AP). — Battling flames far out in the Pacific, the motorship Fijian reported today the fire was brought under control after most of the crew had taken to life-boats.

Meagre radio messages received by the coast guard here indicated a gasoline explosion in the forward hold seriously injured two Chinese of her crew of thirty and caused most of those aboard to take to life-boats temporarily while a skeleton crew fought flames. It was believed the boat was five miles south of Aurh Island, in the Tahitian group, 2,000 miles southwest of Honolulu.

First word relayed by the British freighter Janeta through the Pago Pago naval radio station said only that the crew had taken to small boats after an explosion last night.

Early today the Fijian wirelessed: "Fire now under control. Two Chinese badly injured. Gasoline explosion in fore hold."

IL DUCE ATTACKS ANGLICAN HEADS

Branda Criticism Of Ethiopian Massacre As Hysterical Hypocritical Oratory

ROME, March 24—(CP)—Premier Mussolini, acclaimed by his black-shirted followers on the 15th anniversary of the Fascist party's founding, hurled a blistering attack at English Church leaders yesterday.

Standing on a balcony of the Palazzo Venezia, Mussolini told a Fascist throng criticism by Anglican churchmen of the Italian suppression of an Ethiopian outbreak was "hysterical, hypocritical oratory."

(The Archbishops of Canterbury and York recently attacked what they called the "general massacre" in Ethiopia after Ethiopians had tried unsuccessfully to kill Marshal Rodolfo Grabiani, Italian viceroy).

The remarks of the British churchmen, he said, indicated they were eager to find "motes" in others' eyes while not noticing the "beams" in their own.

Asserting the Fascist party would raise the nation if Italy should be "wrong" again or should forget past "wrongs," the premier told the blackshirts:

"Remember and to prepare yourselves; that is the order of the day."

One shell fell near a Kiosk in the central plaza, killing seven persons and wounding 30, many of them women and children, Febus said. The attacking ship lay off Benfbasin, eight miles south of Castellon.

Air attacks predominated in the Guadalajara and Jarama River lines, with General Francisco Franco's insurgents entrenching to withstand Government sieze near Almadrones, 34 miles northeast of the capital in Guadalajara Province.

Deputy Minister Congratulates City Trust

Provincial Audit Is Not Found Necessary

H.L. Cummings Writes

Improper To Transfer Accumulated Surplus To City Treasury

USES ARE RESTRICTED

Management Of Sinking Fund Been Skillful And Excellent

For their "excellent and skillful" management of Peterborough's sinking fund, the City Trust Commission receives the congratulations of Herbert L. Cummings, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, in a letter to Alderman G. N. Gordon, K.C., affirming that he has found no necessity for a provincial audit of the Commission's accounts.

Copies of Mr. Cummings' letter have been received by Alderman Gordon, Mayor Macdonald, and the members of the Commission.

The Commissioners are: Vincent Eastwood, chairman, G. A. Gillespie, A. A. McIntyre, W. R. Morris, E. A. Peck, K.C.

The city's sinking fund is the money provided by the council for the purpose of retiring Peterborough's debentures when they mature. It is administered by the City Trust Commission according to authority invested by the Legislature of Ontario.

A month ago Alderman Gordon contended that the surplus earnings of the Commission should be transferred to the city treasurer at least in the amount equivalent to two or three mills as a means of reducing the 1937 tax rate.

Commission Unanimous

The Commission's unanimous answer to that proposed demand asserted that their duties were clearly set forth in the Act which authorized their appointment; that the monies entrusted to them were for the benefit of the city's bond-holders, the people had lent the city money by purchasing Peterborough debentures; and finally that the uncertain future of the money market might create a situation in which the Commission would need its surplus to meet debenture payments.

In addition to his suggestion that City Trust funds should be converted to the benefit of the city treasury, Alderman Gordon charged that the Commission was trading in bonds, and he wrote the Hon. David A. Croll asking for a special audit of the Commission's transactions and records.

The correspondence from Mr. Cummings is in two letters, one of

UNION RECOGNIZED

OSHAWA, Ont., March 24 (CP)—Strike of Coulter Manufacturing Company employees ended today when they voted 89 to 1 to accept the company's terms and go back to work. Major concession for the men is a wage increase of 10 cents an hour.

Women employees will receive an increase of seven cents an hour, while wage earners in the higher brackets will receive a five-cent pay hoist. The company also agrees to recognize the right of the local branch of United Automobile Workers' Union to bargain collectively for its members. The night shift, fired in a body last week, will be taken back. The Steward system will be inaugurated.

Agreement was reached at an overnight conference between company officials and Hugh Thompson, C.I.O. spokesman for the strikers. The meeting was arranged by Louis Fine, inspector under the Ontario Industrial Standards Act.

The Coulter Company manufactures automobile accessories for General Motors and the strike was looked upon as an outgrowth of the automotive disputes in the United States. Behind the men in their demands for higher wages and collective bargaining stood the John L. Lewis committee for industrial organization.

U.S. "Strip Tease" May Be Art But It's Too Hot For England

Dancer, After Preview Dictum By Producer, Can't See Why He's Mad

SAYS SHE WEARS BEADS

LONDON, March 24—(AP)—The American "Strip Tease" may be art—but "it's too hot for England." That's the dictum of George Black, English producer, after a preview of Diane Raze doing her Broadway specialty.

Diane was imported direct from Manhattan for a new show to open Monday—but the argument over "Strip Teasing" started before she landed in England.

Black arranged a preview of the dancer's specialty in private audience and to the dragging cadence of a blues number Diane took off her clothing bit by bit, while Black's eyes widened—bit by bit.

Black then pronounced his sentence: "It may be art—but it's too hot for England."

Diane's backers appealed to the Lord Chamberlain's office, the department which censors plays.

The officials there were reported as saying:

"The Lord Chamberlain examines the script of a play, not the strip."

Diane, in a bewildered voice, pleaded:

"I don't see what they're mad about. I wear beads, don't I."

TROUSERS FOR WOMEN

Artist Says Idea Past Fad Stage.

HOLLYWOOD, March 24 (CP)—Trousers for women long ago passed the fad stage in the movie colony, but now they have the official blessing of a noted artist and designer, Russell Patterson, New York.

"Men used to wear skirts, too," Patterson said. "The time is near at hand when skirts for women will seem as outlandish as they would now for men."

He predicts women soon will wear trousers for every phase of life, formal and informal. He said they will be adopted by business women, and presently they will be as correct for evening wear in public as they are now for morning wear in private.

Druggist Disguised As "Bum" Collects Dimes From His Friends

DISGUISED by a three-week's growth of beard, dark glasses and a pulled-down slouch hat, a local business man Tuesday created considerable consternation among a number of his downtown friends. His practical joke resulted in several times "mooched" from unsuspecting acquaintances, a call for the police, a door locked in his face and much amusement all around.

This prominent citizen is just out after being laid up three weeks with the flu. Deciding to come downtown for a barber shop to have his 3-days growth polished off, he donned a slouch hat and colored glasses with the intent of fooling some friends. He shuffled into Lynch's drug store and asked for rubbing alcohol. John Lynch, a girl clerk and a traveller were startled but later admitted he looked too big and tough to tackle. When identified, they all joined in the laughter.

Several in Lewis' barber shop across the way watched curiously and passers-by turned to stare at the big hunched-up "bum" with the dark glasses and unkempt beard between a collar turned up and a hat pulled down. The object of their interest stepped Albert Stratton and mumbled a request for a dime. He was accommodated before making himself known and repeated the performance in the Steinkraus' shop nearby. He then ambled in and fooled Postmaster Charles Lacheur and his staff amid much merriment. He proceed next to Dr. Yelland's office but the secretary-nurse spotted him first and locked the door before phoning for the police. Unaware of the police call, the "transient" had left the vicinity before the law could put its clutches upon him—and he finally made a belated visit to a barber.

"This is certainly a generous town as far as handouts to bums go, as I personally found out," Mr. Bond chuckled today. Yes, the bearded jokester was J. P. Bond, downtown druggist.

FATHER, VERGE OF STROKE

STRATFORD, Ont., March 24 — (CP)—Action may be taken against two Provincial Police constables by Archibald L. McDonald, 63, well-to-do Brussels drover and his son, Ian, 28, mistaken yesterday for robbers and chased to a gunfire halt.

"We have instructed our solicitor Elmer Bell of Brussels and Seaforth, to examine the law and the facts and to advise immediately on proceedings against the Provincial Police for assault and battery, shooting with intent to do bodily harm, and false arrest," said Ian McDonald, graduate in commerce of the University of Toronto.

"We are awaiting the outcome in the case of my father who collapsed as a result of the experience. He was put to bed with a blood pressure of 245, momentarily threatening a paralytic stroke. For that we certainly will take civil damages," said the son.

Ian McDonald said they had shipped a car of 80 pigs and because of exchange difficulties had cashed a cheque for $956 in Stratford to take back to Brussels. He had the money in an envelope in a coat pocket and was accompanied by his

Small Girl Is Rescued From Trent Canal

Bud Runions Braves Ice-Cold Water And Swims 20 Feet To Save Youngster

WAS FULLY DRESSED

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, March 24. — Bud Runions was the hero of what nearly proved to be the season first drowning tragedy in the Trent Canal in Campbellford at 4.30 on Tuesday afternoon when he rescued four-year-old Colleene Gladstone after she had slipped into the water.

Playing on a wire fence which skirts the canal at the rear of the Hendy residence on Front street the child fell into twelve feet of water and was quickly carried out into the swift current. Her playmate, Janet Stuart, four, gave the alarm, walking to the front of the house where she rapped on the door to tell Mrs. Gladstone who with her husband Professor R. Gladstone, has been staying in town for the past few days, that Colleene was in the water.

Rushing to the water's edge and seeing her daughter 10 feet from shore, Mrs. Gladstone called for help and was heard by Bud Runions who with several other boys was walking up the street.

Jumps Into Canal.

Young Runions ran to the rear of the Stuart residence some 40 feet below the spot where the child had fallen into the water. Waiting only to remove his shoes and a heavy sweater which he was wearing Bud jumped into the water and reached the girl just as the water had begun to soak through her heavy clothes which had already caused her to sink. Keeping her afloat for near four minutes.

Although an excellent swimmer, having been employed as a life saver at the summer swimming pool operated by the Hollywood Theatre it was all he could do to reach the well after swimming 20 feet out in the cold water pulling the girl back to safety.

Bud, who is twenty years old and looking for a job sat huddled beside a stove in a near-by garage waiting for a chum to get him some dry clothes while little Colleene was recovering from her experience with the aid of stimulants prescribed by Dr. Stuart.

PLANT IS IDLE STRIKE WIDENS CARPET WORKS

Negotiations With Management Will Be Opened On Thursday

GENERAL STRIKE?

Delegates From Peterborough, Brantford And Guelph Meet In Toronto

Looms are idle and work is at a virtual standstill at the Brinton-Peterborough Carpet Company's plant as the result of a concerted demand on the part of over 200 employees for restoration of pay cuts effected during the depression period.

The strike, one of the most extensive of the city's labor troubles in recent years, comes at a busy period in the company's history and follows on a period during which the plant has been working overtime to cope with orders.

The Examiner learned from a group of striking weavers that a conference has been called for Thursday afternoon in the Trades and Labor Council rooms on George street, to which representatives of all the committees have been summoned.

"There will be no definite action until after the meeting", a striker is quoted. He believed the meeting was for the purpose of opening up negotiations with the plant management.

While the weavers as members of The Canadian Brussel Carpet Weavers Association are the only group of organized workers in the plant, it is learned, other groups are organizing and intend to hold out in their demands for pay increases in the belief the company can well afford to place wages on a pre-depression basis.

Started On Friday.

The trouble started on Friday last with a walk-out of the female employes of the setting department as a protest against the alleged failure of the company to grant promised pay increases. Since then the weavers have cast in their lot, but so far as some of the other departments are concerned, it is thought the workers have been forced to remain idle.

One of the workers of the dye department told a reporter, it was in-

17 SAILORS RESCUED

Lined Rails For 20 Hours While Water Seeped Vessel's Hull.

NEW YORK, March 24.—(AP)—Seventeen men who lined the rails of the Norwegian freighter Bjordi for more than 20 hours while water seeped into the vessel's hull were on their way to Boston today, safe in a United States coast guard cutter. They didn't even get their feet wet.

A heavy sea was running and the Bjordi was down by her head, ready to give up the ghost, when rescue was effected some 400 miles south of Sable Island, due east of Cape Cod.

Committee Consents Investigate Charges Against John Glass

Roebuck Declines To Receive Confidential Evidence On Case From Ellis

Morgan Baker Backs Attorney-General But Is Silenced By Challenge To Stake Seat On It

TORONTO, March 24—(CP)—Ontario Legislature adjourned at noon today with an air of expectancy. Reports, mounting in persistency, said Premier Mitchell Hepburn would announce important changes in the school tax laws today. The Premier kept silence.

"I'll speak on the Henry Bill probably tonight," was his only comment.

The House had a quiet sitting this morning. Estimates and bills went through at a great pace and unless unexpected delays occur prorogation Thursday seemed assured.

Action On Glass Charges.

TORONTO, March 24.—(C P)—Public accounts committee of the legislature will conduct an investigation into the charges levelled against John J. Glass, Liberal member for St. Andrew's, in affidavits read in the legislature by Hon. George S. Henry, a few nights ago.

After a long technical battle the committee decided to investigate the matter on a motion of Arthur Ellis, Conservative member for Ottawa, at a date to be named by the chairman of the committee sometime within the next two weeks.

When the committee convened today Mr. Ellis presented the following resolution:

"That the Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, J. J. Glass, M.P.P.; E. C. Modette, Arnold Smith, Walter and Nina Osborne, be summoned to appear before the public accounts committee on March 25 at 10 a.m. to give evidence relating to items on Page 19 of the Public accounts for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1936, under the heading Liquor Control Board, profits, taxes, licenses, etc., $6,010,509; and to give evidence as to whether or not there has been interference in the administration of the law of the Liquor Control Act and that this committee continue to sit after the prorogation of the House if necessary.

Last Clause Deleted.

When the resolution was presented Hon. Arthur Roebuck assailed the definite date. He was successful with the support of the Liberal members in having it deleted from the resolution.

On the ground the resolution "assumed" there has been interference, Mr. Roebuck was successful in having the committee strike from the resolution the last clause of the resolution in which the word "interference" was used.

During the course of the hearing Mr. Ellis offered to give the Attorney-General "privately and

Oxford Wins First Victory In 14 Starts

Dark Blues' Winning Time Of 22 Mins., 39 Seconds Slowest Since 1877

THREE-LENGTH LEAD

PUTNEY-ON-THAMES, March 24 (C.P. Cable). — After 13 consecutive disappointments, Oxford today broke Cambridge's long series of boat race victories by beating the Light Blues by three lengths in the 91st renewal of the inter-varsity classic first rowed in 1829.

The Oxonians finished with a terrific burst of speed over the final 300 yards after holding their own over the first four miles of the winding course from Putney Bridge to Mortlake. Every member of the heavier Dark Blue eight continued upright after the finish line was crossed, while several members of the Cambridge crew slumped heavily over their oars.

Oxford completed the course in 22 minutes 39 seconds, the slowest time since 1877 when the race resulted in a dead heat in 24 minutes 5½ seconds. Cambridge holds the course record of 18 minutes 3 seconds made in 1934.

The victory brought the number of Oxford triumphs to 41 against 47 for Cambridge. It was the first Oxford victory since 1923 and the second since the Great War. In addition to the 1877 dead heat, both boats sank in 1912 and in 1859 Cam-

TWO TORIES WIN SEATS IN BRITAIN

Retain Farnham In Surrey And Tonbridge In Kent—Labor Runners-up

LONDON, March 24 (CP Cable)—The government retained two seats in parliamentary by-election today.

In the Farnham division of Surrey, Godfrey Nicholson, Conservative, was elected to the House of Commons to succeed Sir Arthur Michael Samuel, now Lord Mancroft, who had held the seat for the Conservatives for nearly 20 years.

Nicholson, a distiller, polled 20,569 votes to 7,792 for Peter Pain, Labor, 2,327 for Linton Thorp, K.C., Independent Conservative, and 194 for Edward Miller, "King's and people's champion." Thorp, formerly Conservative, and Miller, a draper's assistant, lost their deposits.

In the Tonbridge division of Kent, Sir Adrian Baillie, Conservative, was elected to the seat vacated through the death of Lieut.-Colonel H. H. Spender-Clay. He polled 18,893 votes to 9,141 for Harold Smith, Labor, and 8,078 for H. Borlase Matthews, Liberal. In the general election Spender-Clay polled 22,440 votes against 3,496 and 3,408 for Labor and Liberal candidates respectively.

Dynamite Only Way To Wreck Casa Loma Says Sir Henry

Be No Salvage, Man Who Has Seen Two Fortunes Come And Go, Explains

$1,000,000 IN FURNISHINGS

TORONTO, March 24 (CP)—Sir Henry Pellatt, 71-year-old builder of castle-like Casa Loma at a cost of $1,760,000 before the war, said today it would be necessary to blast the building if the city council adopts the suggestion of Controller Fred Hamilton to wreck the structure.

"If they fire it down they would find it a terribly hard job—it is not like any other building where parts could be sold," he said. "Tear it down and there would be nothing left. There is steel within all the stone and brick, there is steel beneath all the floors, and there is a four-foot space between ceilings and floors so workmen could get in to fix lighting and so forth."

Sir Henry has seen two great fortunes come and go. He said he had more than $1,000,000 in furnishings in the fabulous castle-home when he lived there for five years after it was built and entertained the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught, whose aide-de-camp he was for four years.

He had begun collecting the furnishings when he was 21 years old. Three bronze doors leading to the conservatory had been made to order in New York at $5,000 each, he had searched old houses in England and on the continent for the fireplaces and had obtained priceless furniture, chips and paintings.

Henry Says Hepburn Misleading Province; Forced To Withdraw

"Spread Impression Separate Grants Less" — Simpson Admits Increase

REPEAL SHOWDOWN TODAY

Committee On 50-Mile An Hour Speed Limit Gives Its Approval

TORONTO, March 24 (C.P.). — Ontario Legislature members to-day prepared to hear the Government's stand on Conservative demands for repeal of the 1936 school tax law amendments. Mr. Hepburn was not in the House.

Government heads were silent when questioned last night on what Premier Mitchell Hepburn planned as a reply to the Opposition demands. Hon. Dr. L. J. Simpson, Minister of Education, and Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck were asked if they favored the Bill offered by George Henry, Conservative House Leader, for repeal of the amendments. Mr. Hepburn was not in the House.

Leopold Macaulay (Con. York South) questioned Dr. Simpson if he would support the Bill for repeal.

"My opponent is not going to put me on the spot and make me answer a question I don't want," said Dr. Simpson.

Goldwin Elgie (Con. Toronto-Woodbine) queried Mr. Roebuck and was told: "Wouldn't you like to know."

"He doesn't know," said Mr. Henry, nodding at Roebuck.

"It's an impertinent question at the best," retorted Mr. Roebuck.

Both questions came while the House was discussing Education Department estimates. Conservatives had launched a blockade of $3,193,000 estimate for Public and Separate School grants.

Filibuster 11-3 a.m.

Conservatives filibustered from 11 p.m. to nearly 3 a.m. Mr. Henry insisted the education estimate for grants to schools be left over until the debate on the repeal bill was ended. Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon, however, declared there would no adjournment until the education estimates passed and the House remained in session until 3.15 a.m.

On a 47 to 13 division the House upheld the speaker in his demand Mr. Henry withdraw a statement which the Conservative House leader maintained he had not made.

Mr. Henry clashed with Dr. Simpson over grants to separate schools and was finally told there would be an increase this year. Dr. Simpson said the figure was only an estimate as the grants have yet to be finally decided on.

"The prime minister has for two years been deliberately misleading or attempting to mislead the people of Ontario and you have been alt-

ROME PROTEST STIRS BRITISH CABINET MEET

Mussolini Objects To Press Jabs On "Italian Defeat" In Spain

"VOLUNTEERS TO STAY"

Grandi's Stand Seen End Of Neutrality Efforts—May Throw War Open

LONDON, March 24 (CP)—The cabinet was called into session today to discuss a formal protest from the Italian government stating Premier Mussolini's objection to slaps delivered by the British press at the Italian defeat in Spain.

The protest, based on press comments on the Insurgent Spanish army's defeat in Guadalajara province where the Spanish government charged 30,000 Italian troops were fighting, was handed in Rome yesterday to the British ambassador, Sir Cedric Drummond, who forwarded the note to London.

A second difficulty believed to have been discussed by the cabinet was Italy's abrupt refusal before the non-intervention committee even to consider the question of withdrawing volunteers from Spain —the next point in the plan to isolate the civil conflict from the rest of Europe.

Ambassador Dino Grandi was understood to have stated his personal opinion during the meeting that not a single Italian "volunteer" would leave Spain until the war was over.

May Throw War Open

Grandi's declaration "opens the way to direct intervention in Spain," the Daily Express asserted, while the Liberal News-Chronicle considered there was nothing left for the committee to do except abandon its efforts.

"The one hope of the situation is that France and Great Britain should decide jointly upon a firm line of action and should maintain it firmly," the News-Chronicle added.

Hitherto they have allowed themselves to be consistently gulled by successive 'bluffs' of the Fascist powers. But this defiance is so outrageous and so patent that to pretend not to recognize it for what it is, is to capitulate altogether."

The Daily Herald counselled Premier Mussolini to remember that "Grandi is a dangerous master for statesmen."

EXPLOSION SETS THIRTY SAILORS ADRIFT AT SEA

Tahitian Island Five Miles Off But Nearest Ship Is 1,000 Miles

LACKS FUEL FOR RESCUE

HONOLULU, March 24 (AP) — Thirty explosion - harrassed men were reported adrift in open boats on the Pacific Ocean today, 1,000 miles from the nearest ship.

And that vessel could not reach them because it did not have sufficient fuel.

The men abandoned the freighter Fijian last night after an explosion in number four hold, a radio message relayed to the coast guard here said.

The only hope of the crew was rowing an estimated five miles to the South Sea island of Arutua in the Tahitian group about 2,000 miles south of Honolulu.

Only meagre details were carried in the radio message from the British freighter Janeta which was relayed to Honolulu by the naval radio at Pago Pago. The Janeta was 2,000 miles from Arutua.

Nearest craft was the United States coast guard cutter Shoshone. She was at Jarvis Island, about 1,000 miles away, but her fuel supply was too low to make the trip.

The Janeta said the explosion occurred at 19:04 PST last night, about five miles south of Little Arutua Island.

Her first report did not explain how the explosion occurred, whether the Fijian sank or whether any of her crew were killed or injured.

Aided Rescuer 10 Days Ago

Ironically the Fijian was one of the rescue ships which sped to the aid of the motorship Silvyriarch when fire threatened her 10 days ago.

The Fijian was identified by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce Marine Department as the former Silverosk of New York, now under charter to Flood Brothers, San Francisco shipping concern.

Raymond Flood, vice-president of Flood Brothers, expressed disbelief it was his ship. The reported locality of the explosion was along its route from San Francisco, which she left March 2 with general cargo for the South Seas and the Antipodes. No other Fijian is listed in shipping registers.

She was in command of Captain Parker, Flood said, and carried a crew of about 30 men.

The Fijian is a 333-foot steel vessel of 3,447 gross tons. She was built in 1919 by Merill-Stevens shipbuilding corporation of Jacksonville, Fla.

COMMONS PASSES LAST TARIFF ITEM IN TRADE TREATY

Bennett Pleads In Vain For Lowering Of Barriers On Galvanized Sheet Iron

TO MEET SHORTAGE

OTTAWA, March 24.—(CP). — An urgent request from Conservative Leader Bennett for a period of lowered tariff barriers to meet a threatened shortage of galvanized sheet-iron, and protests arising mainly in Liberal ranks against high tariffs on manufactured and other tariffs featured yesterday's house debate on the Canada-United Kingdom trade agreement.

Despite frequent questioning from all parties, Finance Minister Dunning obtained approval of scores of items in the agreement covering importations of iron and steel and textile items.

The House heard another attack on Dominion legislation regarding operations of small loan companies when, during the hour for private bills, an Act respecting the Industrial Loan and Finance Corporation was up for second reading. For the second time it was "talked out" by those who opposed any further legislation for this class of company.

Mr. Bennett requested that the same arrangement be made with the United Kingdom regarding "black sheets" used for galvanizing as was effected with South Africa some time ago regarding Indian corn. In that case there was not sufficient corn coming from South Africa to meet Canada's requirements and the tariff on the commodity was lowered, by agreement, for a certain period.

Canadian consumers of galvanized sheet iron were faced with the possibility of being unable to obtain their requirements because world conditions made it difficult for Canadian manufacturers to obtain raw materials, Mr. Bennett said. The United Kingdom could not fill the orders and the tariff against United States' raw material was too high.

No Immediate Danger

Finance Minister Dunning said if the facts were as indicated he would readily take the action suggested

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, March 24.— Jean Millar of Lakefield seven-year-old guest artist on the Weston Safety Club program which was broadcast over Station CFRB at Toronto on Saturday evening, March 20, at 6 p.m., is being showered with congratulations on her performance and best wishes for her future.

Jean, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Millar, of Lakefield, won second place in the children's radio contest held in the Capitol Theatre on Saturday, February 27, and although ordinarily only the winning entrant is given the privilege of broadcasting on the Safety Club program, Weston's Uncle Bill was so impressed by the quality of Jean's performance that he arranged to have her appear on his program on Saturday, March 20.

A large number of Lakefield people tuned their radio to Station CFRB at 6 p.m. on Saturday to hear the little Lakefield artist in her first radio performance. When Jean's turn to appear came round, she sang, and her voice was clear and sweet as it came over the airwaves to the radio audience. Then she put on a snappy tap dance to the rhythm of "Plenty of Money and You," and was accompanied in the final chorus by thirty voices in the background.

EXECUTIONS ACT PROPOSAL FAILS

Maj. Clark Urges Furniture, Chattels Up To $1,000 Be Exempt From Seizure For Debt

TORONTO, March 24—(CP)—Despite a plea of Major J. H. Clark, Liberal member of Windsor, that the present legislation was barbaric and had resulted in untold hardship, the legal bills committee, on the suggestion of Attorney-General Roebuck, refused today to report an amendment to the Executions Act.

The amendment sought to exempt furniture and other chattels up to the extent of $1,000 from seizure for debt.

Attorney-General Roebuck said the bill had some merit but it was too late in the session to work it out in detail. He suggested it be left over for further study during the recess of the House.

Presenting the case for the bill, opposed by nearly 100 legal representatives, Mr. Clark said he did not think anyone would buy furniture with the idea of defeating a creditor.

"The crook will look after himself no matter what legislation we pass," he said. "People's furniture has been taken through their getting into debt through no fault of their own. I know of one returned soldier who suicided after he lost his furniture through no fault of his own. Surely it is a shameful state of affairs when such furniture can be taken. It is barbarous. It is merely the case of taking a pound of flesh. Nearly always the furniture brings nothing, it does not pay the fees."

Has $15,000 Worth.

Major Clark said he had $15,000 worth of furniture in his home which could have been subject to seizure.

"If you have that much it should be seized," said J. J. Glass, who added he was sure no creditor would overlook such an amount.

"If people are allowed to seize furniture at this time it is a reflection on the intelligence of the legislature," declared Mr. Clark.

Mr. Roebuck said he was sympathetic to the principle involved but suggested the bill should not be reported in its present form. He promised to study the matter during the recess with the view to trying to meet the situation.

Amendment to the Mining Act which would have permitted miners to choose their own medical attendant was laid over for a special meeting of the committee.

John Rowlandson, Cochrane South, said the miners who paid $1.00 a month for medical services should have the right to select their own physician.

"One doctor in Kirkland Lake gets $1,000 a year and spends his winters in Bermuda," he said. He sends up students at half pay to take his place.

"It is a good thing he is not a member of the House or he would be kicked out," commented W. A. Baird, High Park.

Hon. Paul Leduc, minister of mines, stated the bill should not amend the Mining Act. It was finally decided to take the measure up with the Minister of Health and hold another meeting on the matter.

HIGHER TARIFF ON U.S. FURNITURE IS RECOMMENDED

Board Suggests Rate Be Jumped From 30 To 37 1-2 Per Cent.

REVISED IN TWO YEARS

OTTAWA, March 24 (CP)—The Government today had before it a recommendation of the Tariff Board that the tariff on furniture imported from the United States and other countries enjoying the Dominion's intermediate tariff be increased, in effect, from 27 per cent. to 33⅓ per cent.

Actually the board, reporting yesterday, suggested the rate be increased from 30 per cent. to 37½ per cent., but the effective figures were reduced by the fact a 10 per cent. discount operates under the Franco-Canadian trade treaty which applies also the United States and other countries included in most-favorable-nation clauses of this country's other trade pacts.

The recommendation, it followed, would leave the British preferential rate at 15 per cent. to which it was reduced from 20 per cent. under the current budget. It would increase the intermediate rate from 30 to 37½ and leave the general rate at 45 per cent.

The board, however, did not propose its advanced rates should be permanent. It suggested they should be reviewed in two years and that meanwhile the Canadian furniture industry should investigate its problems and seek to remedy them.

Result of Protests

The board's inquiry was started after furniture manufacturers protested new tariff rates under the 1936 Canada-United States trade pact reducing the protective rate against United States imports from 45 to 30 per cent. or actually 27 per cent. because of a clause in the French trade treaty. Canadian manufacturers held the United States furniture makers were their greatest competitors, but the board agreed only with reservations.

It remarked United States manufacturers in 1935 provided only 1.47 of the Canadian furniture market in 1935, but increased their share in 1936 to 2.96 per cent.

"In ordinary circumstances," the report said, "the fact that the share of Canadian consumption enjoyed by the United States manufacturers is less than three per cent of that consumption would lead to the conclusion that no increase in the intermediate tariff is necessary; but certain conditions to be mentioned hereafter seem to point to the advisability of an increase."

These conditions included a disadvantage Canadian manufacturers suffered in comparison with United States competitors, particularly in higher-priced furniture, because of higher duties on imported veneers, vegetable glue and glass.

It dealt also with the disadvantage Canadian manufacturers suffered because of small quantitative manufacture in comparison with that of their American competitors, finding carload lots could be imported to Montreal, Canada's largest retail distribution centre, at a lower price than they could be delivered from Canadian plants.

Further, it said, keen competition was current among the plants in Canada, which, in its opinion, "prevents any substantial increase in the price which the Canadian manufacturers could realize for their furniture even if the duties were raised to their former level.

What It Would Do.

The board expressed the view that while the increased tariff proposed would not solve the problems of the Canadian manufacturer, it would accomplish the following:

1. Affect the attitude of mind of the manufacturers whose perspective has been dislocated by the sudden drop in their protection from 45 per cent. to 27 per cent.

2. It would give them an opportunity to carry on substantially as they did before the change in the protection for a period during which they might take stock of their position and perhaps work out a more economically organized industry than now exists.

"The board suggests," the report continued, "it would be advisable and in fact necessary for the furniture manufacturers, particularly in Southwestern Ontario, to begin immediately a study of their problems, and perhaps avail themselves of the conciliation provision of the Dominion Trade and Industry Commission Act in an effort to preserve the industry and to maintain themselves in their position as important employers of labor in so many towns and villages in Southwestern Ontario.

"It will be seen from the foregoing that the board's findings are based largely on two considerations, namely: The very wide drop in the protection from 45 per cent. to 30 per cent., less 10 per cent., thus making an effective rate of 27 per cent., and what may be called the disorganized state of the industry particularly in Southwestern Ontario. These considerations lead to the view that the whole situation ought to be considered again after, say, a period of two years and that any increase granted should be regarded as in the nature of a temporary relief rather than as a final view as to the amount of protection required by the industry."

BIG ELMS TRAVEL TO WORLD'S FAIR

Trees Weighing 25 Tons Will Make Forest For Exhibition Of 1939

NEW YORK, March 24—(CP)—A great mass movement of trees began recently with the opening of bids of 10,000 trees so be transplanted to the site of the New York World's Fair at Flushing, Long Island. The fair opens in 1939.

Practically every variety of American tree, from the gentle flowering dogwood to the stately old elm, will be brought to the fair site on railroad flat cars and barges from nurseries, open country and private estates throughout the East. Most of the trees will be full-grown, some of the elms weighing 25 tons with protective chunks of earth.

Specifications call for trees of unusual size and ample shade-producing qualities. Maples, oaks and elms, for example, must be from six to 14 inches in trunk diameter and from 15 to 35 feet in height, with preference for the larger sizes. Elms for the World's Fair should have a spread of branches of from 34 to 40 feet.

The first 500 trees, which will cost more than $100,000, will be planted beginning March 15.

The price of a standing tree is comparatively small in the total expense of moving and transplanting it.

He Cannot Escape

Hon. Harry C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, took time in the Legislative Assembly to complain there had been too much publicity directed to a recent traffic accident in which he had figured. At the time of the accident Mr. Nixon said the Globe and Mail had featured it in every edition, but when a jury had completely exonerated him of any blame that had been used in only one edition.

Mr. Nixon claimed that men in public life who motored were just as liable as any others to have accidents, and that we suppose is correct enough. He claimed they should not be singled out for publicity any more than other individuals.

A fair enough contention, but one which cannot be followed through to any logical conclusion. Mr. Nixon is not merely Harry C. Nixon a farmer, of St. George, in Brant County. He is Provincial Secretary, a man in public life, one whose name appears in the papers many times because he is speaking in the Legislature. He appears more places as Hon. H. C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, than he would as Harry C. Nixon, the farmer from Brant County. There are people all over the province who know of him as Provincial Secretary who have never seen him or heard him.

That form of interest which attaches to public men is something which cannot be put on and thrown off. It remains. It cannot very well be put to one side when the public man gets in his car to go for a journey. It rides along with him. It is actually of more news value when the car in which Hon. Harry C. Nixon, Provincial Secretary, is riding, becomes involved in an accident than if the driver had been Harry C. Nixon, a Brant County farmer who had never entered public life.

As we recall the incident to which Mr. Nixon refers we believe he received fair treatment. There was nothing in news reports to suggest in advance he had done anything he should not have done or that recklessness had been shown in the operation of his car. His complaint seems to be he received too many mentions, or too much mention, but the fact that he is Provincial Secretary would bring him within the class of people of whom mention is made at all times, and he will remain in that class until he retires from public life.

What the Farmer Gets

When a farmer spends $100 in farm implements he is not securing that amount of implement. Figures which were recently submitted at Ottawa show the farmer gets $43 worth of implement, based on factory cost.

Apparently it is not just simple business of taking the implement out of the factory and sending it to the farm. It is quite a different experience to the farmer going to a store and buying a pair of shoes and taking them along with him.

The farmer has to pay for company administration, the commission of the agent, the upkeep of a warehouse, the costs of collection, freight, taxes and so on.

It is stated these items when put together represent $57 of the cost of the $100 purchase.

The farmer in turn can put to good use the $43 worth of machinery, but he can find nothing useful in the other $57 which he pays at the time of puchase. It is what the business world calls overhead, and it has worried farmers and a good many others.

Kissing Hobson Was a Fad

When the death was announced recently of Rear-Admiral Hobson in New York it is not likely the present generation would be impressed. And yet Hobson became quite a hero in United States in 1898 in the days of the Spanish-American war. The Spanish fleet under Admiral Gervera was known to be in the Atlantic, and seaboard communities were nervous. The Admiral took his fleet into the harbor of Santiago for the purpose of coaling, and there it was that Hobson had his chance.

He was a lieutenant on the flagship New York of the U. S. fleet, and it was planned to sink the old Merrimac, a naval collier, in such a way that it would block the entrance to the port and keep the Spanish fleet bottled in. It was quite a daring and novel scheme. The Merrimac was wired and fixed so the bottom could be blown out of it when Lieut. Hobson and his six associates took the vessel to the right spot. But before the plan was carried out the Spanish guns opened fire from the fort, and the Merrimac went down at the wrong spot. Hobson was taken prisoner and afterward released.

Then it was that the storm of enthusiasm broke loose. He was a national hero. Tall, handsome and all such, he attended a reception in his honor in Chicago late in 1898, and there noticed two of his cousins. He stopped and kissed them, and other women came along claiming they should be similarly treated. He complied and the thing became a habit. It is related that on a visit to Denver he kissed 500 women of all ages. An enterprising candy manufacturer, quick to cash in on the idea, brought out a wrapped candy which he labelled "Hobson's Kisses." That was too much for him and for the public and for the newspapers and Hobson dropped from sight. The feminine part of the country had been swept off its feet, but had opportunity to recover and stand straight once more. Afterward he was in Congress and was also a leader in the prohibition movement. When as a handsome young lieutenant he started kissing the ladies almost 40 years ago he made himself somewhat of a national joke.

Application Withdrawn

The application which Ald. G. N. Gordon made to the Ontario Legislature relative to undoing a number of the acts of previous City Councils in dealing with local industries, was withdrawn by its sponsor when it was found the bill would not be allowed to go through as it stood. It would have had to be modified materially, and there was no visible support for the project going through as presented.

The bill which Ald. Gordon presented sought to repeal an extension of a lease between the Public Utilities Commission and the General Electric. When the original lease of power expired in April of 1931 it was renewed, with the city receiving $3,000 a year for the surplus water flowing over the dam instead of the previous and original amount of $2,000. At the same time the company agreed to erect a new building at an estimated cost of $400,000, and at no place does there seem to have been anything irregular in the framing of the contract, nor does it appear that the city would have gained much had it come into possession of the power plant, as provided by the original agreement. Power plants do not last forever, and there would have been considerable outlay for the renewing of equipment.

The action of Ald. Gordon also sought to revoke fixed assessment of the De Laval Co. which expired and was renewed in 1932. The renewal of the assessment carried with it an increase in assessment from $50,000 to $60,000, but school rates and local improvement taxes would be based upon full assessed value. In the agreement with the city there were other stipulated changes which were agreed upon, but there was no penalty clause in the bylaw for failure to put these into full effect. This bylaw after being passed by council through two readings was submitted to the ratepayers and endorsed: For 2304, against 660.

There was also the assessment of the Canadian Raybestos Co., which in 1932 was presented to the ratepayers and approved by a vote of 2228 to 644. The original fixed assessment of $10,000 was increased to $25,000, while school improvement taxes would be based on full assessment. At that time there was little building and the company agreed to go ahead and extend its premises, and it was a welcome move to the community for 1932 was a year when building activity of all kinds was at a standstill.

The fact that the ratepayers themselves had opportunity to pass upon what their Council had done would be taken into consideration by the Private Bills Committee of the Ontario Legislature. It would also be regarded as an agreement, and there is still that stout feeling that when an agreement is made it is a matter of good faith to see that its provisions are respected.

The most important of the other provisions of Ald Gordon's bill was one which would have required the Commissioners of the Peterborough City Trust to be elected annually. At present they are named by the City Council for a period of five years. We regard the present plan as sound and for good reasons. The City Council, having itself been elected by the ratepayers, is representative of public opinion and public trust, and for that reason alone is competent to make proper selection and appointment to the City Trust. By an elective vote it is quite possible members would be elected to the City Trust who had no particular knowledge or experience which would fit them for the handling of all the city's investments. The work of the City Trust is in other municipalities in the hands of the Finance Commissioner or the City Treasurer, and either of such officials would be an appointed official, and not elected by general vote. The work of the City Trust in Peterborough has been outstanding; its house is in good order and the sound financial position of this city can be credited to the soundness of its judgment and the care with which its list of investments have been selected.

Not The Way to Win

Strikers in Oshawa are not doing their cause any good by throwing bricks and eggs. They may have a good reason or a number of good reasons for going on strike, but the old egg and brick business is not going to give support or assistance to their cause.

It is easy enough to believe that tempers get badly frayed in a situation such as that, but if a cause is right and just it does not need an egg to support it. If it is not a good cause then the bricks and eggs will do nothing at all toward making it good.

In the last analysis public sympathy or public feeling is something which cannot be ignored. We do not believe it can be enlisted by the use of bricks and old eggs.

Apart from all such considerations there is the point of law and order, and Labor operates to best advantage when it respects such things to the letter. The man who puts a brick through a window or pastes some individual in the neck with an old egg is not making any worthy contribution toward winning the struggle in which he and his co-workers are engaged.

They All Have Blundered

There are a number of Italian recruits fighting for the insurgents in Spain, and within recent days they have met with reverses. In some of the British papers it was remarked that the Italian reverse in Spain was another Caporetto, that being the scene of the defeat of the Italians at the hand of the Austrian army during the world war.

It is reported that Italy resented the remark, and has asked the British ambassador at Rome to forward a protest to his home office. Apparently the reference smarts.

One can have little sympathy for Italian troops being turned back in Spain because their presence there is evidence of the desire of Italy to spread the Spanish war to other nations. Apart from that there are few nations in a position to point their finger at others when it comes to military blunders. The Allies during the world war admittedly made their full share of them, and that fact has been amply demonstrated in a number of post-war controversies. And the Germans did the same thing. No one nation has a monopoly on strategic blunders during the course of a war.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Hon. Howard Ferguson says there will be no war soon and even those who do not agree with him politically will hope that he is right on this occasion.

Over 800,000 Russians played football last year. It is rather surprising the Reds did not go in for the American brand because they are past masters in interference.

New York's Gourmet Society has turned to home dishes but we imagine there will be indignation in Boston over the fact that baked beans have no place in the menu.

Mimico children have cost the town $200 by throwing stones at street lights. With that kind of control it is evident that some good baseball pitchers will soon be available.

There is only one dentist in China for every 400,000 people but business is not as good as that figure might seem to indicate for 399,500 of the total never think about going to a dentist anyway.

When Premier Hepburn charges the opposition with trying to protect a bunch of crooks he is in the position of pronouncing judgment before the case is heard.

Beavers have multiplied so rapidly in Banff National Park that the authorities have been forced to start a campaign against them. It is a demonstration of how wild life flourishes under proper protection.

John Marsh who was elected as a Conservative in West Hamilton on Monday is a graduate of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. It seems to be a habit for pupils from that institution to go places.

A juvenile who escaped from the Bowmanville boys' school has been sentenced to six years in that institution on six charges of house-breaking and theft. That does not sound much like the school to prevent juvenile delinquency that was originally established at Bowmanville with the assistance of the service clubs.

HE TRIED IT

(By A. R. K.)

¶ Joe Tongue worked hard near every day, I guess he fairly earned his pay, he paid for what he ate. But Joe was not content at all, he thought he'd go and rent a hall, and start to agitate.

¶ The bosses had a snap he said, they might as well all stay in bed, they never earned their pay; they landed in at nine o'clock, and all they did was loaf and talk, then took a holiday.

¶ If Joe was boss he'd change things fast, the boss would have no chance to last, he'd fire them every one; the men who worked would get the pay, he'd cut their hours short every day, then something would be done.

¶ Now Joe is boss in his own plant, sees things from quite another slant, he scratches at his head; he gets down early in the day, and never seems to get away, is tired when he hits bed.

¶ And when they talk more pay to Joe, he talks to them profound and slow, he agitates no more; if business don't pick up for him, their chance of work is growing slim, he'll have to close the door.

¶ Being boss was simple years ago, at least it seemed that way to Joe, 'twas joyful like the spring; he thought it was a lot of fun, a simple job and easy done —until he tried the thing.

Our Statesmen At Their Labors

(Parliamentary Debates)

Mr. MacNEIL: I am speaking of armed insurgency.

Mr. CAHAN: The sit-down strikers seem to be armed in most cases. At any rate some of their deeds result in conflict, and whether they carry bludgeons or pistols does not decide the issue. The insurgents may become the loyalist forces by the recognition by the government of the United Kingdom of the insurgent party as the controlling government force, or vice versa. There must be a discretion vested in the government.

Mr. MacNEIL: Would not that then become a friendly foreign state if the insurgent force conquered?

Mr. CAHAN: I do not think that without knowledge of the actual conditions and the facts you can draw a line. If you have a government in this country you must give it authority to exercise a certain discretion in complicated cases. You cannot tie down by a rigid statute the government's decision in every complicated case that may arise in international affairs. You must have a government that takes responsibility. You cannot call this Parliament together simply because a question arises as to whether a certain band of insurgents, although armed, should be regarded thereafter as the loyalist forces. Parliament cannot be convened on every such occasion, and you must give the government of the country discretion. If you have a government which you are confident will not exercise proper discretion the sooner you vote against it the better, but there is human frailty everywhere, even in governments. In drafting a statute such as this you must assume that the government of your country will exercise a reasonable discretion in dealing with such matters in accordance with the exigencies of special occasions as they arise.

Mr. DOUGLAS: I do not want to labour the matter, but it is not a question of not having confidence in the government. Legislation is of no value in this regard unless you indicate the lines along which you desire the government to act.

Mr. CAHAN: You cannot do that by statute.

Mr. DOUGLAS: The Minister of Justice touched on the very point when he talked about the powers of discretion and the question of determining when there exists an insurgency or a civil war. It seems to us in this group that it places too great a responsibility on the government and too much discretionary power in their hands to have them make the decision. What is suggested is that the participation at any time by Canadian nationals in the forces of any group who are insurgents or even preparing to be insurgents shall be unlawful. As it stands now we are saying that it is permissable for a Canadian national to participate in an armed rebellion up to a certain point until such time as the Canadian government declares that this act operates against such participation. If it were placed in the statute, at any time it would be illegal for a Canadian national to participate in any armed revolt against a friendly state. As to the difficulty the hon. member for St. Lawrence-St. George (Mr. Cahan) brings out in reference to deciding which is the government and which the insurgents, as they may vary from time to time, the hon. member for Vancouver North (Mr. MacNeil) pointed that out that the government that is recognized by his majesty's government is the friendly state; those at war with that government are armed insurgents, and any Canadian national enlisting in the forces of such a body is breaking the laws of the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): We want to prevent that.

Mr. DOUGLAS: But we shall not prevent it if we say that the Canadian government must exercise its discretion at some time in the future rather than have the provision included in the act.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): What is the practical purpose of my hon. friend's objection? Does he think it would be permissible to enlist on one side and not on the other?

Mr. WOODSWORTH: It is as it stands.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): Not at all. It would not apply there. If the conflict is not of such a kind that the provisions of the act apply to it, there would be no intervention on one side or the other. When it is of that kind, and one side, the government side if you like, comes under this provision, the other side comes under it, as well. This legislation is to prevent enlistment in the armed forces of a country at war with another country. If it applies to a war within one country because of an order under section 19, surely my hon. friends have never had it in mind that the government would apply it only to one side. It is discussing an absurdity; it could not be.

Mr. DOUGLAS: No, no.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): Then what is the object of this discussion?

Mr. DOUGLAS: The point is not that we are afraid it would be applied to one side and not the other, but that it should not be left to the government to apply it at all.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): It has to be.

Mr. DOUGLAS: It should be applied from the beginning, not at the discretion of the government.

ORGANIZED PLAY.

(Kitchener, Whig-Standard)

TO OUR mind our schools would pay higher dividends both mental and moral if there was organization and supervision of games, if the children were encouraged to engage in team games and instructed in how to play them. This is now done in some schools in the larger cities. It should be done in all schools. Every school should have a teacher or teachers, depending on its size, charged with the duty of directing a well-organized program of sport and games for the pupils.

Those Western Dust Storms.

(A Kansas Letter in the New York Times.)

I AM in the midst of a dust storm. The conductor tells me it is the first bad dust storm of 1937, and one of the worst he has seen in two years.

Through the car window I can see telegraph poles, some twenty feet from the roadbed. Beyond that fences line a road. The fences are approximately 100 feet from the tracks. Beyond that is a thick fog—black, impenetrable, forbidding. We have passed through nearly 200 miles of manmade fog.

Looking out of the window, you might think it merely a cloudy, stormy day; that is, if you didn't know you were in a dust bowl. It is a cloudy day, but a different kind of clouds. Not the clouds New Yorkers know.

I had read of dust storms, but they were vague in my consciousness. Now I see one, and it is a terrible, an awesome thing.

They are clouds of dust—soil, soil blowing away from a ravaged and denuded land. A land raped by greed for $2 wheat.

I have had only one thought in my brain as I sit on the train and look out at this desert through which we have been passing for two hours. It is a saddening, almost a heart-tearing thought. It is the thought that right here, under my very eyes, I am seeing this country blowing away.

Here, in what was once the farm and stock land of the Middle West, I see the disintegration of that soil which has fed us.

Soil erosion. Wind erosion. These words are vague and nebulous to many of you in New York. I did not know about them, either, when I left New York. But I know now, for today I have seen. I have seen what waste, greed exploitation have done to our land. Unwise use, short-sighted farming.

Literally, our land is blowing away, piling up in mounds of sand that make you think of the mounds of the Gobi Desert. Little holes in the land, about two or three feet in circumference, dot the bare countryside; places where the wind has struck and dug out the soil like so much feathery sand. No vegetation left to hold the land intact, to repulse the wind.

It is a frightening experience. A thing no one would believe or visualize unless he has gone through it. The last time I was out there 20 years ago, there were cattle, and trees, and birds, and life.

Turning in the Old Car.

(From the Ottawa Journal.)

INEVITABLY there comes a time when the old car has to be traded in, and it is something like disposing and it is something like disposing of a faithful dog.

The old car has served its owner long and well. It has taken him hence and brought him home innumerable times. It has carried his family on tours, on picnics, on Sunday jaunts. It has gone bravely through rain and snow, over good roads and bad. Happy and pleasant memories surround this marvel of metal and Probably it has been hauled by its heels out of a mud hole, and nobody finds much enjoyment in changing a tire in a mosquito-infested bush, but these are small items in the record.

Its owner agrees that the old car is not stylish any more, but his memory goes back to the day when it stood gallantly in the show-room glistening in nickel and paint, the envy of all. Now it is straight where it should be streamlined; high wheels where it should be low, sadly lacking in gadgets. The owner admits all that, but it seems to him he never will understand another car as well. They had been through many experiences together, he knew what the car would do. Knew its capabilities and its limitations—never had such uncomplaining service from any human.

There comes a time, however, when a new car takes his fancy and he succumbs to temptation. The old friend is traded down the river. There takes its place a creation with speed in its lines, power in its deep voice, green and red lights, all the current miracles of automotive engineering. The owner finds it difficult to believe that five or six years hence this will be just another old car.

A Farm Woman Triumphs.

(From the Regina Leader-Post.)

A CERTAIN farm woman in Saskatchewan has become quite the figure of the hour. Her name—it is Mrs. Fred Bicknell—is, or, one thinks should be, on the tongues of many. It is a name to be associated with pluck and resourcefulness and with the ability and skill in a field close to her heart. Credit, too, goes to those associated with her, including her husband in what has been achieved.

Mrs. Bicknell, the farm woman produced the play that has won first honors in the Saskatchewan drama festival in 1937. The play is "Relief," pivoting on depression and drouth in rural Saskatchewan. Mrs. Bicknell conceived this play herself, wrote it herself, she directed it, and she plays in it.

The play is 100 percent. rural on practically all points. The cast portraying it is from Marshall in the Lloydminster district. Hardly anyone knew of Marshall until this play began to appear and finally won the Saskatchewan drama championship. It is a hamlet of 75 persons. There are only four in the play—Mrs. Bicknell, the playwright, producer and actress combined, who plays the part of the farm wife on relief; Mr. Bicknell, who takes the part of the distressed head of the home, and two younger people of the district, a young man and woman, in son and daughter roles.

This play of the drouthlands, conceived and written in Saskatchewan rural parts, won out over artists from Regina, Saskatoon and other urban centres. It, with its players, will now go to Ottawa for competition in the finals for all-Canadian honors. Everyone in Saskatchewan will hope it may be able to win further honors.

Here we have a bit of drama emerging from the soil of Saskatchewan, putting its roots down among those of the common ground, and pushing its way through to flower and bloom in the field of art. We think Saskatchewan has done quite a remarkable thing in evolving a piece of drama, putting it on the stage by using characters out of the soil, and making it good enough to attract Dominion-wide attention.

HENPECKED HUBBIES.

(Galt Reporter)

THE henpecked husband is a figure as old in human annals as the institution of marriage itself, but it has remained for Herr Hitler's government in Germany, with its customary ingenuity, to present an entirely new slant on him.

The Supreme Administrative Court of Prussia has just ruled that a man who lets himself be henpecked by his wife is not fit to hold office in the Prussian state. A state official who had been notoriously dominated by his good frau has been, under this edict, deprived of his job—sent home, presumably, to make what explanation he can to his dominant helpmate.

Now this ruling has its points. If a man can't rule his own home, how can he rule a state? The answer seems obvious... until you reflect that such a superlative statesman as Abraham Lincoln was one of the most henpecked mortals in all 19th century America.

CONSUMER SUFFERS.

(Niagara Falls Review)

JUST what happens when there is an increase in wages, is shown by Iron Age, chief organ of the steel industry in the United States, which prints its estimates of the readjustments, arising out of the labor troubles in recent weeks across the line. "Increased wages $200,000,000 a year. Increased prices $208,000,000 a year." And the economist sums up "net loss to national purchasing power from this transaction $8,000,000 a year."

STABLE BANKS.

(Brantford Expositor)

NOW that the depression is rapidly passing away Canadians have reason to be devoutly thankful for the stability of their financial institutions during the years of economic stringency. During that time not one bank failed in Canada, and not a single depositor lost a dollar entrusted to the keeping of chartered institutions. In fact there has been only one bank failure in Canada since 1920. On the other hand from June, 1920, to the end of 1934 more than 15,000 banks in the United States, or more than 45 per cent. of the total, suspended payments. These banks carried $7,900,000,000 in deposits, and all of their depositors were deprived of the use of their money for a longer or shorter period. A few got their money back in full, but it is estimated that most of them lost from 25 to 50 per cent. of their savings, and a large number recovered nothing. That is a picture that is worthy of considerable thought on the part of Canadians. It should make them proud of their banking system and establish faith in the stability and integrity of financial institutions in general. This is particulary desirable at a time when irresponsible parties are advocating radical departure from traditional usage in order to obtain money more easily.

MUST BUILD MEN.

(Shipping Lines, Linotype News)

ONE LARGE California employer told Jack Dionne, the texas lumbee publisher, about his inability to get satisfactory help. "The trouble," he said, "is that for five years we have all been working with skeleton organizations, and we have not been building men to fit our needs. We must start all over again, building men."

Every employer should keep before him that oft-quoted sentence from Emerson's essays: "The greatest enterprise in the world for splendor, for extent, is the upbuilding of a man." All of us must interest ourselves in the proper training of young people who will take the places of those who are running things today.

Ernie Goodertham, proprietor of the garage adjoining the butcher shop escaped in night attire.

He managed to get a few of his tools out of the garage, but lost all his furniture. Vernon Woods proprietor of the bake shop adjoining the garage managed to remove some of his furniture.

Fire reels from Orangeville pumped water from the nearby river and they managed to save a harness store owned by Alec Patterson. The three frame buildings were totally destroyed.

Wylie Houston owner of one of the buildings estimated the property loss at $3,500 and contents loss $3,000. Only one building was covered by insurance.

correct to assume that the dyers had struck. "We were laid off when the weavers walked out", he said.

This man added that the reason the dyers did not strike was because they are not organized and lacked leadership. Osborne he said, they would have struck with the rest.

He expressed the opinion that if the strike had been properly organized instead of leaving each of the various departments of the plant to work out its own salvation, an 85 per cent strike would have resulted.

Not Entitled To Increase.

"If there is a wage increase", he exclaimed, "we are not entitled to it as we had not the courage to strike with the rest, but merely got laid off."

Possibility of a general strike in the carpet industry was seen in the rumor that two delegates from the local branch of The Canadian Wool Carpet Weavers' Association had gone to Toronto today to confer with delegates from Toronto, Brantford and Guelph branches of the Union.

TORONTO, March 24—(C.P.)—Department of Labor officials have received no word of a possible general strike of Ontario carpet factory workers, they stated today. Neither has a request been made for governmental intervention in the strike at the Brinton Carpet Company's Peterborough plant.

DROVERS DEMAND SOME DAMAGES

father and two neighbors when two men in a motor car travelling more than 50 miles an hour tried to stop them one mile north of Mitchell yesterday.

Police In Plain Clothes.

"The men were in plain clothes and I thought it was a hold-up" said the son, "I have driven my car at 87 miles an hour, but I drove faster yesterday than I ever did before. When we came to the Willow Grove Cheese factory I saw a team of horses and some men there and decided to try there for protection.

"I jumped from the car and ran behind the factory to hide the money envelope, but I slipped and the man was close to me. My father tried to run but the other man shoved a gun against his chest. They didn't say a word about being police. I was knocked down by a horse I was hiding near when the man by my father turned and fired his revolver, frightening the horse. My father thought I was shot."

The father and son were handcuffed and the envelope containing $958 was taken before they were allowed to show their identity, the son said. The officers showed police badges as their identity, did not give their names. They said they had been looking for a blue car suspected to be carrying bank robbers.

500 Workers Leave Plants—Negotiations Under Way.

KITCHENER, Ont., March 24. — (CP).—The plant of the B. F. Goodrich Company of Canada was evacuated by 500 workers today while union leaders and company executives prepared to start negotiations to end a strike which began early today as a "sit-down."

The evacuation was carried out after the company agreed to suspend all manufacturing activities pending the outcome of negotiations.

COMMITTEE WILL PROBE CHARGES

confidentially" further evidence that he had received. He declared the Attorney-General would then be convinced that a probe was necessary.

Mr. Roebuck declined to receive the information.

When the committee opened Mr. Roebuck assisted Mr. Ellis' motion on the ground it was the equivalent of asking Mr. Ellis if he had stopped beating his wife. Mr. Ellis, he said, assumed that improper influence had been used.

Mr. Ellis: "I am going to prove it."

"Perhaps you can but until you do you cannot say that improper influence was used," declared Mr. Roebuck.

Mr. Ellis—"Do you want an investigation?"

"I am not under examination," retorted Mr. Roebuck. "I certainly am not going to vote for a resolution enquiring into improper action on the part of the Prime Minister."

"You want to prohibit me from making this investigation?"

Improper Resolution.

"The resolution is improper," stated Mr. Roebuck.

Chairman Clark: "You are assuming misconduct the resolution is not in order."

Mr. Ellis said he was willing to recast his resolution to meet any objection.

"You expect us who know that he did nothing of the kind to vote for such a resolution," returned Mr. Roebuck.

"Suppose we pass a resolution investigating Mr. Henry for not making his seat on the affidavits?"

Mr. Ellis: "I agree."

Mr. Chairman: "I cannot accept that."

Mr. Ellis: "I'll accept it on behalf of the Opposition."

"It is an effort on your part to make the present administration look as black as the last," interjected Morgan Baker, Liberal member for North York.

"A typical remark," stated Mr Henry.

"Well what have you in your mind?" asked Mr. Baker.

"I can prove that there has been interference in the administration of the Liquor Control Board," said Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Baker denied that there had been improper interference.

A Challenge.

"Will you stake your seat on that?" challenged Mr. Ellis.

"That's childish," returned the Liberal member.

"Well, will you?" repeated Mr. Ellis.

Mr. Baker made no answer and Attorney-General Roebuck said that the proper place for such a resolution was in the House.

There was then lengthy discussion as to whether or not the matter should be brought before the Privileges and Elections Committee.

Mr. Ellis stated that it was his intention to investigate the revenue of the Liquor Control Board from licenses and question the revenue received from one Dennis.

Chairman Clark: "If you can show money in public accounts dealing with that revenue then we will deal with it."

Mr. Clark stated that the manner in which Mr. Ellis' resolution was drafted would have permitted the examination of the records by the Public Accounts Committee.

Mr. Ellis then amended his resolution basing it upon the receipts shown by the Liquor Control Board.

Mr. Baker again clashed with Mr. Ellis when he stated that the affidavits were based on statements of "political thugs."

"Then why not bring them before the committee and get the thing whitewashed?" retorted Mr. Ellis.

Discussing the date Mr. Ellis said: "What the people want to know is if the charges are true. The public have a right to know."

Chairman: "We should consult the Prime Minister and find out when he can attend."

Mr. Ellis: "I am willing to strike his name out of the resolution. I will leave it to you to call the committee anytime within two weeks."

GERMAN PLAN OPPOSED

Germany Would Have Brazil Set Up Stocks Of Raw Materials In Europe.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Mar. 24 (AP). —A German plan to induce Brazil to set up large stocks of raw materials in convenient places in Europe against the eventuality of war faced opposition today before the Federal Council for Foreign Trade.

The plan, as advanced by Gustav Schlotterer, special envoy of the Reich Ministry of Economics, called for bulky shipments of coffee, cocoa beans, chilled and frozen meats, jerked beef, raw cotton and hides to be made available to Germany.

Paris of Brazil are reporting a shortage of crons.

TORONTO BUSES BOUGHT IN U.S. MEMBER CHARGES

Liberal Member Charges Equally As Good Buses Made In Canada

"MONOPOLY OF LOYALTY"

OTTAWA, March 24 (C.P.).—If Toronto members of Parliament would see that their own city practised protection they would have more support when they pleaded for protection in Parliament, Ross Macdonald (Lib. Brantford City) told the House of Commons yesterday in a sally that brought Toronto Conservative members to their feet.

The Brantford member, one of the believers in protection on the Liberal side, said he had been accused by Toronto members of not speaking strongly enough in the interests of industrial employment in Canada.

He said the Toronto Transportation Commission had purchased 29 buses in the United States when equally good buses could have been obtained in Brantford.

Decorated Advertisement.

Then the Commission had inserted a picture of the buses in a large magazine advertisement printed in the United States and decorated the advertisement with the Union Jack which Toronto members were "fond of wrapping around themselves" when they made speeches and "claimed a monopoly on loyalty."

John R. MacNicol (Cons., Toronto-Davenport) said he would have preferred to have seen the buses made in Brantford rather than the United States. He hoped Mr. Macdonald would keep up the good work and predicted if he did he would find himself on the Conservative side.

"That's another irresponsible commission," said Dave Spence (Cons. Parkdale). "They dominate the City Council and they do things like that without consulting the people or the Toronto members. We have a lot more commissions of that kind."

The exchange ended, the House got down to the business before it—a change in the tariff on wrought iron.

HOW "COCKTAIL" ORIGINATED

STAFFORD, England.—(CP)—Origin of the expression "cocktail" dates back, says Thomas Bagley, solicitor, "to the days when spectators tossed the board with the most feathers left in its tail after a cockfight. Number of ingredients corresponded with the number of feathers left."

Governor-General Is Unable To Visit Cobourg This Year

Has To Decline Invitation Because Of Trip To Western Ontario

COUNCIL MEETING

COBOURG, March 24.— Letter from the secretary of the Governor-General to the town of Cobourg informed the town that the Governor-General regretted that he would be unable to accept the town's invitation to attend the centennial due to the fact that he would be absent in Western Canada during July and August of this summer. He expressed the desire to visit Cobourg at some future date. The communication was received by the town and read at the regular council meeting.

Casting a shadow on the proceedings of the council meeting was the news that Councillor James Harrington had been seriously injured in a motor accident that day near Courtice. Council passed a resolution of sympathy.

Permission to hold tag days was granted to the King's Daughters for May 5th and the Hospital Auxiliary for July 26th.

Street Lighting Rates.

A letter from the Public Utilities Commission regarding request for reduction in the rate for street lighting informed the council that the Hydro could do nothing in the matter until the street lighting showed a surplus as there was a deficit of about $600 covering the period of 1932 to 1935. A resolution was brought in by Councillor Archie Russell recommending that the lighting of the streets be changed over from series to multiple, with overhead lighting instead of the present method of lights on alternate poles. Overhead lighting is at present in use on Division street and is proving very superior to the other method, it was stated. Upon written statements that the new system will not cost more, council will recommend the change.

A by-law was passed authorizing the borrowing from the bank up to $125,200 to finance the town until the taxes are collected. A resolution was passed authorizing daylight saving to come into effect at midnight May 16th, and end on September 18th.

Coronation Celebration.

Council discussed what should be done in the way of marking the Coronation in Cobourg, and on motion the Town Hall, printing and police committee was requested to enquire regarding prices to decorative materials.

Councillor Harry McGuire gave notice that he would introduce a by-law covering the reduction in the tax rate due to the Government taxi subsidy. In Cobourg's case this will amount to about one mill reduction, bringing the rate down to 40 mills.

BRITISH CABINET TO RECEIVE RAISE

Increases Will Total $200,000 —$5,000 More For The Premier

LONDON, March 24—(AP).—The Baldwin Government proposed a salary increase estimated at $200,000 a year for itself to-day in a parliamentary bill to realign ministerial emoluments.

Under the bill, which deals with pensions, also Prime Minister Baldwin and his successors would have their salary raised to £10,000 ($50,000) from the present £5,000 ($25,000). All cabinet ministers would received £5,000 ($25,000) and former prime ministers would be pensioned at £2,000 $10,000). Salaries of cabinet ministers now vary from £2,000 ($10,000) to £5,000 ($25,000).

The bill also was designed to "level up" the salaries of junior ministers outside the cabinet who now receive between £1,000 and £2,000 ($5,000 and $10,000).

The Government also was reported planning to put Clement Attlee, Leader of His Majesty's loyal Opposition, on the payroll at £2,000 ($10,000) "in recognition of the fine service he renders in Parliament."

The four junior Government whips also would be paid.

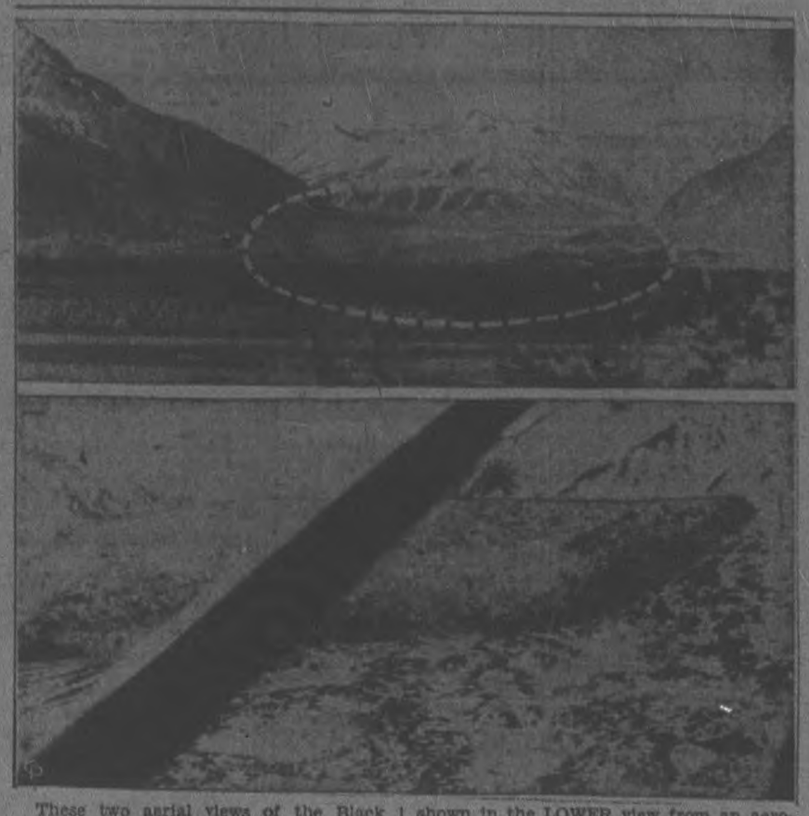
The $50,000 salary of the Lord Chancellor, now the highest paid member of the Government, would not be changed. He still would get £4,000 ($20,000) as Speaker of the House of Lords and £6,000 ($30,000) as head of the judiciary.

The Prime Minister does not receive any salary as such, his remuneration being paid him as First Lord of the Treasury, a cabinet post now largely nominal.

Baldwin, who is expected to retire soon after the Coronation, was considered almost certain to decline any pensions, as he is independently wealthy. Former Premier David Lloyd George also was expected to decline the pension.

Ramsay Macdonald, only other living former Prime Minister, it was thought, might take a pension if the proposed legislation is retroactive. Macdonald, as Lord President of the Council, draws £2,000 ($10,000).

"Creeping" Glacier Threatens Roadhouse And Road



These two aerial views of the Black River district in Alaska were made about ten months apart. At the TOP is a scene made last summer, showing, far in the background near the base of snow-capped mountains, the huge Black Rapids glacier which has been unmoved for centuries. This mountain of ice, which is hundreds of feet high, 30 miles long and two miles wide, has made rapid progress since then, as shown in the LOWER view from an aeroplane made a few days ago. It is thought the ice pack was torn from its base by an earthquake. It has travelled more than five miles in the past few weeks. If its forward progress does not stop soon, it will wipe out a roadhouse in its path and the famous Richardson highway, the only vehicle outlet to the sea.

U.S. IS PREPARED FOR ANY ATTACK

Gen. P. C. March Says Nation At Its Highest Point Of Efficiency In Arms

By William T. Peacock
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

WASHINGTON, March 24—(AP).—The United States army's Great War Chief of Staff, hopeful his country never again will be involved in such a conflict, believes it is better prepared now than ever before for a clash of arms.

General Peyton C. March, 72, retired, expressed this opinion to-day. Few men have been afforded background for passing judgment equal to his service in the Spanish and Great Wars.

"Our army and navy are at the highest point of efficiency they have been in my time," he said.

Plans for mobilization of resources in the files of the United States war and navy departments constitute another reason for his viewpoint, but aside from these General March said he considered of great importance the present Congress.

"There are ex-service men, some former officers, in the House and Senate," he said. "They don't want war, but they realize what war is and the necessity for speedy action. We would not be in the position we were when we declared war on Germany. Can you realize it took Congress 46 days to enact the Draft Law?"

March said the technical equipment of the army is, as far as is known, the equal of any nation's.

Lives In Comfort On Arctic Island White Woman From Read Area Says

EDMONTON, March 24—(C.P.)—Starting to keep house farther north than any other white woman on the North American continent was not so difficult as many would expect, according to Mrs. Ray Ross, who lived for several months at Read Island, about 1,500 miles north of Edmonton, where her husband is a fur trader.

"Well," she told a reporter, "I know you would like me to tell you I live in an igloo up there; but I don't. I live in a frame house and very comfortably too. And I live like any other housekeeper would. The trading post is about a quarter of a block away from the house."

For entertainment, residents of the post 200 miles north of the Arctic Circle play cards and listen to music in the evening. She said Eskimos liked rummy and cribbage.

Unexpected company for persons at the post has been the crew of the Fort James, Hudson Bay Company supply boat, Mrs. Ross said. The boat was caught by the freeze-up last Fall and trapped in the ice "just a short walk back" from Read Island.

"They all live on the boat," she added, "and they don't seem to mind being marooned at such an isolated spot."

Members of the crew are: Chief Engineer Larry White; Captain Ralph Summers; Mate Bill Starkes and the native boatman.

Asked whether she wore mukluks and parka, Canada's farthest north woman replied she wore komuk and artigee—reindeer boots and parka respectively.

"Aand don't spell komuk as komik, because komik in Eskimo means louse," she laughed.

The journey from Edmonton to Read Island last summer took almost four months, but she made the return trip in three days. Mrs. Ross, formerly Lillian Smith of Edmonton, was married last June 2 to the young Arctic trader. The young couple left Edmonton June 9 on a 2,500-mile boat trip and arrived at the lonely post October 3.

"It was a long journey," Mrs. Ross said. "We had a lot of delays due to ice floes. But in contrast on the return trip, we left Read Island Sunday morning and arrived here Tuesday evening. We flew from Cameron Bay, N.W.T., to Fort McMurray, Alta. (620 air miles) on one day."

Matt Berry, 1936 winner of the McKee trans-Canada Trophy, who made the tough 3,000-mile round flight to Read Island, is a "swell pilot," Mrs. Ross said.

PAPERING HOME WITH OLD MAPS

Boston People Talk Of Effect Of Victorian Period On Present Day

BOSTON, March 24 (CP)—"I'm deep in the business of re-creating our old home place built by my grandfather in 1823-25," writes Mrs. Lansing Dickinson. "It's really going to be interesting when it is finished. The great living room is being papered with old maps that I've collected and the dining-room walls will be covered with pages from an old county atlas which shows pictures of county homes and towns in 1860.

"And of course I'm accumulating as many things as I can that belong all through the 19th century, when this house was in its hey-day. (It is made of brick molded and burned right on the farm near the house).

"So far the floor coverings are hand-braided, crocheted or hooked rugs and I am trying to keep the other furnishings in the mood of the house."

The women's page editor of The Transcript remarks: "We are thinking how charming some of the old Victorian things would be in that house—a Brussels carpet, for instance. And lace curtains . . . and wax flowers under glass, a horsehair sofa, a whatnot and a velvet-bound family album.

"Remember that the Victorian period in decoration had its own charm and much very beautiful furniture was made during that time. We treasure in our own home some marble-top tables, several rosewood carved chairs and a love seat, along with an old bread.

"Victorian colors and fabrics suggest fascinating ideas for today's decorating."

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta

GIVING comfort under affliction requires penetration into the human mind, joined to that experience which knows how to soothe, how to reason, how to ridicule, tearing the utmost care not to apply those arts improperly.—Fielding.

Dear Friends:

Do you know how to give comfort? Do you go along to a person who is sick and tell them to "pull themselves together and throw it off"; or do you sit down and really sympathize and try to comfort them? How can any person pull themselves together when they are suffering, and telling them to do that only makes matters worse."

Some, of course, need jacking up, but you need the penetration of understanding the one you are talking to, or you will make the mistake of doing it to the wrong one, thereby hurting where you mean to help, and the only way you will get that understanding, is to put yourself in the other fellow's place.

If you have not had the jaundice, can you know the sick feeling it gives one, or if you have not had the 'flu, can you imagine the aches all over the body, and the general tired feeling which it brings on? But that does not need to stop you from being sympathetic.

So many seem to think that they can ridicule another out of their troubles, but would you like someone to come along and laugh you out of yours? Would you not think they were pretty hard-hearted if they did not try to soothe you a little, to realize that you were not complaining without cause? Of course you would.

There is a time to sympathize, and a time to reason, and a time to ridicule, but for any sake do not get these times confused. Give a little thought to the circumstances before you open your mouth, and maybe wound your friend for life.

Troubles are hard enough to bear without having to prove you've got them. And a good way for you to look at it is, that you never know when your own turn will come, and just think if you would like the same treatment you are handing out to others.

It's easy enough to be nonchalant and offhand when things are all going your way. It's easy enough to scoff or ridicule when you are not the one who is suffering, but you never lack for mercy or understanding when you have given it out, for what you do or say will inevitably come back to you.

What altho' your friend does not look as sick as they say they are? Do you always look as you feel? You know right well that some days you feel like a hundred years old, and another day you feel like sixteen. Yet, when you look in the mirror, you see no difference.

Besides some keep a brave face to the world, and only let down the barriers to what they think is their friends. And how must they feel when their friends don't seem to understand, when they must explain and explain, and yet get no sympathy.

You may think you are self-sufficient, that you need no help to carry your burdens, nor any sympathy when you are sick, but go it alone. Yet I doubt if you do that. There is not one of us but needs the help of our real friends or relatives many times in our lives. There is not one of us but needs true understanding in some part of our behaviors.

And we resent it bitterly when the wrong thing is applied to us, when we are ridiculed instead of understood, when we are [illegible] instead of helped, when we are soothed instead of braced, and it is all done because we will not understand what the occasion calls for.

It is only by realizing our need of each other, that we learn to do the right thing at the right time, so give your friend what his necessity calls for, and he will do the same when your turn comes.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

BEATRICE LILLIE SAYS SIT MORE

Just Relax When Worried—Or Better Still Lie On a Hard Floor

NEW YORK, March 24 (AP) — Beatrice Lillie said to-day that if people stayed seated more, instead of running around in circles, they wouldn't worry so much.

"Just sit in your own home and relax when you're worried," was the stage star's recommendation. "Or—better still—lie down on a hard floor. "I love any role in which I have a chair."

The one thing that bars Miss Lillie from being an A-1 "sit-downer" is that she doesn't strike. She is not she to worry over economics—or anything else, for that matter.

The slender, brunette comedian, mother of a rail young son, is playing in "The Show Is On," which has among five scenes in which she sits or lies down.

She loves another idea of luxury is to sit on a comfortable divan on a stage, be funny at the same time and get a laugh.

COMMUNITY HEALTH

A Column Conducted by the Department of Public Health, Peterborough, in the Interests of Peterborough Citizens.

HUMIDITY.

We all know that wet days are chilling and dry cold days invigorating. We know the obnoxious heat just before a summer thunder storm. We also know that these quirks of nature are caused by moisture o the air or humidity.

One fact we should remember before all others is that our sense of temperature either hot or cold is controlled by the evaporation of perspiration from our bodies. In a dry atmosphere perspiration evaporates quickly and we feel cool; in moist air evaporation is slower and we feel warm. This is especially true in summer. There is another factor which must be reckoned with in winter, namely, that moisture in the air increases the air's property to conduct heat away from the body so we feel chilly on a cold wet day.

We are nearing the end of the months of furnace slavery and it is a little late to offer advice about humidity in the home in winter. However, let us consider some ways in which we can improve our heating and ventilation. Most houses are as dry in winter as the Sahara Desert. Our floors creak, our furniture springs its joints, our polished plants dry up, our noses get raw, and we have colds, lots of colds. All this because we don't pay sufficient attention to humidity. If we could moisten the air, most of our winter troubles would be over. Normal, moist, healthy mucous membranes would help to combat cold germs and home would be a more comforable place to live in because of a little moisture.

To supply air with the humidity of balmy spring and summer weather requires equipment too expensive for the average man on the street. It can be done by installing special humidifiers in all rooms, but the expense of operation is too high. A few simple devices around the house, while they will not by any means make conditions ideal, will do much to improve the atmosphere. Pans over radiators or tins hanging behind and kept filled, will serve splendidly for the house with hot water heating. Where the heating is by hot air, keep pans full of water on the floor or else hang a lard pail inside the register grill and fill it through a funnel. Also keep the water tank in your hot air furnace full all the time. Growing plants are excellent sources of moisture if sufficiently watered. If you have a cold house in spite of a good fire, look out for your humidity; likely all you need is a little more moisture.

COBOURG, March 24.—Two jury and two non-jury cases were on the docket when the Spring Assizes opened Monday afternoon, with Mr. Justice Makins presiding. Willmott appeared for plaintiff and J. W. Hughes of Toronto, for defendant. The claim is for $2,000 damages and costs which plaintiff says were incurred when his car ran into the back of defendant's truck on the highway east of Cobourg. The accident happened at 2 o'clock on the morning of December 17, 1935. The case continues to-day.

SLEEP COSTS LAD HIS FATHER'S LIFE

Crippled Veteran Suicides When Boy Dozes After Pleading All Night

OXFORD, N.Y., March 24.—(AP)—A 16-year-old boy fought off sleep for hours to argue his father out of a suicide threat, State Trooper Young said yesterday, then finally closed off and awoke to find his plea had been futile.

Young quoted the boy, Joseph Benedict, Jr., as saying his father, a 45-year-old cripple and unemployed miner, told him last night: "I am going to shoot myself."

The two then went to bed. But young Joseph pulled his father took a pistol to bed with him, said the trooper.

For five hours, the boy was quoted as saying, he pleaded and argued—all the while struggling to keep awake. Finally at five o'clock he fell asleep. Then he was startled by two shots.

One entered the father's breast, the second his head.

Rawdon Neighbors Take Leave Of Mr. and Mrs. George Mumby

Popular Couple Presented With Lamp And Chair By Friends

ARE MOVING AWAY

(Examiner Correspondence.)

BONARLAW, March 24. — On Thursday evening of last week about one hundred friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. George Mumby gathered at their home on the 8th Line of Rawdon to bid them goodbye and presented them with a beautiful table lamp and chair. Mr. and Mrs. Mumby intend residing in Prince Edward County a few miles south of Belleville and will move there in the near future.

The gathering was called to order by Mr. W. J. Tanner who asked Canon W. O. Swayne, rector of the parish to speak. The Canon expressed his regret at losing Mr. and Mrs. Mumby from this community and dwelt upon the splendid support he had received from them in all church and community activities. They and their family have ever been ready and willing, he said, to go more than their share.

An address was read by Mrs. Lindsay Tanner expressing the regrets of the community in losing friends who have always been foremost in church work and social events and wishing them every success and happiness in their new home.

Mr. and Mrs. Mumby thanked the assembled company in a few well chosen words after which all joined in community singing and partook of a dainty lunch served by the ladies.

St. Mark's Services.

The evening service at St. Mark's Church Sunday evening last, Palm Sunday, was well attended. Canon Swayne delivered a splendid sermon asking his hearers to think particularly what Good Friday means to them. During the offertory Mr. J. F. Baker sang, "The Palms", accompanied by Mrs. W. G. Swayne.

The services on Good Friday will be 3.30 p.m. at St. Thomas Church and 7.30 p.m. at St. Mark's and on Easter Day 9 a.m. at St. Thomas Church and 11 a.m. and 7.30 p.m. at St. Mark's.

At the Easter morning service at St. Mark's the Sunday school assisted by the choir will sing the anthem "Easter Day" and in the evening the choir will render "Come Beneath the Shrouded Skies."

HAVELOCK LENTEN SERVICE WELL ATTENDED

Members From Norwood And Westwood A.Y.P.A. Attend Havelock Rally

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, March 24.—A special A.Y.P.A. Lenten service held on Monday evening in St. John's Anglican church was well attended by members from Norwood and Westwood A.Y.P.A.s, and the Havelock branch. The service was conducted by the young people with the assistance of their pastor, Rev. R. E. Lemon.

The lessons were read by Mr. Neal Lade and Mr. H. W. Roche, with Mr. Wm. Baskin of Norwood and Mr. B. Reid of Westwood taking up the collection.

A very interesting address was delivered by Rev. T. H. Floyd of Campbellford, guest speaker of the evening. Mr. Floyd took as his text "A Good Soldier of Jesus Christ."

A lovely duet entitled "Bearing His Cross for Me", was rendered by Mrs. D. Holdcroft and Rev. R. E. Lemon. The choir also contributed a special hymn entitled "These Were Ninety and Nine".

The three A.Y.P.A.s were served refreshments at the conclusion of the service, this special treat made possible by Mrs. R. E. Lemon.

and knew United Kingdom would raise no objections. But he was not convinced that there was any immediate danger of consumers suffering. One plant making galvanized iron sheets was embarrassed by lack of raw materials but it was because it had not protected itself by placing advance orders.

R. J. Deachman (Lib. North Hastings), W. J. Ward (Lib. Dauphin) and J. G. Ross (Lib. Moose Jaw), protested the tariff rates on manufactured and other goods imported from the United Kingdom were too high and not in keeping with Liberal policy. Mr. Ward spoke particularly of wearing apparel and complained that reductions were too slight and out of proportion to the high tariffs placed in effect by the previous administration.

Mr. Deachman declared the proposed rate of 25 per cent on this item, because of other factors, constituted higher protection than now prevailed.

"While my honorable friend (Mr. Dunning) will not admit he is a free-trader," said Mr. Deachman, "and while I say definitely that I am, I don't think he wants to be known as a high protectionist."

Mr. Ross agreed with the member for Dauphin and took exception to the minister's statement that there was only one free trader in the House. While he might not be so ardent a free trader as the member for North Huron, said Mr. Ross, "I believe in it as sincerely as he does and I believe the tariff rates in this budget should be lower."

Some Protection Merited

W. A. Walsh (Cons. Mount Royal) offered his sympathy to the minister who appeared to be "harassed by his own supporters."

He asked the free-traders to give some thought to the industrial areas as well as to the primary producers.

He was not a high protectionist, said Mr. Walsh, but he believed there were occasions when some measure of protection was in the best interests of the community. He knew, he added, of two factories manufacturing velvet that were forced to close up because of competition from the United States.

Mr. Bennett said he was informed dealers in galvanized sheets were unable to obtain supplies for their customers in Western Canada. The galvanizing of the sheets was done in a number of Canadian plants but the difficulty arose through inability of the manufacturers doing the galvanizing to obtain adequate supplies of their raw material—black sheets.

Only one plant at Hamilton was in a position to make the black sheets and deliveries could not be obtained from Great Britain due to the boom in the iron and steel industry and the demand for these products in armament-making.

On the other hand prices were rising in the United States and if supplies were not purchased there soon it might be impossible to get them at reasonable prices. Mr. Bennett urged the government to secure the assent of the British government to a reduction in the duty against United States sheets below the margin of preference guaranteed in the treaty.

This had been done before, he said, in the case of corn. South Africa was given a preference on corn in the Canadian market and when a crop failure there meant the Canadian demand could not be supplied the government of South Africa readily agreed to a lowering of bars against corn from other countries.

Needs Further Study.

"There is no difficulty about reducing the rate under the intermediate tariff from 30 to 15 per cent," said Mr. Dunning. "But under the agreement we would have to reduce the British rate from five to free as the 15 per cent margin must be maintained.

"As to whether that is quite fair having regard to all the circumstances or as to whether or not it is necessary to go further than that I am not yet in a position to state. If it is necessary to go further than that we must communicate with the British Government as we did with the South African Government in the case of corn."

Mr. Dunning said he was informed a second plant for the production of black sheets would be in operation soon. He knew at least one firm which was having difficulty in obtaining supplies, but he knew others which were obtaining supplies from the United Kingdom.

"Time is important," said Mr. Bennett. "Every day lost makes it more difficult. Every hour lost makes it more difficult to get raw material at a reasonable price in the United States.

"Prices of steel in the United States have gone up from $3 to $8, and will probably go higher. While we were investigating the cost of agricultural implements the prices of the raw materials that enter into those implements have increased 33 per cent."

No English Supply Available.

The second plant, said Mr. Bennett, was not in a position at the moment to meet the spread between the Canadian demand and the production of the single factory at Hamilton. Manufacturers could not obtain supplies from England. British producers would not undertake to make delivery in time to make galvanized sheets available in Western Canada this season.

The House passed all the iron and steel items in the treaty and reached the textile items. These two groups had been reserved last week when all the other tariff changes in the treaty were approved.

A. A. Heaps (C.C.F., Winnipeg North) made a plea for lowered tariff rates on denim, cloth used in the manufacture of overalls. There was a reduction in the British preferential tariff, but Mr. Heaps maintained the greatest imports were from the United States.

Mr. Dunning said it was a "human disease" of the manufacturers for whom he understood Mr. Heaps to be speaking, to want tariffs on raw materials as low as possible and protection as high as they could get on the manufactured article.

ASSOCIATION DISBANDS

Onion 'Boatlegging' Hampers Work Of Growers' Association.

LEAMINGTON, Ont., March 24 (CP)—Because of continued "bootlegging" and insufficient movement on the Ajorage onion market to provide for association expenses, the Ontario Onion Growers' Co-operative Association has disbanded, it was announced today. The governing committee decided to discontinue operations for the balance of the season.

About 300 carloads of first grade onions remain in Leamington and Erieau districts. The majority will probably find a way to Toronto and Hamilton markets at decreased prices.

HENRY DECLARES PEOPLE MISLED

ling idly by assisting him in this nefarious practice." Mr. Henry told the minister of education. He said the premier spread the impression the grants to separate schools were being reduced.

Mr. Nixon said the remark was a slur on the premier and demanded its withdrawal but Mr. Henry refused. The Conservative leader stood firm in his refusal when James Clark (Lib., Windsor-Sandwich), chairman of the committee of the whole, demanded the withdrawal.

When the committee voted for withdrawal of the remark, Mr. Henry still refused and Mr. Nixon called on the Speaker. Mr. Nixon informed Speaker Norman Bigel Mr. Henry stated: "For two years the Prime Minister has deliberately tried to mislead the people with false statements."

News After Division.

Mr. Henry denied using these words and refused to inform the Speaker what he had stated. Following the division for withdrawal Mr. Henry bowed to the ruling.

Thomas Kidd (Cons., Kingston) criticized the special grant of $1,000,000 to the University of Toronto on the ground it was increased 20 per cent, while grants to Queen's University and University of Western Ontario were increased only 10 per cent. For Queen's in the estimates there was $275,000 and for Western $260,000.

It was time for the Minister of Education to have a showdown with departments which were eating up the Provincial revenues, said Col. Kidd. He mentioned the Lands and Forests and the Welfare Departments.

"Purity as a Provincial University Toronto should be on a different basis," said Mr. Nixon.

"Toronto is no longer a Provincial University," said Col. Kidd. "McMaster doesn't get a cent from the Government," commented Mr. Nixon.

The University estimates stood without change and the House in committee also gave unanimous approval to a bill to increase motor vehicle speed limits to 50 miles an hour in the country and 30 miles in cities, towns and villages. The measure now stands for third reading.

Immediate Action Is Urged To Stop General Depletion Of Woodlands In County

Twenty-Five Per Cent. Of Farm Lands Should Be Put Back Into Forests

SURVEY OF COUNTY

Early action by the Peterborough County Council toward bringing to a halt the annual reduction of the County's woodlands and institution of a reforestation scheme was urged upon the Council at a general meeting in the Legion Hall Tuesday afternoon.

Sixty attended the meeting which had been sponsored by the County Council in the interest of presenting the reforestation problem to the ratepayers and obtaining an expression of the public wish. Warden Roy Brown was in the chair and County councillors were sprinkled through the gathering with representatives of both Peterborough City and the adjacent townships.

A need for action in Peterborough County long overdue was stressed by both the feature speakers of the program, E. J. Zavitz, provincial forester of the Department of Lands and Forests, and H. J. Moore, horticulturist of the Department of Highways. Mr. Moore declared "25 percent of our farm lands should be put back into forests".

$800,000 A Year.

Mr. Zavitz deprecated the argument of those who say the discovery of substitutes for wood will avoid any hardship from the disappearance of forests. Although substitutes are being found, new uses for wood are being found at an even greater rate, he said.

A survey of Peterborough county made by the government in recent years indicated $800,000 a year in forest products is being taken from Peterorebugh county. Of that sum, wood for fuel alone accounts for $300,000 he stated.

"Many people think that this old Ontario is done as far as forest resources are concerned," Mr. Zavitz stated. "I think it is just beginning."

He told of the widespread damage to Southern Ontario's forests by the disappearance of marshes, swamps and other reservoirs in recent years. Under the ideal conditions which prevailed in earlier years, moisture was conserved throughout the summer months but today the advanced clearing of the land and widespread artificial drainage results in drainage of moisture in to Lake Ontario within a few hoursof its fall on the land, he said. To meet this situation serious measures such as the turning back of lands into marsh areas and the provision of huge water reservoirs must now be considered, he stated.

Soil Eroding.

Touching on soil conservation, Mr. Zavitz asserted the county's economic welfare is directly concerned in the protection of its soil from erosion and destruction. Erosion was the direct result of removal of the country's protective forest covering.

Ontario has 26 counties with less than nine percent woodland and several with less than five percent woodland, Mr. Zavitz stated to illustrate the tardiness of Ontario in meeting the reforestation problem. Germany, France and the other European nations have practised reforestation so industriously as to have woodland percentages ranging from 17 to 20 percent, he revealed.

"I don't think any county should jump into this matter of reforestation without a survey. If your County Council feels it wishes to do something in the matter, the Department of Forestry is ready to offer its assistance."

1,000 Each Day.

Mr. Moore said his study of trees has been more from the ornamental viewpoint than the utility. The trees along the highways of Ontario were almost entirely responsible for the beauty of those highways, yet they were being removed at the rate of about 1,000 a day. No new trees were being planted to replace them.

The American desert is advancing fast from the Dakotas toward Ontario, he continued. It will soon be here if the present destruction of trees continues without reforestation, he said. Trees play a great part in conserving moisture and in conserving the fertility of soil. They are required as wind-breaks to stop the winds which have blown away the top soil of the Western United States in recent years, he said.

"I say to farmers, before you put your axe into one of those fine trees; stop and think what you are doing," he declared.

He said the removal of trees from land in the vicinity of the province's highways is jeopardizing the tourist traffic.

Mr. Moore exhibited a range of slides which illustrated the proper methods of planting and caring for trees. The wanton destruction of trees in Ontario was illustrated and the facilities existent in the province's tree were shown.

Reforestation Committee.

Reeve James Clifford of Dummore explained that the problem of reforestation and elimination of soil erosion was given attention by the County Council at its last session and a committee named to consider it and bring in recommendations to the June sessions. It was the feeling of the committee that the holding of the general meeting would be the best initial step to take.

It is up to the ratepayers, he stated, to decide whether action is to be taken here by the individual farmers or under the leadership of the County Council. The proper place to make the start would be in education of the school children to the need, he suggested. He declared the farmers of Peterborough County have cut too many trees and have been over-serious in reclaiming former swamp lands.

Agricultural Representative A. D. Runions paid a tribute to the Farmers' Advocate for its endeavor to institute a province-wide campaign of reforestation. "You rarely hear any objection to reforestation, but the attitude seems to be that it is something that can be put off. As long as that is the attitude, nothing will be done."

Peterborough Behind.

Western Ontario counties have gone far in reforestation, Mr. Runions continued. He asserted the matter is even more pressing in Peterborough County than in the more fertile counties since Peterborough has a high percentage of waste land unsuitable for cultivation in its northern area. "I think we need a definite program in this county," he stated.

Reeve W. A. Anderson of Otonabee voiced full agreement, and Rural School Inspectors R. F. Downey and L. W. Copp offered to lend their assistance in any way practical.

H.I.P. OUTLINED TO KINSMEN CLUB BY JAMES DUTTON

To Take Men Off Relief Rolls One Of Chief Objectives Of Plan

REVIVE TRADE

"To take men off relief rolls and put them back on pay rolls," Alderman James Dutton declared as guest speaker at a dinner meeting of the Kinsmen Club on Tuesday night, was one of the chief objectives of the Government's Home Improvement Plan.

Commending the plan to the club and urging the members to do anything possible to help it along and so assist in an early trade revival, Alderman Dutton dwelt on the ideal ism back of the plan and also discussed some of the details connected with its working.

The speaker was introduced by Dr. M. Grough, chairman of the Program Committee, and at the close of his address was tendered a vote of thanks on motion of Hal Leybourne.

Sound Finance.

Alderman Dutton observed that the H.I.P. brought into being by the National Unemployment Commission was based on "solid fact and sound finance." Its two main objectives, he said, are improvement of Canadian homes and employment of Canadian workmen.

Because the plan operates around the building trades, the speaker contended it occupies an important place in the economic picture. With a revival in the building and allied trades, Alderman Dutton forecast there would be a shortage of skilled tradesmen, because the conditions of the past few years have not given young men a chance to learn a trade.

From this standpoint he believed the H.I.P. would prove of benefit in re-establishing the apprentice system, thus affording young people a chance to learn trades and take their rightful place in the economic scheme.

Declaring that there is $50,000,000 available throughout the Dominion, under the Home Improvement Plan, Alderman Dutton wondered to what extent Peterborough will be prepared to get behind the scheme and help it forward in the general interest of the nation. He believed $150,000 a fair objective for Peterborough.

Charles Graham was introduced to membership in the club by H. H. P. Johnston. Mr. Graham was initiated by Past President Alex. Sqillia.

President Don Loucks who presided tendered a brief report bearing on his attendance at the district council held at Kingston last Saturday, while Don Scott outlined plans in connection with the Kinsmen Convention to be held at Montreal in April.

Holy Week Services All Saints' Church

The closing week of the Lenten season will be observed by special services each day in All Saints' Church. On Wednesday evening the closing address of the regular mid-week services will be given at 8 o'clock. Thursday is observed as the day of the Institution of the Lord's Supper, and there will be Holy Communion at 10 a.m. In the evening at 8 o'clock, there will be a service of preparation for Easter Communion. This has always been one of the very special services of the year, and all members of the church are urged to attend.

Good Friday will be observed by service at 10.30 a.m., and in the evening the choir will render Maunder's sacred cantata, "Penitence, Pardon and Peace." These special services of sacred music on Good Friday evening have been a feature from Lenten observance for more than twenty years under the leadership of Mr. George Chandler, and the piece chosen for presentation this year is always a favorite.

Services on Easter Day will be at through their contacts with the educational system.

Reeve E. N. McDonald of Dummer suggested immediate action to irreparable damage being done in Peterborough's northern districts each day.

No formal resolution was adopted by the meeting, but a show of hands was called on the question of whether or not the County Council would be well advised to take the lead in some type of program. Approval of the suggestion was unanimous. That further public meetings may be called, was suggested.

Roy Whetung of Crowe's Landing tells The Examiner that while driving on Stoney Lake last week he saw the tracks of six deer, leading from the Burleigh mainland near Don Fitzgerald's camp to Quarry Island just east of Ed's Creek. There were no signs that the deer had gone back to the mainland.

CONDITIONS UNFAVORABLE

While the trapping season is slated to open on Friday, the conditions are far from favorable. According to The Examiner's information there is practically no open water anywhere in the trapping areas of the district, creeks and lakes being still frozen solidly.

North Monaghan township's first street lighting system was switched on Tuesday evening. Forty-four lights illuminating Park street from Lansdowne to the Otonabee river went into service. The system was installed for North Monaghan by the Peterborough Utilities Commission.

WILL TRAIN LEADERS.

A training course for leaders of girls' project groups in this county this season is being planned for the near future by Miss Greta Pollard of Bowmanville, representative of the Institute Branch. The leaders will be given sufficient instruction in the project program that they will be able to return to their groups and guide the members in preparation for the Achievement Day exhibition and competition to be held in June.

EXPLAIN INSURANCE PLAN.

Shop organization at the Canadian General Electric Company for the purpose of explaining the company's new group insurance plan was expected to be completed today. Pamphlets have been distributed and the information has been circulated through all the departments. One of the employees told The Examiner he believed few of the employees would pass up this offer. "I can get $2,000 insurance for 90 cents," he said, "and no one is going to turn down anything like that."

LOOK FOR INCREASE AT ZOO.

Utilities officials and workmen who have made a hobby of operating Peterborough's first and only zoo at the Filtration Plant are anticipating an increase in the zoo's population this spring — via the stork route. The geese and ducks ought to come through with several hatches, they say, and they are counting on the young pair of raccoons to do their duty toward making it a bigger and better zoo. With the exception of the two alligators which were taken to indoor tanks early in the winter, other inmates of the zoo have been contended enduring the winter in their regular outside quarters.

Damage was estimated at $100.

On another charge of assault to which he entered a plea of not guilty, the accused was remanded on bail of $100. George Wilson appeared on remand in answer to a vagrancy charge to which he previously pleaded guilty and was given 10 days' imprisonment.

TO COMPLETE HIGHWAY.

Completion of the reconstruction program on Highway 28 from Lakefield northward this season has been assured by Queen's Park, it was reported unofficially to-day. The fact that workmen of Johnson Brothers, in whose hands the contract for the road from Lakefield to Burleigh Falls lies, are now on the scene making ready their equipment for service would tend to confirm the report. The greater part of the section from Youngs Point to Burleigh Falls was rebuilt last summer and the worst curves on the five miles from Lakefield to Young's Point were reconstructed before operations were suspended for the winter.

JUNIOR PRIZE LIST.

The prize list for the junior section of the Peterborough Exhibition will be completed in next few days, it is expected. Much valuable work was done on it at the conference of Departmental officials and regional agricultural representatives here this week. Among those in attendance were Mr. C. Lakefield's Proposed Waterworks To Be Discussed At Open Meeting

Lakefield's proposed waterworks system was discussed at a special meeting of the town council Monday night. Decision to call a public meeting for April 5, at which the details of the plans could be explained to the ratepayers was embodied in a resolution by Councillor Gordon Skriver, seconded by Councillor Wm. Nixon.

It was reported that some of the members are convinced that the sentiment of the property owners is in favor of going ahead with the construction of the waterworks system this year, but several others want some definite expression of the people. A large attendance at the April meeting followed by a resolution approving the undertaking would be a declaration of public endorsement, and it is expected that a large number of the property owners will be present.

DISTRICT DEMAND FOR FARM LABOR

Supply Of Experienced Men None Too Plentiful, According To Bureau

A demand for farm workers has arisen in this district within the past few days, D. M. Douglas of the Employment Services Bureau reported to-day. A steady flow of orders for workers is now being handled and men are being placed daily.

The demand is principally for experienced men and the supply is none too plentiful, Mr. Douglas said. Almost any man with farm experience who wishes a place can have one. The salary level is slightly improved this year, it is expected an average of $20 a month and board or better will be general as compared with last season's $15 rate.

"If anyone should come into the office asking for a bricklayer this afternoon I would not have a man to offer him," he said. "Peterborough tradesmen have been very lax in registering with us. There are a number of carpenters on our list, but we need bricklayers, plasterers and roofers. When citizens ask for these types of skilled men, we have none to refer them to."

Use Unemployed Single Men In Reforesting North Country

Mr. And Mrs. David Newell Celebrate Their Fiftieth Wedding Anniversary

FORESTS ARE DEPLETED

Unemployed single men in Ontario should be put to work at once reforesting the vast areas in the North Country with trees supplied from Government nurseries, declares 74-year-old David Newell, veteran lumberman, who with his wife on Tuesday celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding, at their home, 532 Rogers Street.

"The forests of Ontario are being depleted rapidly," said Mr. Newell. "The Government should tackle the problem of reforestation right away."

Mr. Newell was born in England and came to Canada in 1872 when the Beaverton-Orillia link of the Port Hope-Midland Railway was being constructed. His first job was water-boy on the old Hamilton-North-Western Railway. He worked for years as a lumberjack in the Parry Sound district and other sections of Northern Ontario, and later as sawmill operator for several of the largest lumbering concerns in Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. Newell were married in the Anglican Church at Huffington Village, in the Township of Draper, 12 miles east of Gravenhurst. They farmed there for some time.

There are eight children in the family, all of whom are still living: Mrs. A. H. Kelsey, Gravenhurst; Mrs. C. F. Church and Mrs. James Dauncey, both of Peterborough; William and Frank live in the city; David and John, Toronto, and George in Australia.

The best man at the wedding half a century ago was John Walmsley of Gravenhurst, who is still living. There are 12 grandchildren. Mr. Newell is in her 69th year. Her maiden name was Harriet Balstrow.

Mr. Newell believes in the old rule that hard work and plenty of outdoor exercise is the most conducive to good health.

The Bible says: "Be ye temperate in all things," and if one is to live long and enjoy good health, this rule should be followed, he says.

The rounded corner of the Royal Bank Building bears fresh scars of a Peterborough Fuel and Transfer dray, halted in a sprint runaway across the George and Hunter streets intersection this afternoon. Apparently the shape of the strange contraption conveyed to the horses that they had better get going somewhere, and they did. A VERY important day in the realm of business and finance is presaged by the predominant lunar and natual aspects of the actuating planets. Those whose birthday it is are assured of a year of profit, advancement in business and personal standing, influence and power, with flourishing. New contracts and speculation should bring gain, with intrigue, co-operation or secret connivance of big business increasing the financial prospects and enhancing the private prestige and popularity.

RAILWAY BOARD CUTS SEWER FEE TO $8.00 A YEAR

North Monaghan Wins Its Appeal Against City's Sewer Charge

CITY TO PAY COSTS

By an order of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board the city's charge for sewer connections in North Monaghan has been reduced from $16 to $8 a year, with the exception or Confederation School which remains at $80 a year.

Reeve James Milby informed The Examiner that he had received notice today of the Board's decision. Negotiations between the two municipalities about a year ago suggested on the part of the township that the rate for this service was too high at $16, and the city council was asked for a $4 reduction. Upon the city's refusal to make any concession, North Monaghan appealed to the Municipal Board which held a session here in November. Written briefs by F. D. Kerr, K.C. for the township and John R. Corkery for the city were submitted to the Board early this month, and the judgment has just been delivered. Reeve Milby said the city was also ordered to pay $50 solicitors' costs. His comment to The Examiner was an expression of satisfaction with the outcome of the appeal, which he said would be a substantial advantage to all North Monaghan ratepayers who have sewer connections and to others who may apply for this service.

Gordon's Bill One For Courts Not Legislature

Courts Are Available To Deal With Fixed Assessments

LAST DAY FOR BILLS

Alderman Gordon said today that the Ontario Government felt that the courts were available to deal with the matter of the renewed fixed assessments and the renewed lease of the waterworks power dam to the Canadian General Electric Company, and that it would be creating a precedent to deal with matters of this kind when there were remedies in the courts.

The Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs had given his written opinion to Mr. Gordon that renewed assessments were invalid and Mr. Gordon used this as a basis of his argument.

Regarding changing the system of voting, Mr. Gordon said that he did not care to press that because it was the last day for private bills before the prorogation of the Legislature, and the matter was so contentious that his private bill would have been talked out and not reached in the two hours that was given for private bills, so he thought that it was better to let the matter drop at the present time and not to have his bill talked out.

STUDENTS WAIT SHIPS TO COME IN

400 Schools Adopt Vessel Of Some Kind And Hold Unique Exchange

LONDON, March 24 (CP). — Britain's schoolboys and girls are waiting these days for their ships to come in.

Under a new idea, aimed at forging an understanding link between students and the British Mercantile Marine, 400 schools have "adopted" liners, freighters, colliers and even tramps.

As each port is reached officers despatch long informative letters of adventure and general interest and graphic photographs of sea-swept decks and scenes in foreign ports to the schools. In return they receive accounts of the last school play, hemstitched handkies, cakes, books, magazines and pictures of the school football team.

"We are doing voluntarily what Hitler is now seeking to do by compulsion," declared S. E. Britton, secretary of the British Ship Adoption Society. "This form of liaison between school and ship is now instituted upon in Germany."

BECAUSE a surprise entry pulled in his nets at the finish line, Pete, from the stables of Frank Donghi, was acclaimed champion turtle of University of Detroit today.

Pete, after a slow victory in a preliminary heat, turned in a record breaking dash of one hour and five minutes to win the second annual U. of D. turtle derby and with it a trophy about 20 times his size. Distance of the race was six feet.

Co-ed entries won all other heats and Scoop, entered by pretty Blanche Collins, lost the final by a nose—or beak—when he attempted to cross the finish line with his head drawn in.

Joe Falsetos, highly-touted defending champion, failed to run. He fell asleep.

POLITICS ASKEW RESUMES SEARCH

Daughter Of Madame Curie Forsakes State Benches For Laboratory

PARIS, March 24—(CP)—Irene Joliot-Curie, disillusioned by her short experience in politics, finds her real happiness at a bench in the radium institute.

The frail daughter of the late Madame Curie declares she is far happier working with her brilliant husband, Frederic Joliot, on their radium research than she was while sitting on the government benches in the Chamber of Deputies.

She spent nearly four months as undersecretary of state for scientific research in Premier Blum's cabinet. Long a member, with her husband, of the Socialist party, Madame Joliot-Curie never had taken an active part in politics until Premier Blum made her the first woman cabinet minister in French history.

She abandoned her laboratories, where she and Frederic Joliot were attempting to produce artificial radium. Characteristically, she announced she would be a "working" minister.

Although friends avowed she suspected Blum of asking her to join the cabinet "only to have some woman in it," she planned a program for equipping laboratories at government expense, remembering how her father and mother had struggled without funds or equipment in the work which led to the discovery of radium.

"The needs of research have been misunderstood up to now in France" she declared upon assuming office. Then, four months later, she resigned suddenly. Her letter of resignation came on the same day as devaluation of the Franc last fall. It declared she found it better to resign because of "technical differences with the government."

Friends said her reasons were two-fold—inability to persuade the government to give her sufficient funds to endow French science in the manner she thought necessary and homesickness for her laboratory.

Now the light burns again far into the night for the Joliot-Curies. The couple hope soon to produce sufficient quantities of radium substitutes to make medical experiments possible.

PLAY TO BUDDHA AS ABBOT MARRIES

Japanese Faithful Seek Blessing On Marriage Of Count And Poet

TOKYO, March 24 (C.P.). — Millions of Buddhists of the influential "pure land" sect are concentrating their prayers on the approaching wedding of their democratic young abbot, Count Kocho Otani. An elaborate three-hour ceremony will unite the 27-year-old mechanically-minded count and 18-year-old, poetry-writing Yoshiko Tokudaiji.

The rites, which will take place in Kyoto's great Nishi-Honganji temple to-day, will be an exact replica of those repeated many times in the last six-and-a-half centuries, when the count's family has bequeathed without interruption the regalia of chief abbot upon the oldest son.

Hundreds of thousands of dollars will be spent before the affair is over. The count will distribute more than $435.00 among the poor while his followers have contributed more than $100,000 for a wedding present —a new palace.

FINDING BUTTONS NO BRITISH GOLD

Simon Lake Has Lost His Home While Searching For Sunken Treasure

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 24, —(CP). — Simon Lake, treasure-hunter and submarine inventor, who believes millions lie within his grasp, has lost his home by attachment for a debt of $12,045.

The 71-year-old engineer, whose white-shingled colonial home at Milford will shortly figure in a sheriff's sale, has been searching the East River off Hell Gate for a British frigate sunk in Revolutionary War days reportedly with $4,000,000 in gold and specie aboard.

He invented a special apparatus for carrying on the hunt on the bed of the river which consists of a long tube down which divers descend from a "mother" ship. Convinced he is near the end of his year-long search, Lake admitted ruefully that so far it has yielded only a few old buttons and modern coins of small amount.

BEACH STRICKEN SHIP.

HALIFAX, March 24 (CP).—East Coast Signal Service reported to-day they had intercepted a "message buoy" had intercepted a "message from the United States coastguard cutter Chelan, saying the vessel had reached the side of the stricken Norwegian freighter Bjerkli.

"They are now alongside the Bjerkli," said the message. "Further assistance not necessary."

Gets First Drink

Swallowing his first drink of water in more than a year, three-year-old Tommy Lee Scott of Chicago, (ABOVE), signalled what physicians hope will become one of surgery's greatest triumphs. In September, 1936, Tommy swallowed some lye which burned, and completely closed, his esophagus. The child was fed through a tube inserted in his abdominal wall. Using delicate instruments, surgeons succeeded in opening the esophagus slightly until now Tommy can drink very small quantities. Eventually, it is hoped, he will be able to eat and drink normally.

DUKE'S PICTURE FOR N.Y. ARMORY

Portrait Of Former King Presented To National Guard Regiment

NEW YORK, March 24.—(CP)—The last official portrait of the Duke of Windsor as King Edward VIII has been presented to the Seventh Regiment, New York National Guard.

Executed in oils by Thomas E. Stephens, the portrait depicts the former King in his uniform as Colonel-in-Chief of the Welsh Guards. It was the gift of Col. Hugh C. Tobin, commanding officer of the regiment who commissioned Stephens, and it will hang in the field and staff room of the regiment's armory.

As Prince of Wales, the Duke of Windsor was entertained by the Seventh Regiment at a ball in the armory in 1919 on the occasion of his first visit to the United States.

ALL FORCES PLAY IN OLYMPIC SHOW

King George Will See All Arms Of Service In Action May 27

LONDON, March 24 (C.P.).—The Coronation Tournament will be opened at Olympia on May 27 by the King who will be accompanied by the Queen and the two Princesses.

The Royal Navy, the Army and Royal Air Force will each furnish a guard of honor in the arena, with colors and the bands of the Royal Marines, a Guards regiment, and Royal Air Force.

This triple guard will be supplemented by others mounted in the corridor from the Royal Marines and Territorial Army so that all five main branches of the defence forces will be represented on opening day to honor the new King.

In the program itself all branches of the armed forces will be represented, as well as school officers' training corps, and a special feature will be a ceremonial parade of the Honorable Artillery Company in the pageantry of old uniforms. The H.A.C. is 400 years old this year, and when the regiment marches past the King on May 27, it will be the opening event of a series of celebrations being held this summer to mark the anniversary.

The Navy will return to the program this year with the famous inter-port field gun display and the Air Force will be seen in a fast physical training turn, while the Marines will march and drill with the ceremonial precision for which the corps is famous.

SPEAKS FOR THEMSELVES.

Child Guards Greet Hitler's Envoy

When General Faupel, new German envoy to Spain, presented his credentials to General Francisco Franco at Salamanca recently, these two children were included in the guard of honor that greeted the ambassador at the town hall, where the ceremony took place. The children, both under 10, carried rifles with fixed bayonets.

STAGE PREVIEW OF DIVERSIONS

Attractions For Coronation Guests Are Tried Out In Miniature

LONDON, March 24.—(CP). —A preview of what can be expected in the way of amusement park diversions and decorative illumination during the Coronation period is shown at the National Amusement Caterers, Showmen and Allied Trades' Exhibition. The illuminations include royal monograms, crowns and Union Jack set-pieces besides flashing colored circles and hexagons, shields and garlands.

An ingeniously-contrived large working model of the Coronation procession, the mechanical parts of which are bicycle parts, presents a view of the procession passing from Westminster Abbey through Parliament Square.

The flags and banners used to decorate the model were cut from cigarette cards, and pieces of bath sponge, colored green, give a realistic impression of the foliage of trees. Including the troops, spectators on stands, and crowds on the pavements, the model contains more than 3,000 figures. The movement of the procession is electrically controlled.

RAILROADERS BAR NEWSMEN

MONTREAL, March 24 (C.P.). — Status of the Canadian railwaymen's general strike conference remained ostensibly "unchanged" today after two new meetings of the labor leaders.

Though no action was announced, the spokesmen for 117,000 employees met amid strong indications their wage battle with the railroad companies was reaching a vital stage. A pointer in this direction was the circumstance that newspapermen, for the first time in the five days of deliberations, were barred from the conference floor of the hotel.

TRENT RIVER

STREAM DRIVING NOW GIVING WAY TO MOTOR TRUCK

Logs Carried Over Road Of Ice Through Heart Of The Forest

SIXTEEN MILES LONG

EDMUNDSTON, N.B. March 24 —(C.P.)—Glamour of stream driving is at last giving way to the motor age. Hitherto in the deep forests of northern New Brunswick and Quebec water was the only means of getting logs to the mills. Now it's being done by trucks.

Formerly, famous log-rolling lumberjacks in this district used horses to haul the winter cut to yards near the river or lake shore and awaited the spring freshet. Operators vied for limits along these water courses, and the romance of stream driving defied mechanical progress in the outside world.

One scene of the prosaic development is Ste. Rose parish in nearby Quebec. Some 12,000 cords of pulpwood are being hauled to the Temiscouata Railway, loaded on freight cars and taken to the mills at Edmundston.

Three trucks operate from the main camp. Each is coupled to a sleigh 30 feet long carrying 22 cords. Four cords are loaded on the truck. The truck and 18 sleighs run day and night with 75 men working in shifts and loading 20 to 24 railway cars every 12 hours.

Featuring the work is a road of ice, three feet thick, extending 16 miles through the heart of the forest. Over this the trucks and sleighs speed smoothly in 30 minutes. High shoulders of ice on each side assure safety. The hard, level road runs through a thick blanket of snow.

Five "tankers" or wooden boxes containing 4,000 gallons of water are carried on sleighs along the route and used to keep the road in good condition. The tankers are constantly in use at times of good freezing conditions. A group of men known as "road monkeys" carefully check and reinforce weak spots in the "shoulders."

Kept ready to cope with a snowstorm, a tractor is then attached to a huge snow-plow and operates along the road until the snow stops. Not a single accident has been caused by the unique system of hauling.

Advantages of truck utilization are numerous. In stream driving many logs become stranded in swamps, bends and flats. This necessitates laborious retrieving. Keeping the wood clean and dry, winter hauling also saves a great amount of time and loss of logs.

It's all very practical but colorless in contrast with days when lumbermen were lumberjacks and not truck drivers.

FINDS CHALLENGE IN FILM WRITING

English Writer Does Not Think Screen Will Oust Stage Plays

NEW YORK, March 24.—(CP)—Miss Clemence Dane, English playwright in this city for a while pending her return to England to work on a story for a Charles Laughton film, impressed an interviewer:

"Miss Dane is a tall, large woman," the reporter said. "She wears her dark hair in a soft coil at the neck, and her face with its luminous eyes has serenity and sympathy."

"Work in the films fascinates me because of its new form and its challenge," Miss Dane told the interviewer. "It doesn't seem to me a very different medium from the theatre; it just is taking a different shape. The film is a more intensified form than the novel or play, and its writing involves greater co-operation, or mutual work. No, I don't believe the films will supersede the theatre, why should they? They are part of the theatre; each has its own value, but they should grow up like man and wife."

During the last two years Miss Dane has passed her time chiefly in the English film studios, although she has written a play, "The Happy Hypocrite," and has two or three novels and plays in her head ready to write. Among her novels are "Regiment of Women," "The Babylons," "Pate" Cries Out" and "Broome Stages." The last is the story of a theatrical family through 200 years. She hopes to dramatize it for the stage.

Miss Dane makes a hobby of sculpture.

Jumbo Stages Big Sit-Down Strike

This elephant, a member of the circus troupe that performed in New York recently suddenly decided to emulate workers in other walks of life, by calling a "sit down strike" in the midst of traffic in mid-town Manhattan. The animal's keepers had quite a time persuading him to give up the strike in favor of the quarters he will occupy during the circus' stay in town.

MOSCOW, March 24—(AP)—O. J. Schmidt, noted director of the Soviet Northern sea route, has left Moscow amid strict secrecy, it was learned to-day, to go to Archangel and take charge of a Polar air project believed to include a daring plan for an air base at the North Pole.

SHAPED UP NOSES FOR BEAUTY TALK

Six People In Audience Fainted While Operations Performed

NEW YORK, March 23 (CP) — Three nose operations, performed as a public demonstration, were a feature of a beauty shop-owners' convention at a New York hotel. Five women and one man in the audience fainted.

The operations were performed in one of the ballrooms of the raised stage of which was fitted up like a hospital operating theatre. Dr. J. Howard Crum operated on the three patients as they sat in dentists' chairs facing the audience, and a young woman attired as a nurse explained what was happening, answered questions, called for applause and counselled those who felt ill to leave before it was too late.

The three patients were a sister and two brothers—Ruth, Rep H. and R. H. Baker. They came from La Ceiba, Honduras, and were all born with flat noses. The object of the operations was to make their noses shapely.

STUDENTS' KING AVOWED NO JOKE

Police Smile As College Boys Revive Cause Of Jacobites

OXFORD, England, March 24 (AP). — With Coronation in the offing, Peter Geach, undergraduate leader of the Oxford Jacobites, declares "armed rebellion" to overthrow the "alien usurper" George VI. and replace the Stuarts on the throne of Great Britain has been brought nearer by Edward VIII.'s abdication.

And furthermore, Geach insists, the Oxford "King's Party"—all 10 of them—resents newspaper references to the movement as a student's prank.

The British authorities simply accorded this latest repercussion of the Jacobite uprising their famous good-humored tolerance.

Geach's rooms, with their view of Trinity College's peaceful lawn, hardly seemed a place where plans involving fighting for a new "pretender" were under way. But the Stuart champion insisted that he meant business. As a Jacobite leader, he said, he had welcomed the crisis over Edward's love for Mrs. Wallis Simpson, even though he admired the former King personally.

"Edward, alone of the Hanoverians," he conceded, "had some sense of the duty of monarchy and he had to be to be got rid of. They would have found some other excuse to get rid of him if one hadn't actually turned up."

The throne "undoubtedly was shaken by the constitutional crisis," said Geach, who is no admirer of Prime Minister Baldwin. "It showed," he added, "how empty the British monarchy was. People are pretty sick of rule by people like Baldwin."

But Geach, who was converted to the cause of the Stuarts at just about the time that Edward became King, is convinced that it would have been necessary to replace him with former Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, the "rightful King," sooner or later. "I never acknowledged Edward as King," he said. "We could acknowledge no King but the one 'over the water.'"

Already Geach and his small band of followers have invited prosecution for high treason by proclaiming Rupprecht King in the heart of Oxford. That was January 30, anniversary of the execution of Rupprecht's ancestor, Charles I. Of late Geach has kept pretty well to his rooms in Trinity College, where in time off from "plotting rebellion," he has been "boning up" on his coming examinations in Greek and Latin.

PASTOR WONDERS WHY ALL FLURRY

London Minister Says Coronation Should Not Bring Bitterness

LONDON, March 24 (C.P.)—Rev. Dr. J. D. Jones of Bournemouth, prominent Congregational Church leader, writing in his church magazine on the Coronation celebration declares he sometimes asks himself whether "all this fuss is really necessary." Dr. Jones comments: "We must not let our lavishness in preparation for the Coronation breed bitterness in the hearts of the poor." He continues:

"I do not grudge in the least the money that every town will spend on the entertainment of the children and other local celebrations, but was it necessary to close Westminster Abbey for six or seven months in order to enable 6,000 or 7,000 people to witness the spectacle, and is it really necessary that these vast sums should be spent on special dresses for this ceremony?"

Dr. Jones adds that he knows that all this means trade, but he supports the Bishop of Chichester's recent statement comparing the large sums being spent on the Coronation with the lack of a constructive plan for helping the vast number of unemployed.

Russia reports that 142,881 tractors are being repaired and will be used in transporting grain.

MADOC RINK SHOWS PROFIT ON SEASON

Receipts Have Amounted To Over $1,300, Leaving $350 Balance

MADOC, March 24.—Madoc skating rink announces a very successful financial year, owing to the large attendance and sustained interest of the citizens in the local hockey team. Over $1,300 has been taken in admissions, making a net profit on the year's activities of approximately $350. $200 of this will be used in paying up back debts accumulated during past seasons, leaving over a hundred dollars to start another season.

Due to an unfortunate series of accidents to one or another member of the team, the local boys have played under serious handicaps all season, but their game efforts in face of such serious reverses deserves better recognition at the hands of the rink officials, for without them and their genial manager, Mr. F. J. Falls, Madoc rink would have shared the fate of previous years, and of every other rink in the district, and have still been in the red.

Hockey fans of Madoc would like to see the team at least receive a word of thanks and commendation for their splendid effort.

STICK TOGETHER QUINTS ADVISED

English Editor Warns Disunity Will Lessen Earning Power

LONDON, March 24—(CP)—Potential earning power of Canada's Dionne quintuplets is discussed by The Evening News in an editorial headed "The Little Five."

"The Ontario Minister of Public Welfare, who is retiring from the post of guardian to the Dionne quintuplets, states that they have now a fortune of more than £100,000 in securities," the paper says.

"But that is a mere trifle compared with their potential earning power. They have only got to stick together and the world will pay to see them, whether they play instruments or dance or ride trick bicycles or what you will.

"But the shadow of disunity must always haunt them. If ever little birds in their nests had occasion to agree it is these five fledgling girls. United they stand to make millions. In quantities of less than five they will hardly be worth the price of admission."

Are World's Most Handsome Men, Says Miss Carol

Ranking the ten, who in her opinion, constitute the world's most handsome men, beautiful blonde Madeleine Carroll, British screen star, missed completely the masculine element of Hollywood and didn't give the world's younger element a "tumble." TOP three in Miss Carroll's album are President Franklin D. Roosevelt of United States, No. 1; George Bernard Shaw, Irish playwright, No. 2, and England's foreign secretary, Anthony Eden, No. 3. Explaining her selections, Miss Carroll asserted that she considered few young men handsome. Mere good looks do not score in her ratings, Miss Carroll classing handsome men as those who "have reached their goal through effort that tries courage and develops intellect." Miss Carroll is at TOP LEFT; Mr. Eden also at TOP with Mr. Shaw and Mr. Roosevelt, LEFT to RIGHT, below.

QUEBEC SLAYER TO HANG JUNE 4

One Companion Gets Life, Other Twenty Years For Shooting Of Detective

QUEBEC, March 24 (CP). — Honorat Bernard was convicted today of the murder of a Provincial detective and sentenced to hang June 4. Two men who stood trial with him were given prison terms on lesser charges.

Cyrille Emond was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Lucien Cannon and Wilfrid Darveau to 20 years in prison.

The trial of the three men concluded yesterday after four weeks' taking of evidence. They were accused of murder in connection with the death of Detective Leopold Chateauneuf in a gun fight here on January 25.

The jury reduced the charges against Emond and Darveau to manslaughter.

OTTAWA PERKS UP TAKES TEA AGAIN

M.P.'S And Their Friends Mark Better Times With More Social Dining

OTTAWA, March 24.—(CP). — This parliamentary session's social season has been more active than any since the depression, according to Henri Levesque, headwaiter of the parliamentary restaurant.

The most gala season, Mr. Levesque says, was that of 1927 when there were from 4,000 to 5,000 persons for tea alone every month, with accompanying orchestra and beautiful decorations. The members themselves entertained at luncheons and dinners almost as much as their wives.

The past four years saw a decided drop, especially in entertainments at the tea hour, and it has not been until this session that members and their wives have returned entertaining on anything like the old style. Now there might be from 400 to 500 people for tea every month.

This might be due to the short session of this year, when all social activities must be crowded into a brief time, or to the fact that last year was necessarily quiet, Mr. Levesque says, but in any event it is pleasant to see the social activities renewed.

MADOC INSTITUTE FELICITATE HILL

Members Are Delighted With Appointment As Ontario Fair Board Head

(Examiner correspondence.)

MADOC, March 24. — On Friday afternoon the Madoc Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. James Irwin, with an attendance of about thirty, Mrs. T. L. McKee presiding.

The guest speaker, Miss E. McDermid of the High School staff, took for her subject, "The First Woman Senator of the British Empire, Mrs Cairine Wilson." In the course of an instructive address, Miss McDermid traced the brilliant and successful career of Canada's Senator and all were much delighted with this address. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Miss McDermid for her thoughtful and interesting address.

Mrs. C. N. Whytock was called on for a report of the convention of the Ontario Fairs Association which she attended at the King Edward Hotel in Toronto as a delegate from the Institute directors of the Madoc Agricultural Fair Association. After a breezy and interesting report of general proceedings, the speaker spent some time discussing the Institute Department speakers and their contributions to the program.

Hearty congratulations of the Institute members were extended to Wm. J. Hill, who succeeded to the honor of presidency of the Ontario Association. Mr. W. J. Hill has for many years been secretary of the Madoc Fair, and has always shown himself ready to extend his assistance and courteous co-operation to the Women's Institute of Madoc, and has gladly accepted the hearty co-operation of Institute directors in the domestic and ladies' work departments of the local fair. The secretary was instructed to convey the congratulations and good wishes of the Institute to Mr. Hill.

Committee reports were received regarding the relief card party and the Institute Valentine tea, and other business was dealt with. Thanks were received from Mrs. E. West and Miss A. Way for the Sunshine boxes, and from Mrs. Dymond for card of sympathy.

Roll call was answered by "A Spring Tonic," and current events were discussed by several of the members present. A hearty sing-song added to the interest of the afternoon, and the afternoon closed with the National Anthem and a social cup of tea, served by the hostess and her assistants.

Bessie Grant, on Rev. James Robertson.

Each contestant was also asked to give a short impromptu speech on one of the topics. Sam Black chose Should Older Members Aid the younger members in our Y.P.S.

Bessie Grant spoke on "How to Increase Our Y.P.S.

James Potter chose a current event.

The judges were Dr. C. C. Armstrong, Mr. George Dawe and Mrs. Meiklejohn. Before giving their decision they complimented all the speakers on the splendid manner and material of the different subjects. Miss Bessie Grant was the winner.

Mrs. Carmen Carlaw, who had charge of the missionary part of the program, gave a beautiful tribute in a few verses to the late Mrs. Richards who, for several years, has been convenor of the missionary programs. Mrs. Carlaw gave a short story suitable for the younger members, which was much enjoyed.

PROVINCIAL AUDIT IS NOT NECESSARY

which is directly to Mayor Macdonald, and the other is a copy of Mr. Cummings' reply to Alderman Gordon.

Letter To Mayor

The letter to Mayor Macdonald was as follows:—

Toronto,
March 19th, 1937.

O. A. Macdonald, Esq.,
Mayor,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Mr. Mayor:—

Recently Mr. G. N. Gordon, K.C., of your city made representation to the Minister that a provincial audit was urgently needed with respect to some matters relating to your sinking fund.

I have made a preliminary investigation, and for the information of yourself and the city council enclose copy of the letter which I have today written to Mr. Gordon.

I send you this information in case from any press reports any feeling has been created in your city that all is not well with the sinking fund, so that you may correct any misunderstanding.

Yours very truly,
(Sgd) Herbert L. Cummings,
DEPUTY MINISTER.

Answer To Ald. Gordon

Mr. Cummings' reply to Alderman Gordon is published in full herewith:—

Toronto, March 19th, 1937.

Honourable G. N. Gordon, K.C.,
393 George Street,
Peterborough, Ontario.

Re:—PETERBOROUGH SINKING FUND.

Dear Mr. Gordon:—

I have completed a sufficient investigation into the affairs of this fund to be satisfied that no special audit is required as intimated in your telegram of 27th February to the Honourable the Minister, in which you state your opinion to be that a provincial auditor should examine the city's municipal affairs.

The particular matters referred to in the telegram and subsequent correspondence were in connection with the surplus reserve in the sinking fund and trading in investments of the fund by the Commissioners of the Peterborough City Trust.

In my opinion, there is no warrant whatsoever for any special audit or inquiry being conducted, which is fortunate having regard to the fact that the cost thereof would have to be paid by the taxpayers of your city. An audit in such matters would be of a highly specialized character, and, therefore, the more costly.

"Erroneous Assumptions"

I am satisfied you have come to opinions and conclusions as to the management of the sinking fund, the trading of investments thereof and accumulation of a surplus reserve without adequate knowledge of the purposes and transactions of such funds, and because of erroneous assumptions based upon insufficient data contained in the city audit reports of recent years.

My investigation leads me to the conclusion that the management of the sinking fund by the Commissioners has, on the whole, been excellent and skilful, with resultant advantages to the taxpayers and added protection to the holders of Peterborough debentures. The investments held are of the highest grade and, generally speaking, well selected, and the trading transactions have been based upon the exercise of sound judgment, with consequent profit to the fund. I do not think anyone competent to judge could justifiably criticize any of the tradings in investments which have taken place in recent years.

It is the duty of the Commissioners to keep invested the moneys of the fund, so that the maximum interest earnings consistent with safety will accrue. They would merit criticism if they did otherwise. Similarly it is their duty to be watchful of investments held, so that they may sell when market conditions and fluctuations indicate that to be the wise thing to do in order that losses may be avoided or profits may accrue.

There is nothing in any of the trading transactions to indicate other than that the Commissioners have been alive to their responsibilities and possessed of sufficient acumen to so deal with their investments as to reap a profit without any element whatsoever of speculative or active trading characteristics being present.

As to the accumulated surplus in the fund, shown by the most recent balance sheet to be over $300,000, it is a matter for congratulation for your taxpayers that such a happy situation exists, and that the Commissioners have kept a closed fist over the surplus and not permitted it to be improperly transferred to current municipal funds, as has been done in some municipalities.

The surplus of the fund is imbued with the same trusts as is the fund itself, and can be put only to those uses for which the fund is established. Any other application would be illegal.

I am glad to find your fears appear to be groundless, and that the taxpayers of your city need not be put to the expense of an audit as your opinion indicated was urgently needed.

I am sending copies of this letter to the Mayor and the Chairman of the Commission, so that they may assist you to allay any fears as to the safety of the sinking fund which may have arisen in your city because of any statements or rumours resulting from press reports referred to in your telegram.

Yours very truly,
H. L. Cummings,
DEPUTY MINISTER.

CORN STATE HICK FOOLS BALL HEADS WITH FELLER CASE

Cleveland Indians' Manager No Slouch When It Comes To Player Deals

ENJOYS LAST LAUGH

NEW ORLEANS, March 24.—(A P)—This is the story of a "hick" from the tall corn state of Iowa, who let people laugh right in his face until he proved he was a city slicker.

When Cyril Bismikka was called in from the scouting trails to succeed the famed Billy Evans as general manager of Cleveland Indians against his own wishes the word spread that all was hotsy totsy in baseball land; that a "rube" had been placed in custody of a whole flock of fine ball players.

Cy, a farmerish looking fellow just past the 50 mark, sat into a jam in the celebrated Bob Feller case and looked like a new hat for the other fellow.

But somehow everything turned out like magic. Around the big league circuit the men who once scoffed at the "Iowa Hick" began calling him "Sly," instead of Cy.

Discovered Big Stars.

It was Cy who discovered most of the big stars on the Cleveland roster today, and out-foxed everybody to land the sensational Feller.

While other scouts gave Feller the go-by to check up on Pitcher Claude Passeau, now with the Philadelphia Phillies, Cy ducked them and drove to the Feller farm near Van Meter, Iowa, to watch the schoolboy do his stuff.

He got behind the plate to take a peek at Feller's staff. Then he nailed Feller's father and argued and pleaded until four a.m. the next day when he got his man.

And when it appeared as if all were lost—that Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis would rule Feller a free agent—Cy pleaded his case with the tough old judge and won.

Baseball experts generally, though, say Cy had made a fool move when he swapped pitchers Monte Pearson and Steve Bundra to New York Yankees for the temperamental Johnny Allen. But it was a good deal for both clubs.

NORTH'S POWER TEST TONIGHT

Sudbury Tigers Meet Dominions—Volants Lace Maroons 9-2

REDMEN IN TORONTO

TORONTO, March 24 (C.P.)—The power Northern Ontario hockey has accumulated over a period of years will be tested in a two-game total goal series tonight when Sudbury Tigers, champions of the Nickel Belt League, meet Toronto Dominions, Ontario Hockey Association senior champions, in the first game of the two-game total goal series for the Allan Cup, emblematic of the senior hockey championship of Canada.

Tigers, who have been playing hockey for the past two months, have had a comparatively easy time in defeating Sudbury Cubs, Sudbury Wolves and Copper Cliff Redmen in the Nickel Belt League. Dominions, on the other hand, have had a hard time in defeating Toronto Marlboros, Toronto Varsity Blues and Toronto Native Sons in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series.

Tigers have had a long rest since defeating Copper Cliff Redmen in the Nickel Belt League finals. Dominions have had a week's rest since defeating Native Sons in the Ontario Hockey Association senior finals

RANGERS BUMP MAPLE LEAFS DOWN BY 3-0

New Yorkers Display Brainy Exhibition Of Hockey In Cup Opener

OUTPLAYED, OUTSHOT

Take Advantage Of Breaks—Wild Free-For-All Tops It Off

By A. E. Fulford
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

TORONTO, March 24 (C.P.).—Lester Patrick's New York Rangers swung back into the Stanley Cup spotlight to-day—the greatest surprise of the early dueling for world hockey honors.

The silver-haired master tactician's men defeated Toronto Maple Leafs 3-0 here last night with as brainy an exhibition of hockey as the Stanley Cup series has seen in years. Outplayed on the attack, outshot 45 to 17, Rangers won with brilliant opportunism.

Checking in world-beating style, they seized on each inept Leaf move and fashioned it to their advantage. And when science was tossed aside for body-bruising, rough-house hockey, they swung into that medium with abandon seldom seen in Patrick's debonairly lined hockey machines.

The victory gave them a weighty advantage over Leafs in the best-of-three series between teams finishing third in the National League's two sections. To-morrow night they play in New York and if Rangers repeat they go on to meet the winners of the Boston-Montreal Maroons series. If a third game is necessary it will be played in Toronto on Saturday.

4 Major Penalties.

A last-minute outbreak of fighting that dotted the ice with wrestling groups of players and brought four major penalties provided a thrilling climax to a game that had few bright spots. The checking was too close for that.

It started when Bob Davidson, Leaf winger, and Phil Watson of Rangers tangled. In a second players shed their gloves, dropped their sticks and moved in on each other. Charlie Conacher of Leafs picked Coulter for an opponent and others swung on the nearest sweater of the wrong color.

Red Horner, Leaf backman, swung at Referee Ag Smith's jaw and backed across the ice under the menacing index finger of Referee Stewart's right hand, challenging the official to fight. Manager Conny Smythe came on the ice to rescue Davidson and ended by almost coming to blows with Smith. Finally Conacher had to usher Smythe out of the fray.

Conacher, Watson, Davidson and Coulter were handed major penalties which didn't mean a thing as there was only 32 seconds to play and Horner was overlooked in the

A break led to Rangers' first goal after five minutes of the second period. Horner was given a major for boarding Alex Shibicky so badly he bumped off the ice, and in a power play Lynn Patrick, uncovered before the net, took Frank Boucher's pass to drive the puck past Tur Broda.

There was less than five minutes of the game left when Murray Murdock, a scoreless wonder all season, took Dutch Keeling's pass and beat Broda from close in. In the next minute Shibicky and Neil Colville fooled the Leaf defence, weakened through attacking efforts, and Shibicky lifted the puck over Broda's shoulder when the Toronto goalie fell to the ice to block.

RED WINGS NIP CANADIENS 4-0 TO TURN TABLES

Hec Kilrea Filling In For Aurie Leads Detroiters To Victory

SCORES TWICE

By Elmer Dolmage
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

DETROIT, March 24.—(CP).—Growing confidence that the Red Wings might repeat, marked the Detroit hockey camp to-day as the crimson stars of Jack Adams celebrated a highly impressive start on their way to a second straight National Hockey League championship.

Victors over Montreal Canadiens by 4-0 in the first of the best-of-five series last night, the Red Wings picked up confidence.

Having lost four of six scheduled games this season to the Flying Frenchmen the Wings lived again double concerning their ability to topple Cecil Hart's team in the post-season test.

All doubts were wiped out as Hec Kilread, blond speedster from Ottawa, filled in for the injured Larry Aurie to lead to a smashing first victory. Jack Adams and his Wings expect to make it two straight Thursday night and win the series in at least four games.

That means the Red Wings are living high again. The team that won the N.H.L. title and the Stanley Cup last spring returned to the playoffs with the old punch. Second-string forwards have come through with star performances; the defence has tightened and everything is rosy—unless.

An Off Night.

"Yes, we won't be that bad again," promised a determined Hart. "Canadiens were off form last night, but will be a different-looking team Thursday night."

Adams, Owner James Norris, Sr., and most of the Red Wings were willing to accept Hart's word for it. Beaten four times by the Frenchmen the Detroit club was the first to admit Canadiens were not as warm as usual last night.

The flashing Kilread, moved up in Aurie's place beside Marty Barry and Hrebie Lewis, scored two third-period goals to make his playoff debut with Detroit's ranking front line a great success. The league's most prolific scoring line was responsible for all four goals. Lewis and Barry got the puck to Ebbie Goodfellow in the first period, the defenceman scoring from the edge of the goal crease. Lewis scored in the second stanza, pushing in the rebound of a Barry shot that struck the goal post from close range. And Kilread did the rest in the third period.

While the fleet Canadiens, led by the fiery Johnny Gagnon and Armand Mondou, forced the pace from start to finish, the Red Wings carried far more scoring chances by breaking up attacks in the centre area and breaking down fast on the Montreal defence.

MELBOURNE, — (CP). — Don Bradman, Australian cricket star, was the cause of a court case here. Excited at the Aussie's great batting, a man shouted and waved his arms about in a street and was picked up for "offensive behavior."

Jacqueline Smith . . . didn't know she had inherited $1,300,000 until her mother had almost succeeded in marrying her to an ex-convict who posed as a wealthy young Englishman. Of a practical nature she disliked her mother's pretenses and was tired of moving from one European hotel to another when their funds ran low. Jim Aspen was attractive and all things considered, he probably would have made quite a good husband. Jacqueline conceded, except for the fact that she was not in the least in love with him. BARRIE HANDS TORONTO SQUAD AN 8-5 LACING

Junior Winners Score Four Goals In Row During Overtime

BOTH GOALIES GOOD

MIDLAND, March 24.—In a whirlwind overtime finish, Barrie won the first of the O.H.A. Junior "B" playoff games from Toronto Northern Vocationals, 8 to 5. The winners scored four goals in a row in the overtime, three of them in the first four minutes of play.

The Colts played a wonderful game, both on the attack and defence, and had they been able to avoid penalties, the Toronto youngsters would have been badly beaten in regular time. All of the Vocationals' first four goals came when one or more Barrie boys were off the ice. Dyte and Jones played stellar games at defence, and Long and Bowen were dazzling in the front line.

Goaltending was the best man on the ice for the Toronto team, and until he was tripped and fell heavily on his bad shoulder he was very difficult to stop. He looked the best pro. prospect in the game.

Both goalkeepers were outstanding in the nets. Finley had more shots to stop than Goring, but the latter seemed to have hands like a baseball catcher. He hung onto the puck so tenaciously when he caught it that at times he had difficulty getting rid of it.

Northern Vocational—Goal, Finlay; defence, Weisman, Spanner; centre, Mann; wings, Taylor and Goldup; subs, Cowan, Nicholson, Williams, Hood, Hogan Harper.

CANADIAN STAR TALKS OF DRESS

Lucille Watson Tells Her Ideas Of Buying For Best Effects

NEW YORK, March 24 (CP) — Lucille Watson, the Quebec-born actress playing here in "Yes, My Darling Daughter," has bought her own home in New York. Ottawa saw her make her first bid for histrionic fame some years ago.

"I have always had a flair for sophistication," Miss Watson said. "Even when I was young I dressed much beyond my age. Always have worn earrings—small but real pearl earrings — and I still do not feel dressed without them. A black dress—a string of pearls—a black beret and pearl earrings and I am ready for any engagement.

"But it's always been a fetish with me to take particular care of my hair. I brush it unceasingly, for the sheen I love can only be obtained by brushing. I get so upset on being told, 'They are wearing this or that.' Don't you? Who are 'they?' Do you know- I only know whoever 'they' are. I'm evidently searching for just the opposite of what 'they' buy.

"Well, my view of the clothes question is to dress with distinction and not attempt to look like any one else. I do not care to wear the last word in fashion, neither do I want to be demode. But I think I instinctively choose the clothes I feel at ease in. If I depart from that rule I find the clothes I have acquired just hang in a closet and I am wearing an old pet dress and enjoying myself. I do not believe that any style that loses the natural feminine silhouette is essentially good legitimate style.

TILDEN SILENT ON GAME TONIGHT

Not Disclosing What Strategy He Will Use Against Perry

NEW YORK, March 24—(CP) — While tennis fans and experts, some 18,000 of whom will back Madison Square Garden to-night to see him play Fred Perry, are debating just how Big Bill Tilden will combat the Englishman, Bill himself is veiling in secrecy whatever campaign he may have mapped out in advance.

The 44-year-old veteran admits that, from a spectator's seat at Perry's matches as an amateur at Forest Hills and as a professional against Ellsworth Vines, he has drawn several conclusions concerning the Briton's game and what to do about it. But he isn't committing himself.

"I don't believe there's anything that can make an athlete look more silly than to announce in advance just what he's planning to do and then be unable to do it," the lean, slope-shouldered Tilden explained to-day.

To Bill's and the public's way of thinking, Perry should be a great deal harder man to beat to-night than he was in January when the Briton made a successful professional debut by defeating Vines on the same court. Perry has, since then, become accustomed to indoor courts, lighting and the smoke-laden atmosphere. He has, in addition, had eight weeks of steady competition against Vines—"the spirit of competition," adds Tilden, "that Fred certainly wasn't able to get while he was an amateur."

Bill Bill has faced new Briton only in doubles.

MAROONS POUND BRUINS DOWN 4-1

Game Winds Up In Fight With Clapper Getting Major For Socking Referee

MONTREAL, March 24—(CP)—Battle-scarred Boston Bruins and Montreal Maroons, wearied after one of the toughest Stanley Cup playoff games in many seasons, bustled off to Boston to-day with the wise money on Maroons, to finish the second-place series in straight games.

Exchanging bump for bump with the bruising Bostonians, Maroons won 4-1 last night in the first game of the best-of-three series.

Low afoot, the Bruin machine tried to batter down Maroons' lighter, but speedier, forces with a vicious body-thumping attack. They failed as Maroons pumped in goals in the first and second periods, and two more in the third when the threatening trouble flared into open fighting.

Dit Clapper piled into Dave Trottier after the Maroon cross-checked him. He pummelled Trottier to the ice, then swung a fight to Referee Clarence Campbell's head as the official seperated them.

Clapper's tantrum brought him a major penalty and possibility of suspension from remaining Bruin playoff games. Campbell was to report on the incident to-day to President Frank Calder of the National League.

Carl Voss shot the first goal late in the opening period—the first goal of an ill-luck season for the big centre. He picked up Baldy Northcott's rebound after Goalie Tiny Thompson had made a close-in save. Northcott got the second after Jerry Shannon and Earl Robinson set up the play.

Bruins came out of their shell in the third. After six minutes, while Gerry Carson served a penalty, Ray Getliffe whipped in the only Bruin goal on a swift face-off play with Charley Sands and Bill Cowley. Seconds later, when a goal might have changed the whole complexion of the game, Beveridge came up with a step on Getliffe. That finished Boston.

They still ganged, but ineffectively, and first Herb Cain scored on a breakaway with Bob Gracie, then they reversed the procedure with Gus Marker also helping.

HOCKEY POPULAR IN NEWFOUNDLAND

Former Charlottetown Player Tells Of Advances Made In Sport

CHARLOTTETOWN, March 24.—(CP)—Hockey is fast becoming Newfoundland's leading sport, according to Harold Gross, former playing-coach of the Charlottetown Islanders during the Maritime Provinces "Big Four" days and who has returned from the Ancient Colony where he assumed coaching duties the past season.

He plans to return early next season as the newly-formed Arena Rink Company will have an up-to-date artificial ice surface for next year's activities. The surface, originally intended for skating only, will be lengthened from 170 feet to 195 feet and it is proposed to start the season in October. Senior hockey will be continued while junior, juvenile and possibly midget will also be catered to, Gross said.

Adjoining the skating rink and under the same roof is a curling rink and artificial ice will be installed in both, a project which will involve the laying of 11 miles of piping. With artificial ice-making equipment installed, it is proposed to bring outside teams to Newfoundland for exhibition games during the season.

Capitalization for the proposed alterations and additions to the present structure has been set at $75,000.

Much attention is being paid to the fundamentals of skating, shooting and other departments of the hockey game. Rink programs include "clinic" for beginners and fans along them carefully.

PLAN ICE FINALS FOR RECORD HIGH ABOVE SEA LEVEL

Allan Cup Games Set For Western Calgary's Rarified Atmosphere

CALGARY, March 24 (CP)—When the series ends and the Allan Cup finalists leave the ice, maybe the altitude will be used by the losers as an alibi—but, according to Lloyd Turner, manager of Calgary's Victoria Park Arena, that's all it will be. Just an alibi!

This year's finals of the Allan Cup, the trophy that goes to Canada's senior amateur hockey champions, will be played on the only artificial ice rink between Winnipeg and Nelson, B.C., high in the Rocky Mountain foothills. It will mark the first time a Dominion ice title has been settled at any spot between the Manitoba capital and Vancouver, and the first time such an event has been staged so high above sea level.

Engineers have computed the altitude at the arena is about 3,434 feet.

"In a single game or short series the change in atmosphere used to give local players an advantage over visitors," Turner says. "But in a five-game series such as the Allan Cup, it is not likely to matter much.

"You see, the change has no effect on players coming here for the first day or two. It affects them for the next four or five days and after that they don't even notice it. We expect the eastern finalists to be on the scene about a week ahead of the first game and the western team, we expect, will remain over from their semi-final series, which will also be held here."

But some residents of Calgary, newcomers to the district in the last year or two, discounted Turner's statements. They complained of habitual nose-bleeds and said they could blame them on nothing but the altitude. They had never suffered from them back in their Eastern homes.

Last year Fort William Wanderers and Prince Albert Mintos, winners of play-offs of the easternly prairies, got a sniff of Calgary's rarified atmosphere. A team from the British Columbia mountain country, Kimberley Dynamiters, took them on, first Prince Albert and then Fort William, and sent them back home empty-handed.

Dynamiters went on to win the Allan Cup but they will not defend it this year. The team took a trip to Europe, won the world championship in a hockey tournament at London and stayed in England for exhibition games.

Hopes ran high at the time Dr. W. O. Hardy of Edmonton, first vice-president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, announced that the best-three-out-of-five game series for the cup would be held here April 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14, that a Calgary team would win its way to the final.

The Alberta Senior Six schedule had just been completed then, and Calgary's two entrants had finished one-two in the league's final standings. In the first round of the play-offs, however, both fell by the wayside.

The ice surface in the big barn-like arena in Calgary's fair grounds is exactly the same—except for the freezing pipes put in during the fall of 1935—as it was in the days when Paul and Tiny Thompson, Herbie Lewis, Sweeny Schriner and Lorne Carr, now stars of the National Hockey League, romped in it during their amateur days. The rink seats 4,000, with standing room for another 1,500.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Jim Peterson, of Brooklyn Dodgers, is easily baseball's most versatile rookie, but he is trying to forget his abilities as a baseball coach, bridge player and magician and win himself a place on the Dodgers' mound staff. Peterson, up on trial from Louisville, has until May 15 to make the grade.

CLEARWATER, Fla.—Bill Baker, New York Yankee catcher, hasn't found that daily association with baseball's heaviest sluggers has helped his hitting. In the midst of thunderous whooping from DiMaggio, Gehrig, et al, Baker has gone to bat 12 times so far without getting a hit.

"She is not dead; She is just away."
—Always remembered by Parents, Grandparents and Family.

SHAW.—In loving memory of a dear Husband and Father, Wesley Shaw, who departed this life March 24, 1935.
Time goes on; we are reminded
Of a day our hearts were crushed;
When God took you; oh, so quickly;
And we all in gloom were thrust.
In the bloom of life God called you;
In the pride of early days;
But we hope to meet you some day;
And be with you always.
—Sadly missed by his wife, Ethel Shaw; sons, Howard and Stuart; and little daughter, Erma.

CHAPTER 43

HELEN MARKINSON phoned Janet, still in bed in her New York apartment, to join her at the Westchester Biltmore.

"Tuesday?" Janet clutched the telephone with her left hand and reached with her right for the little leather book on the bedside table. She found it, thumbed through the pages and, settling back on her pillows, she said into the instrument, "It sounds like fun, Helen. Do you know I've never been to the Westchester Biltmore? What are you going to wear?"

Janet's maid brought in her breakfast tray and set the little table legs up on the bed. Janet wrinkled her nose as the appetizing scent of bacon and buttery toast assailed her nostrils. She made little signs to Katie that she would be finished with her conversation in a moment and to pour her coffee.

"All right," she said, "then it's settled. By the way, since you want me to get a man for myself, would you really mind very much if I brought my husband? It's such a long time since I've been out with him. I think it would be rather nice."

"All right, darling," Helen Markinson's voice came over clearly. "Be sure and put it in the book. The date is the 26th. And you might remember, your husband is no stranger to me. I met him at Mabel Newbold's a couple of weeks ago. Please bring him."

After Janet had put the telephone back on its stand and replaced it on the table, she discovered that she had lost her appetite for her breakfast after all.

She sipped her coffee, nibbled at a piece of the crisp toast and, in a little while, sent the tray with its untouched delicacies back. Strangely enough, she found that morsel of toast had stuck in her throat.

Because there had already been a lump there.

She burrowed down into her pillows and beat her palms on the softness beneath her. The ache in her throat never dissolved into tears; it became a hard pressure back of her eyes that were momentarily stormy with a kind of desperation.

I almost escaped, she thought, but I can't get away.

She was thinking of the pattern of her life. She was thinking of the luncheons she gave, and attended, at "the smart spots"; the theatre parties she fitted in appointments with the hair dresser, the masseuse, the dressmaker, in with her business hours. She was thinking of the "dates" she had to fill in her time. She was thinking of the expensive clothes that did so much to make her a frequently photographed woman.

Reading from left to right, Mrs. Spencer Dean, Mrs. Joel Paynter, wife of the popular screen actor, Mr. Colby Longworth and Mr. Spencer Dean at the El Morocco.

Or—

Mrs. Joel Paynter, wife of the noted stage and screen actor, was one of the smartest dressed women at the opening of the United Hunts Meet.

Or—

Mrs. Joel Paynter, wife of the stage and screen star, stopped on her daily departure for her office. Mrs. Paynter believes that every woman should have a career of her own. Mrs. Paynter is engaged in an ambitious business having to do with merchandising and advertising.

"Everything but the funny paper," she said aloud.

Oh, Mrs. Joel paynter was very much the pert, chic young matron! An ideal wife for a mailnee idol. You seldom saw her with her husband but you were aware that there was a Mrs. Paynter. The rumors were that she was important socially since you generally saw her name connected with other names in the social register, albeit the Paynters were not in that exclusive little volume and never would be.

Mrs. Paynter attended the polo matches at Westbury. Mrs. Paynter was present at the opening of Belmark. She is usually to be found at the night clubs on important occasions. Yes, sometimes she is with Mr. Paynter. They make a very charming couple. I wonder where she gets her hair done. I wonder if she has her clothes made. She wears black and white so smartly.

That was the Mrs. Paynter that the world saw. That was the Mrs. Paynter that Joel Paynter saw.

Not the one that Russell Bede knew. Not the Janet that she really was.

Burying her face in her pillows to hide the desperate expression in her eyes from herself, Janet hated the girl that people saw.

I don't like this chromium room of mine. I don't want that black, taffeta-garbed maid. I loathe going to the hairdresser and having my hair dressed high on my head because the waistline of my evening dress demands an empire headdress.

She didn't say these things but she was voicing out her rebellion thinking them.

I don't want to live in a penthouse, I want to live in a house with a back yard that has a clothesline in it and geraniums in the windows. I want a garbage can that I can press my foot to and have the lid fly up. I want to mix things with my own hands and stick a hatpin in a cake to see if it is done. I want to darn Joel's sox. I want to sit beside him in the movies and play bridge with him and the young couple who live across the road. I want to tell the girl across the road what my husband said about the election. I want to go to market and pleasantly decide about whether we should have spinach or carrots. I want—

I've got ruffles and Pate de foia gras and caviar by the pound. I've got sables and diamonds, but I haven't even got a hatpin," she said aloud.

The maid popped her head in the door and said, "Mrs. Paynter, Mr. Paynter left his studs in his shirts. Shall I take them out?"

"No, I'll do it," Janet reached for the shirt. The studs were black pearls. She sighed deeply.

Black pearls! A man who wore black pearls couldn't ever be expected to wear son his wife had darned.

"Draw my bath, Katie," she said. "and use the pine salts today please."

In her fragrant bath she tried to relax, erase the furrows that were crinkling the smooth surface of her mind with which she faced the day. She tried to think of Helen Markinson's party. She'd wear her white crepe trimmed with the sable bands. Or perhaps she'd wear the ice blue satin and her silver fox cape.

Oh, what difference did it make what she wore! Angrily, she let the water down the drain and hurriedly dried herself.

She dressed carelessly and was sorry at luncheon that she had done so. She was lunching with some friends who were east from Hollywood. One of them was Harriet Casey, now editor of Screen View magazine. Harriet was her usual sharp self, full of gossip and leading questions.

She said something about Chris Caynor touching heights unequaled in filmdom and Janet knew that she was speaking directly to her, asking her the unspoken question: When was Joel returning to Hollywood to reinstate himself with his public?

Janet was amazed to discover that she had been thinking so little of Joel's career that she had not considered it. She didn't even know what Joel was planning to do. His play was still playing to a capacity audience but it must surely close by summer.

Bedtime Story
By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND PEETIE'S FUN

"Help, Uncle Wiggily! Help! I'm in trouble!"

Mr. Longears, who was making his spring garden, heard Jackie Bow Wow, Wow, the puppy dog boy, call this over and over again.

"I wonder what sort of trouble Jackie is having?" thought Mr. Longears. "I had better go see about it."

Dropping the spade with which he was starting to make his garden and putting the rake where none of the Bad Chaps could find it, Uncle Wiggily hopped over the hill toward where Jackie had gone with the grubbing hoe.

He had taken it for granted that when the season was over, they would return and Joel's option would be picked up. He was still Joel, wasn't he? And Hollywood had skyrocketed him to fame. Surely his place should be waiting for him.

But his place wasn't! That she knew. Chris Caynor was Joel's successor.

Janet shook off the chill that she felt with her knowledge that anything can happen in Hollywood and the chances were it wouldn't be good. It was just that Joel hadn't been fighting about it lately—not since he had borrowed the grubbing hoe from Uncle Wiggily, who didn't just then need it for his garden work. Jackie didn't exactly say why he wanted the grubbing hoe.

Why, Indeed?

"He seemed to want to keep it a secret," thought Uncle Wiggily as he hopped up the hill. "I thought perhaps he was going to start a garden of his own. But a grubbing hoe isn't the best tool with which to start a garden. That is unless the garden is in ground that is very stony or has a lot of tree roots and stumps. I wonder why Jackie wanted my grubbing hoe?"

Uncle Wiggily knew he would soon find the answer to the question he had asked himself as he hopped on. As he reached the top of the hill he looked down and there he saw where Jackie had started to dig up the ground with the grubbing hoe.

"Why, Jackie! What's the matter?" asked Mr. Longears.

"I'm in trouble," whined poor Jackie.

"Do you mean you have aches and pains in your bones as if you had the grippe?" asked Mr. Longears. He noticed that Jackie was kneeling on the ground with one paw down a hole. The grubbing hoe was near.

"Oh, it isn't that kind of bone trouble," Jackie said. "This is what happened, Uncle Wiggily. Long ago I buried a fine, juicy bone around here. I buried it deep so it would get soft and mellow. Then the other day when I started digging with my paws I couldn't find the bone. I guess it was deeper than I thought, so when I saw you with the garden tools I borrowed your grubbing hoe to dig better with."

Poor Jackie

"Well, did you find your bone, Jackie?"

"Yes, Uncle Wiggily, I did."

"Then pull it up and run home. Pull up the bone."

"That's just the trouble," whined Jackie. "The bone is deep down in the ground. I found it with the grubbing hoe. But when I reached down with my paw to get hold of the bone and pull it out, I got in trouble."

"What sort of trouble?" asked the rabbit.

"My paw is stuck in a hole in the bone and I can't pull my paw out of the hole and I can't pull the bone out of the ground—Oh, dear!"

"You surely are in trouble," said Uncle Wiggily. And just then, before he could do anything to help Jackie, some bits resting snowballs began flying as the heads of Mr. Longears and Jackie. And a voice they both knew was Peetie Bow Wow's barked:

"Ah, what fun! Come on, fellows! We'll have lots of fun!"

With that Peetie and some bad animals started up throwing snowballs. And poor Jackie was held fast by his bone trouble!

Her Life a Misery Through Backache

Pain So Bad She Could Scarcely Walk

Three years of suffering and then at last glorious relief! This woman feels it her duty to tell other sufferers how she got back her health. Here in her letter she tells her story:—

"I feel it my duty to tell you how, after nearly three years of suffering with neuritis and backache, I have obtained relief after taking two bottles of Kruschen Salts. I have been in hospital, had radiant heat, etc., but nothing touched it until I read about Kruschen Salts, and the benefits derived from them. I can walk at least three miles a day now, and before I could scarcely crawl about the house."—(Mrs.) A. M.

Kruschen is an excellent diuretic—that is, it helps to stimulate kidney functions. When kidneys are restored to healthy, normal action, poisonous waste is properly eliminated, the blood-stream is purified, and you get welcome relief from the dragging pains of backache.

Norway's winter-herring fish catch was the richest on record.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, March 24. — A pretty St. Patrick tea was held last Friday afternoon in the basement of the Havelock United Church, under the auspices of the Women's Missionary Society, with a very satisfactory attendance. Proceeds amounted to over $26.50.

The ladies were welcomed by a committee composed of Miss M. Storey, Mrs. H. Wing, and Mrs. C. Spencer.

Tea was poured by Mrs. G. Cliffe and Mrs. P. Hale from a long table in the centre of the basement, appropriately decorated for the occasion. In charge of the several individual tea tables were Mesdames C. Price, G. Dee, A. Russel, R. Williams, S. Southward, H. Pollock, and Miss E. Crawford. The tea tables as well as the refreshments also carried out the green color scheme in the St. Patrick fashion.

The devotional period was conducted by the president, Mrs. R. A. Kemp, with Mrs. C. Spencer reading the devotional leaflet. The roll-call was responded to by the quotation of a verse from the Scriptures beginning with the letter C. Many lovely answers were received. The topic for discussion, "Pioneering for the Missionary is Not Over," was led by Mrs. A. Russell, with the following taking part: Mrs. R. Williams, Mrs. B. J. W. Clarke, Mrs. R. Walsh, and Mrs. Freeman. A short talk on the subject of temperance was delivered by Mrs. Cochrane. The meeting closed with the singing of a hymn and prayer after which a dainty lunch was served by the Refreshments Committee and a social half-hour enjoyed.

HEPBURN REPEALS SCHOOL TAX LEGISLATION

Greatest Of Political Retreats In History Is Macaulay's Taunt

Says Premier's Debate Gag Without Precedent Empire Or Democratic Government

NIXON CURBS STATEMENT

Would Have Allowed Address Last Night Says Speaker If Order Obeyed

TORONTO, Ont., March 25. — (CP) — Leopold Macaulay (Cons., York South), resumed his place today in the Ontario Legislature from which he was ejected last night for defiance of Speaker Norman Hipel's rulings but his remarks on what he said was a matter of "personal" privilege, were soon cut off.

Speaker Norman Hipel declared last night's incident was closed but in so doing revealed he was prepared to let Mr. Macaulay answer Premier Hepburn's Separate School Tax debate speech had the member resumed his seat when asked to do so.

The Legislature moved toward prorogation after last night's hectic incidents; probably the most turbulent the House has ever seen. Highlight was repeal of school tax legislation by unanimous vote after Premier Hepburn admitted the 1936 amendments failed to achieve their purpose of a more equitable division of corporation taxes as between public and separate schools.

Formal opening today was delayed 10 minutes when it was necessary to scout the corridors to get enough members to make the quorum of 20. The seats filled rapidly, however, when prayers were over.

Speaker Norman Hipel called "orders of the day" Mr. Macaulay rose to a question of privilege.

"I observe that hit-and-run speaker, the Prime Minister of the Province, is not in his seat," said Mr. Macaulay. Audible dissent from the Government benches began.

Mr. Macaulay said the Premier had shut off debate last night after spending an hour in vilification of his opponents, a speech packed full of insults against Conservative leaders here, against Earl Rowe, against George Drew and others to show the courage the Globe talks about to-day on its front page—the courage to shut off all debate.

"It was an unprecedented action the Prime Minister took—an action without precedent in the annals of the British Empire or of democratic government," declared Mr. Macaulay.

"God help Ontario if the action here last night was a precedent from which we'll proceed to political discussions in the future," he said, after quoting Tennyson's lines.

Fear British Race Doomed

Author Sees Only Four Million Left Inside Next Hundred Years

LONDON, March 25.—(CP)—The British race is faced with extinction if the decline in birth rate continues at its present pace.

This is the opinion of Dr. G. F. McCleary, former Deputy Senior Medical Officer of the Ministry of Health, expressed in a recently-published book.

In 100 years the population will have shrunk from 40,000,000 to 4,000,00, McCleary affirms in his book, "The Menace of British Depopulation."

Within the next 30 years the author believes the population of Great Britain will fall at 31,462,000 and after that it will go downhill with a headlong rush.

"So," says Dr. McCleary, "our present fertility and mortality rates remain at their present level we shall enter upon a period of continuous decline that can end only in extinction."

Last Minute News Flashes

EDMONTON. — Resignation of Premier Aberhart and his Cabinet would follow immediately if the budget of Hon. Solon Low, Provincial Treasurer is defeated in the Alberta Legislature, it was learned to-day. A government spokesman was definite in this assertion.

"The Cabinet stands or falls with the budget," he said.

TORONTO.—Ontario Legislature resumes luncheon-hour adjournment to-day with a threat to delay prorogation beyond five o'clock this afternoon ringing in the members' ears. George S. Henry, Conservative House Leader, author of the suggestion of delay, had protested against time being taken to-day, supposedly the last of the session, to debate a motion by Attorney-General Roebuck that had been standing on the order paper for days. The motion was for a resolution to declare Ontario's willingness to co-operate with other provinces in passing social legislation.

Lad 3, Goes Hunting His Dog And 500 Men Go Hunting Him

Blizzard Rages 12 Hours Before Parties Find Him, Asleep In Stable

WANDERS OVER MILE

MOUNT BRYDGES, Ont., March 25 (CP).—Three-year-old Keith Wilton was safe at home today after precipitating one of the largest manhunts in Middlesex County's history. Wandering away from home yesterday in search of his dog "Rover," the lad had been missing 12 hours during a blinding snowstorm when found by Alex. Collins and Ross Potter of Strathroy.

None the worse for his experience, Keith was discovered asleep in the grain box of a stable on Orton Hill's farm about a mile from the Wilton home. About 500 persons took part in the widespread search before the boy's safety was learned.

Keith was last seen playing near his father's barn. His tracks were traced through the snow to a small bush near his home and then to a pasture where more snow erased them. As the storm grew into a blizzard and darkness fell, the hunt became intensified. Provincial and Royal Canadian Mounted Police took charge of the searching parties, and the lad was found when the barn was searched for the second time.

Fear France To Aid Madrid If Duce Acts

Mussolini Expected To Defy His International Pledge Banning Volunteers

TRY TO RECTIFY DEFEAT

Breach Be Act Of War Is Feeling In Paris—London Watches Uneasily

By George Hambleton
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

LONDON, March 25.—(CP Cable)—The issue now lies with Premier Mussolini. From both Paris and London anxious eyes are turned towards Rome to see what Il Duce's next move will be in Spain.

Italy has refused to withdraw its "volunteers" already fighting with General Francisco Franco. Will Mussolini endeavor to retrieve their defeat almost at the gates of Madrid by sending armed assistance in defiance of the international agreement already in force banning volunteers?

If he does, then, in the diplomatic phrase, "a serious situation will arise." To put it more bluntly, there is the risk that France will go to the assistance of the Spanish government.

Committee Suspended.

The non-intervention committee has suspended operations over Easter. Its great scheme of frontier and naval patrol of Spain, which was to have come into effect next Monday, again is postponed.

Under it, the British, German, French and Italian navies were to have cooperated in patrolling all Spanish waters to prevent breaches of the agreement. Observers were likewise to have been stationed on the frontiers of France and Spain and Portugal and Spain.

Officially, it is explained that the delay is due to difficulties now surmounted, in appointing administrators. It is hoped the patrol scheme will come into effect the week after next, but no date has been fixed.

In both Paris and Rome feeling deepens. Charge of breach of the international agreement fly back and forth.

An Act of War?

While one wing of the Paris press declares continual breaches of the agreement by Italy must be regarded as an act of war, the other wing charges that since the agreement came into effect the Spanish government has received assistance in volunteers, tanks, airplanes and munitions.

The Rome Tribuna adds that "Italian volunteers will remain in Spain until victory smiles on their iron phalanx."

In the House of Commons this morning, Viscount Cranborne, undersecretary for foreign affairs, replying to questions in regard to Italian volunteers, replied "all our information goes to show that that ban in force is being observed."

"Why," questioned Miss Ellen Wilkinson, Labor, "does information from the British foreign office seem to be so different from that of the French foreign office?"

Lord Cranborne did not reply. To a subsequent question he said the British government had no reason to suppose either side in the Spanish civil war intended to use gas.

Macaulay Had Tea With Two Liberals

Toronto, March 25—(CP)

NOTHING worse than having to drink tea with a couple of Liberals was the fate of Leopold Macaulay, stormy Conservative, immediately after eviction from the Ontario Legislature last night.

Capt. Charles Rutherford, Sergeant-at-Arms, escorted the member into the corridor and through the first open door, which happened to be that of Arnold Kirby, Liberal whip. With Mr. Kirby and George Fulford (Lib. Leeds) Mr. Macaulay repaired to the Legislature restaurant for a cup of tea.

PICKETS GIVE UP

Allow Men Into TobaccoPlant After Told Law Being Broken.

KINGSVILLE, Ont., March 25 (CP)—Kept from entering the Consolidated Tobacco Company plant for an hour and one-half today, approximately 12 men walked into the plant peaceably when Police Chief J. C. Babcock told the 25 pickets they were breaking the law in not allowing the men to enter.

There was no fighting and the workers did not attempt to enter the plant in a body. If one of them attempted to walk past the picket line he was pushed back, although there was no actual violence.

Two Youthful Hunters Die From Starvation

Days Of Misery, Hunger, Illness And Cold Described In Diary

BODIES FOUND IN CABIN

HAVRE ST. PIERRE, Que., March 25—(CP).—Pages of a sodden diary told to-day of the agonizing death from cold and starvation of two youthful hunters lost in the snow-choked wilderness of Northern Quebec.

Death, encroaching slowly for days, halted the scrawled record that told graphically of the last days of 23-year-old Willie Collin and his brother, Edgar, three years his junior, prevented by hunger and storms from returning to their home at Longue Point de Mingnan, which they left last August.

Painful Starvation

How the youths spent their time in the woods from the middle of Summer until near Christmas time was not disclosed in the diary in which both youths wrote of illness, cold, hunger and thirst. In their last days of painful starvation the brothers, almost too weak to write, scribbled messages of farewell to their relatives, and told how they had implored aid from the Blessed Virgin and Sainte Anne.

"My Very Dear Parents.—Before I become too weak to write any more, I want to tell you that the date that is not entered in my book will show we could move no longer, neither one nor the other. Before losing consciousness, I will write more, for what else can we do? Our souls are in the hands of God."

Deaths Investigated

That was one of the entries found by Dr. E. B. Pinet, sent by the Attorney-General's department to investigate the death of the brothers, whose frozen bodies were found by trappers camping an abandoned cabin about three weeks ago.

The bodies, one in an old bunk the other on the floor, were found by trappers who halted to peer

Think Gen. Franco Very Poor Warrior

Toronto, March 25—(CP)

FREEDOM'S rebirth in Spain is overdue and will come whatever the outcome of present civil strife, Frederick Griffin, war correspondent, today told a luncheon meeting of the Empire club. Mr. Griffin spent three months in Spain, covering the war for a Toronto paper.

Mr. Griffin declared General Francisco Franco, Fascist leader, had proved "an utterly incompetent militarist as well as politician. He had only to keep Madrid occupied, to have switched to the Teruel front, and to have driven fast down towards Valencia, to have cut off not merely Madrid but practically all the government territory outside Catalonia and to have ended the war."

C.I.O. Leader Now In City

Alex. Welch, Provincial Organizer, Here To See Carpet Strikers

The possibility that Peterborough may be included as one more field of battle in the continent-wide struggle of the Committee of Industrial Organizations for control of all organized labor was suggested today. Alex. Welch, Provincial organizer of Sidney Hillman's industrial unionism among textile workers, arrived in the city this morning.

Mr. Welch reported his intention to visit Peterborough and find out if the striking carpet weavers of the Brinton-Peterborough Carpet Company desired to throw in their lot with the C.I.O. in a press interview in Toronto Wednesday night. What steps he would take were not learned.

The striking Peterborough Carpet weavers are members of the Canadian Brussels Carpet Weavers' Association, a body with a Federal Government charter, and they are consequently not associated with the C.I.O., Mr. Welch explained. He said they would have to surrender their charter as a local of the Brussels Association if they wished to join the C.I.O.

Nothing To Do With Strike.

"At present, the C.I.O. has nothing to do with this affair, nor can it have anything to do with it, because the trade union movement opposes incorporation of its organizations," he stated. "Incorporation renders members legally liable for their acts."

The most spectacular field of operation of the C.I.O. in its battle for control of labor up to the present has been in automobile industry in Detroit. In the United States, the C.I.O. under Lewis leadership has as its great opponent the American Federation of Labor led by William Green.

Peterborough officials of the Canadian Brussels Carpet Weavers' Association conferred on the subject of the Peterborough strike with Toronto officials of the Association in Toronto last night. It was not revealed whether the suggestion of joining the ranks of the C.I.O. has been considered.

Macaulay Escorted From House Height of Unprecedented Scene Result of Sudden Closure Ruling

York Member's Ousting Believed Unparalleled In Canadian History

REFUSED RIGHT TO SPEAK

Return To Seat Is Voted Despite Henry's Refusal To Second It

TORONTO, March 25—(CP)—Forcible ejection of Leopold Macaulay Conservative member of York South, from the Ontario Legislature chamber today sent Parliamentary followers into the records in search of a parallel incident in Canadian Legislative history.

The flag-draped seat of the fiery member remains vacant as the Legislature reached adjournment early this morning. Even Premier Mitchell Hepburn's move to have the Speaker permit his return failed to bring back Mr. Macaulay.

He defied the Speaker last night after Premier Hepburn wound up the debate on the Conservative bill to repeal the School Tax Act amendments, re-apportioning corporation taxes among separate and public schools. He turned the House into bedlam as he demanded the right to speak and with upturned face pleaded with the press gallery members to take note of his plight

Ejected From Chamber.

Captain Charles Rutherford, Sergeant-at-Arms, grasped the 49-year-old former minister of Highways by the back of his collar and the bottom of the coat. With barrister-member still shouting defiance, the Sergeant-at-Arms ejected him from the Chamber. Conservatives shouted their support of the determined fellow member. Liberals shouted just as loud for his ejection.

Amid the stirring scenes, George Challies (Cons. Grenville-Dundas) rushed to Mr. Macaulay's vacant chair and draped an Union Jack over the desk.

Veteran officials and members vainly tried to recall such scenes. So far their records failed to show ejection of a member.

The Premier expressed his regrets later and asked that Mr. Macaulay be permitted to return so he could take part in discussions on lands and forests department estimates. It was a department in which the departed Conservative took a great interest, the Premier explained.

Henry Refuses.

"Mr. Speaker, I ask your indulgence and mercy in the matter so he can return to his seat," the Premier said. "I will make it a motion if the leader of the Opposition will second it."

"I certainly will not, having in mind the cause of the incident—most disgraceful," said Mr. Henry.

"This motion is entirely in accord with parliamentary procedure," returned Mr. Hepburn.

Debate That Was No Debate.

"Yes, certainly after there has been a debate that was no debate," replied Mr. Henry.

ACTION A "BITTER PILL"

East Hastings Vote An Eye-Opener—Assures Tories No Election In Offing

TORONTO, March 25—(CP)—Ontario Legislature today moved toward prorogation after probably the most turbulent sitting the House has ever seen.

Adjournment of the wild night session that brought repeal of school tax legislation by unanimous vote and forcible ejection from the chamber of Leopold Macaulay, Conservative member for York South, was not reached until 2.30 a.m. Prorogation is set for five o'clock today.

When the premier came to the end of a drama-filled speech there was an almost ominous silence. With scarcely a sound the House had heard him announce abondonment of the 1936 legislation that apportioned corporation taxes between public and separate schools.

Members and gallery spectators hung on his words as he told the House: "It is responsibility to forestall at whatever cost the possibility of a religious war in this province."

Accept Tory Bill.

The Premier said bluntly he accepted a Conservative bill to repeal the School Tax Act amendments and startled his listeners with a move that meant closure in Ontario's Legislature.

Suddenly lifted a piece of paper from his desk, the Premier read:

"I'm going to move, seconded by Mr. Nixon (Provincial Secretary) the question now be put."

An Unforgetable Scene

The storm broke as he finished. Charges, epithets and recriminations were tossed in a shouted and confused battle of words across the floor.

Mr. Macaulay leaped to his feet in protest. Amidst the uproar he continued shouting, defying Speaker Hipel who tried vainly to bring about order.

"I appeal to the prime minister to cut out this dirty business," shouted the York South member. "You can't change the rules in the middle of the game. It is a dirty, rotten trick.

Chorley Park To Be Closed Coming Fall

Hepburn In Announcement Admits Dr. Bruce Has Added Dignity To Position

"RIGHT MAN FOR IT"

TORONTO, March 25 — (C.P.). — Premier Mitchell Hepburn early today informed the Ontario Legislature the Government would not provide for maintenance of Chorley Park, official residence of the Lieutenant-Governor, after Dr. H. A. Bruce's term expires this Fall. He said he would so advise the Dominion Government when the present Lieutenant-Governor's term ended.

George Henry, Conservative House Leader, reminded Mr. Hepburn of an election promise to do away with the provincial expenditure on maintenance of Chorley Park. He thought Mr. Hepburn was coming to appreciate its value and doubted if he would carry out his intention.

"Dr. Bruce is one of the finest gentlemen I've ever known," said Mr. Hepburn. "He has graced the position and added dignity to it. If the position could be justified, he's the man to do it."

"But when Dr. Bruce's term expires I'll advise the Federal Government we will not provide an appropriation for the upkeep of Chorley Park," said the Premier.

Mr. Henry suggested a "way out" for the Premier would be to ask Dr. Bruce to stay on the job.

Provision for Chorley Park was made in the estimates tabled by Mr. Hepburn March 9. The Government will provide $34,250 in the coming fiscal year for the residence's upkeep. This was an increase of $750 from the previous year. Chief item in the Government House estimate was $10,000 for salaries.

Two Bandits Gag Messenger Ransack St. Joachim Station

16-Year-Old Boy Is Found Bound, With Mail Sack Rifled Nearby

GET NO MONEY

ST. JOACHIM, Ont., March 25. —(CP).—Bound and gagged by two masked bandits who held him up as he entered the Canadian Pacific Railway depot here to-day, 16-year-old Francis Sylvester, railway express messenger, was found by two trainmen. St. Joachim is 35 miles east of Windsor.

The youth delivers a sack of outgoing express mail to the train each day and takes all the mail for St. Joachim district from the train. When he did not show up to-day a search was instituted and he was found on the floor of the station. The thugs got no money.

The bandits were evidently aware of Sylvester's daily movements, for as soon as he placed the key in the door of the depot they pounced on him from behind, pointed revolvers at him and ordered him to open up the station "safe."

The men grabbed the sack and filled it but found no money. They then tied up the lad with some station rope and a sack him while ransacking the premises.

There was no money in the station till and after destroying many railway tickets and several documents they fled in a car.

Stand Up To Duce Says Lloyd George

London, March 25—(CP Cable)

DAVID Lloyd George, declaring it was not too late to save the lives of hundreds of thousands of Ethiopians, today urged the government "to stand up to Mussolini" and "earn some respect for Britain."

Speaking in the House of Commons on the massacres at Addis Ababa, which he described as "brutal, cowardly and horrible," Lloyd George contended the peace of the world depended on the line Britain took in regard to Ethiopia and Spain.

11,000 Sit-Downers Leave Dodge, Chrysler Plants But Set Up Picket Lines

DETROIT, March 25 (AP).—More than 6,000 striking automobile workers marched in swirling snow today from eight Chrysler Corporation plants they have held since March 8, but prepared to establish picket lines until their strike for exclusive bargaining rights is settled.

The "sit-downers" in the Chrysler Kercheval Avenue plant, last to vote on the peaceful evacuation agreement, gave their approval about 12.40 p.m., and in a few minutes began to leave the factory.

Word of the Kercheval vote was telephoned to the big Dodge plant and 5,000 strikers there marched at once from the plant.

BRITAIN BACKS FRENCH MOVE AGAINST ITALY

Use Force If Necessary To Halt Further Volunteer Landings

TWO-POWER BLOCKADE

Grandi And Russian Envoy Clash Violently Over Intervention

LONDON, March 25 — (AP). — Great Britain backed up forceful action by France to-day to halt any further landing of Italian soldiers in Spain, agreeing, if necessary, to a warship blockade of the Iberian Peninsula.

An accord by the two powers through Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos of France and the British Ambassador to France, Sir George Russel Clerk, was disclosed to-day.

They agreed, with full knowledge of other European powers within the non-intervention committee, on "all points" of a program to make non-intervention completely effective and decided it was imperative to prevent even by force, any further Italian landings.

British sources pointed out the agreement was interpreted to mean Britain was ready to discuss stringent measures presently, but had made no decision actually to dispatch warships against any Italian incursions.

Delbos was reported to have proposed France and Britain study measures to be taken in event fresh troops left Italy to aid the insurgent Spanish Generalissimo, Francisco Franco.

Halt Troop Ships.

Such measures, it was pointed out, might consist of instructions to warships to halt troop transports instead of merely reporting their presence to the London Non-Intervention Committee, a plan already adopted by that body.

(The Non-Intervention Committee scheme to halt volunteer aid to either side in the Civil War was arranged with a view to having member countries prosecute neutrality violations by their own nationals after reports by naval patrols. The patrols would not halt vessels.)

Italian officials in Rome kept silence on the entire matter, pointing out they were resting on their own proposal to ban volunteers, made long ago.

Yesterday's meeting of the international body produced a violent dispute between Ambassador Dino Grandi of Italy and the Soviet envoy, Ivan Maisky, over the latter's charge of "ever-increasing" Italian intervention in Spain.

Maisky charged 60,000 Italians went to the Spanish War about the middle of February, many of them from the regular army, and termed it "one of the most flagrant cases of foreign intervention ever known to history."

Grandi has refused even to discuss removal of Italian volunteers from Spain.

Maisky last declared the Italian "intervention" was "something akin to an Italian military invasion against a foreign country as understood by international law and the Covenant of the League of Nations."

89 YOUNG FLIERS HAVE JOINED R.A.F. THROUGH OTTAWA

How Many Have Enlisted Direct In England Mackenzie Doesn't Know

THREE METHODS OPEN

OTTAWA, March 25 — (CP).— Since January 1, 1936, 89 Canadians have joined the Royal Air Force in Britain by applying through the Department of National Defence, Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie stated in a return tabled in the House of Commons yesterday for W. W. Willett (B.C., Kinderaley). It was impossible to estimate what number of Canadians had gone to England and enlisted directly.

Under arrangements with the Imperial authorities, there were three methods for Canadian candidates entering the Royal Air Force, the return stated: (1) Permanent commissions, general duties branch; (2) Short service commissions, general duties branch and Medical branch; (3) Aircraft apprentices.

Canada was allotted only two permanent commissions annually, one being reserved for a graduate of Royal Military College and the other for an engineering graduate of a Canadian university. Applicants for short service commissions, if in possession of civil air pilots' licenses and medically fit, were recommended for appointment, but went to London at their own risk and expense for final interview. Those without civil pilots' licenses could apply direct to the British Air Ministry.

Under this head, 68 had been accepted, for four years' active service plus six years on reserve. They had to be between 17 years, nine months and 25 years of age. Two medical applicants had been accepted and one was pending. These were commissioned for three years on the active list.

Aircraft apprentices had to be recommended by the Dominion Government and were required to be between the ages of 15 and 17 years. They were attested for 12 years regular Air Force service from the age of 18.

Of 65 who had applied as apprentices, 18 had been accepted, 45 rejected, four pending and one declined nomination.

All other Canadians desiring to enlist in the R.A.F. were required to proceed to England at their own expense to be considered by the recruiting authorities as ordinary United Kingdom applicants, the return said. "The Department of National Defence is in possession of no details respecting such direct enlistment," it added.

19 ARE KILLED WHEN BIG BUS STRIKES BRIDGE

Die Horrible Death In Blazing Wreckage—Tire Blew Out On Down Grade

ONLY FIVE ESCAPE

Dead Were Members Of a Professional Roller Skating Troupe

SALEM, Ill., March 25 (A.P.).—Nineteen members of a professional roller-skating troupe died a horrible death in the blazing wreckage of a huge motorbus that sped crazily into a bridge abutment near here yesterday.

Five of the 23 passengers aboard the privately-owned vehicle miraculously escaped sudden death when they were hurtled through open windows by the first of two explosions which followed the crash. Among those killed were six women and a child.

The tragedy, one of the worst in the history of motorbus transportation, occurred two miles west of the city. The bus was going down a grade when its right front tire blew out.

The heavy machine was hurled on its side across the highway and burst into flames when the gasoline tank exploded.

Flames leaped 40 feet in the air, turning the bus into a funeral pyre for its trapped victims.

State's Attorney Ward Hall said he had "conducted a partial investigation" of the accident "which clearly indicated its cause to be the blowout of the right front tire."

Identification of bodies was made by Victor Rasputin and Irving Wayne, representatives of a roller-skating derby now in its second week at St. Louis. Six of the dead and one of the injured skated there during the first week.

CAMPBELLFORD, March 25. — Mrs. Ed. Roberts gave a very interesting talk entitled "Follow Your Leader' at the weekly meeting of the St. John's Young People's Union held on Monday evening. Stressing the spirit which should be adopted during Passion week Mrs. Roberts told the young people that they should follow the Christ-like spirit all through life.

Mrs. A. G. Wilson rendered a vocal solo "The Stranger of Galilee" and prayers were offered by Misses Doris Mason and Nellie Hoover. A sacred reading by Jack Carr was followed by the hymn, "Spirit of God" which was sung during the offering.

During the business portion of the program the date of April 5th was set for the play "George In A Jam" which the young people are presenting, a vocal duet by Raymond Wragg and Alva Mowatt followed by the hymn "Come Let Us Sing" made up the balance of the program. Rev. Harold B. Neale pronounced the benediction and the meeting was brought to a close.

Plans Amateur Hour.

At their weekly meeting the Anglican Young People's Association planned to hold an amateur hour as the main feature of their next weekly program. Miss Vera Wood, president, presided over the program which was devoted to the showing of lantern slides on "The Kingdom of God Movement In Japan" accompanied by a lecture on the subject by Mr. Kerr.

All Sit-Down Strikes Taboo Says Ottawa

Will Use All Resources And Agencies At Command To Prevent Introduction

TEND TO RIOTING

OTTAWA, March 25.—(CP). — To the extent of its legal powers the Dominion government will use all resources and agencies at its command to prevent the introduction or spread of the sit-down strike movement in Canada.

Justice Minister Lapointe made this declaration in the House of Commons yesterday in reply to a question from Norman McLarty, Liberal member for Essex West. He said the sit-down strike would be wholly illegal in Canada, would tend to undermine respect for law, might disrupt the business of the country and lead to riot and disorder.

No particular case was mentioned either by Mr. Lapointe or Mr. McLarty, but the latter represents the city of Windsor, just across the river from Detroit where sit-down strikes have been common.

ONTARIO, OTTAWA CLOSURES DIFFER

Rules Governing Debate In Province Much More Elastic

TORONTO, March 25 (CP).—Premier Hepburn's motion "that the question now be put," coming suddenly at the end of his speech announcing his willingness to repeal separate school tax legislation, caused comment last night about the legislative buildings on the operation of closure in the Ontario House.

Major Alex. Lewis, clerk of the Legislative Assembly, said the motion was in effect closure and might be called such. He explained that rules of the Ontario House do not provide for formal closure motions as used in the Dominion Parliament.

"Closure is entirely different at Ottawa," said Major Lewis. "There it is a government prerogative. A private member cannot make the closing motion. Closure in the Federal Parliament is a notice from the government that at a certain time only so much more time will be given to the debate on the question before the House."

Queried on the point, Speaker Norman Hipel said: "You can call it closure if you like."

"The usual term for the practice is 'moving the previous question'," he added. "It has frequently been used in the Ontario Legislature. In committee it can't be used. It certainly terminates a debate as effectively as it can be done."

It was pointed out that rules governing debate in the Ontario Legislature are generally more elastic than those in the Federal Parliament.

LAKEFIELD CHILD AT HOME ON AIR

Little Jean Millar Says She Was Not At All Nervous In Broadcast

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LAKEFIELD, March 25.—Jean Millar, 11-year-old tap dancer and singer, who performed on Weston's Safety Club program over CFRB on Saturday evening, as a result of a radio contest held in the Capitol Theatre, in Peterborough, when she stood second, did not feel shy or nervous at all when she got up to sing, she told The Examiner to-day.

"The broadcast was held in a fairly large room, with a platform. I sat on the platform with the other girls and boys who were singing, and Mother and Daddy sat down below and listened to the whole program. It was something like the town-hall and there were quite a few people listening to us; but you had to have a pass or be a relative of someone on the program to get in," Jean said.

"There were three microphones, and when I sang, I stood in front of one which was on a pulley so that it could be pulled down low when I danced.

"I wasn't nervous at all," Jean said, and I didn't feel shy; Uncle Bill introduced me to some of the girls who were broadcasting. I'd love to broadcast again," she said.

At the conclusion of her number, Uncle Bill, master of ceremonies, expressed the hope that Jean could come back on the program sometime again.

FINALLY TRAPPED

DETROIT, March 25 (CP)—Walter D. Beaton, 29, who admitted in federal court he had crossed the border between Canada and the United States "about two dozen times" illegally, was sentenced to serve six months in the Federal Detention Farm at Milan today. He lives in Windsor. He pleaded guilty to illegal entry before Judge Arthur F. Lederle.

DEPENDS ON THE ITALIANS.

ROME, March 25 (A.P.). — The newspaper La Tribuna proclaimed in a front page editorial to-day that the outcome of the Spanish Civil War now depends on the "Italian volunteers" fighting in it.

Other papers gave prominence to London reports that the Italian ambassador, Count Grandi, had stated Italian volunteers would remain in Spain until General Francisco Franco's insurgents are victorious.

An American petroleum company is preparing to sell its products in India, and a price war is threatened.

SPEEDING HOUSE MAY SEE SESSION OVER BY APRIL 10

Seven Million Additional Estimates Are Passed—Biological Board Renamed

"FISHERIES RESEARCH"

OTTAWA, March 25 (C.P.). — Speedy progress in the House of Commons including passage yesterday of the committee stage of the Canada-United Kingdom trade agreement has strengthened the belief that prorogation may be reached by April 10. This will provide a breathing space before the Canadian delegations depart for the Coronation and Imperial Conference in London.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has promised to inform the House to-day what additional legislation will be brought forward in addition to that already on the order paper. Bills will be added to the Government's program.

In addition to adoption of the agreement resolutions and introduction of the Bill based upon them, the House yesterday dealt with a large number of Budget tariff changes, passed a $7,000,000 block of supplementary estimates, and dealt with several Government measures.

Answering a question as to the Government's attitude toward "sit-down strikes," Justice Minister Lapointe placed all the resources of the Dominion in opposition to the progress of this illegal mode of procedure in Canada.

Fisheries Minister Michaud put through all stages a Bill to change the name of the Biological Board of Canada to the "Fisheries Research Board of Canada" and to alter the system of appointing personnel. The board is composed of voluntary workers and the proposal is to have the minister appoint two from his department, two each from the Atlantic and Pacific Coast fisheries, and nine scientists nominated by Canadian universities.

JANETVILLE

GRANNIES SHINE IN FINE PROGRAM

Janetville Women's Institute Enjoy Varied Offerings By Elder Women

(Examiner Correspondence.)

JANETVILLE, March 25. — Mrs. (Rev.) Wolfraim was the hostess for the regular meeting of the Women's Institute, which was held at the parsonage on Thursday afternoon. Thirty-four members and several visitors were present for this special occasion, which was the annual grandmothers' meeting.

The president, Mrs. Bert McMullen, presided, and after the usual opening exercises with Mrs. Hill at the piano, the secretary, Mrs. P. Hamilton, read the minutes. The correspondence included a letter from Lindsay, requesting a donation toward prize money for the coming music festival. This was held over for further information, as entries will possibly not be received from here, since it is out of the County of Victoria.

A number of members thanked the Institute for fruit received during illness.

The treasurer, Mrs. Wesley Campbell, gave a detailed report showing a balance of $40 after paying several bills.

A nominating committee comprised of the following ex-presidents was appointed to draw up a slate of officers for the election in April, namely: Mrs. Charles McNeil, Mrs. J. Capstick, Mrs. O. Wilson, Mrs. E. Bradburn, and Mrs. W. Hill.

Wear Old Costumes

The grandmothers, who presented the following program, then retired to another room to array themselves in frills and flounces of former days and upon re-entering were welcomed with the singing of "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows";—

Chairman, Grandma Bradburn (Mrs. W. G.); reading, Grandma McMullen; reading, "Grandma Speaks," by Grandma Howe; reading, "The Touch of the Master Hand," Grandma Bradburn; a vocal solo "The Church by the Side of the Road," by Mrs. (Rev.) Walker accompanied by Miss Bessie Howe was very much enjoyed and was dedicated by Mrs. Walker to the grandmothers who were being honored and to the dear grandmothers who had passed on. Reading, "Granny," by Grandma Capstick, a newly-elected member to the ranks; reading, "Mother Murmurs," Grandma Heaslip (Mrs. A.); solo, "Jesus Lover of My Soul," Grandma Aruel reading, "The Rose of Sharon," Grandma Armstrong; a vocal duet, "Janet and Jamie," impersonated by Rev. and Mrs. H. C. Wolfraim; reading, "What Is Success," Grandma Stinson (Mrs. Sam.); reading, "An Irish Story," Grandma Heaslip (Mrs. Harry), who responded with a piano solo as encore; reading, "Grandmother's Sermon," by Grandma Hill; reading, "A Request," Grandma Nicholson.

After a few remarks by Rev. Mr. Wolfraim the meeting closed with the singing of "Good Night, Ladies," by the grandmothers, and the National Anthem.

The grandmothers were then ushered to the dining room and seated, fourteen in number, around the table which was beautifully done with a pure Irish linen, hand-embroidered tablecloth, centered with a cut-glass bowl of Spring tulips placed on a reflector surrounded by favors in keeping with the St. Patrick's season. Silver candlesticks with lighted green tapers and green shaded lights added materially to the attractive appearance of the spacious rooms.

At the conclusion of the delicious supper a vote of thanks was extended to Mrs. Wolfraim by Mrs. O. Bradburn on behalf of the grandmothers, and Mrs. (Rev.) Walker conveyed the appreciation of the entire assemblage for the kind hospitality extended by Rev. and Mrs. Wolfraim.

WARRIORS' CORONATION BALL, Mar. 29, 1937

THE Royal Road TO THE CORONATION

THEIR MAJESTIES, KING GEORGE VI AND QUEEN ELIZABETH, AND THE NEW ROYAL CIPHER

ON the twelfth day of May in this historic year, the British Empire gathers in its capital city to crown a new King and Queen. The eyes of the world will be focused on London that day, to watch not only the pomp and ceremony with which the greatest empire of all time hails its new monarchs, but to see another page of history returned.

Little over a year ago, beloved King George V passed away to close a reign during which the love and loyalty of the British Empire's peoples toward their King and Queen swelled to a new high. Hardly five months before King George VI comes to historic Westminster to be acclaimed as the people's liege lord, he stepped to the throne under staggering circumstances and shouldered manfully a burden that he had not been reared to bear.

In those five months, the man whom the world knew and respected as Prince Albert, Duke of York, has earned a new measure of love and admiration from his people for his courageous facing of the burden of kingship. With his popular consort Queen Elizabeth, he comes to the Coronation to stand in the pitiless glare of the world spotlight in what will be one of the most gorgeous and glittering spectacles of all time.

They come to the Coronation, this king and queen, perhaps somewhat less known than had the floodlight of royalty been upon them throughout their lives as probable occupants of the throne, but his majesty has garnered in his 42 years of life, a firm and understanding grasp of empire and world affairs, more acute by reason of his flair for observance and analysis. Their majesties' road to the Coronation has not been trod with the glare of public interest that now surrounds them, but it has been trod wisely and well. The story that the day-to-day presentation of this Coronation year series of pictures will tell, will be the story of a man and woman raised with British family ideals before them, and carrying out their allotted tasks in life honorably and well.

To-day's pictures show them as they are to-day and as they will appear to a loyal empire on May 12th.

Next: Childhood.

U.S. HARKS BACK 20 YEARS AFTER TO WAR'S ENTRY

Republic Recalls Nation's Declaration Against Germany Good Friday, 1917

REACTION OF PEOPLE

WASHINGTON, March 25 (AP)—The United States plunged into the world war 20 years ago, on a sombre Good Friday — anniversary of the crucifixion of the Nazarene who exhorted all men to peace and good will.

On April 6, 1917, President Woodrow Wilson signed the war resolution with a pen handed to him by his wife in the White House. The most momentous declaration since the Civil War was wig-wagged from a window to the navy department and sent from there to United States naval stations and vessels throughout the world.

The American eagle had been flapping its wings for two months. Early in February the United States had severed diplomatic relations with Germany following the announced resumption of unrestricted operations by Germany's submarines. Continued sinking of merchant ships with Americans aboard and alleged attempts to induce Mexico to war on the United States led to the belief that U.S. entrance into the hostilities was inevitable.

But despite the patriotic fervor of the American nation there was opposition to the war resolution when Wilson appeared before a special session of Congress on April 2 for a declaration of the existence of war. Senator Robert LaFollette and Senator George W. Norris led an ineffective opposition.

"We are going into war upon command of gold," Norris said. "We are about to do the bidding of wealth's terrible mandate, make millions of countrymen suffer, untold generations bear burdens and shed their lifeblood all because we want to preserve our commercial right to deliver munitions to the belligerents."

When the resolution passed Congress was asked immediately for $3,-400,000,000 for a war budget. Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, announced plans for the fleet's co-operation with Britain and France while Herbert Hoover, of Belgian relief fame and afterwards President, came home to head the food administration and inaugurate meatless and wheatless days.

Patriotic enthusiasm mounted to hysteria among an emotional and jingoistic minority. Cracker-box and sewing circle whispers circulated that pre-war respected German-Americans were spies in the pay of the Kaiser.

While the first raw recruits went off to training camps women in grotesque khaki blouses and skirts drilled with dummy wooden guns. Members of a concert audience walked out when Madame Schumann-Heink sang "Holy Night" in German. Two of her sons were to die in battle—one on the German side, one on the Americans. Years after the war millions listened to the great contralto singing "Holy Night" in German—and loved it.

The name of German fried potatoes was changed to American fried, sauerkraut became Liberty cabbage, Bands blared "Goodbye Broadway, Hello France" and parlor-piano groups sang the plaintive "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

It was a jaunty as well as determined United States which embarked in the spring of 1917 on "the great adventure of saving the world for democracy." The long casualty lists had not yet appeared to tell their story.

Hard-Boiled Algoma Wolves Are Wanted By Soo Editor

Five Of City's Wolf Pack Killed After Breaking From Cage

$100 REWARD STANDS

SAULT STE. MARIE, March 25 (CP)—Editor Jim Curran of the Sault Star is on the lookout for a few hard-boiled Algoma wolves. Two weeks ago five of the city's wolf-pack were killed after breaking out of their cage and now Mr. Curran, whose $100 reward to anyone who proves a wolf attacked a man is still open, advertises in a two-column front-page box.

"The recent slaughter of five of the Soo's pack of timber wolves and the escape of another has reduced the number to a single pair. As the pack was an outstanding lure for tourists, it is now desired to restore it to its original number, and the assistance of trappers, woodsmen and settlers is asked towards this end.

"Of course wolves which have attacked somebody, a lumberjack preferably, are particularly wanted—and if there are readers who have been 'et' by one or more—special efforts should be made to secure these. But pups will do if the worst comes to the worst. Please do not send brush wolves, as these bluffs terrify nobody, not even a Toronto editor.

"The editor knows that in this crisis the hardy brush rangers, coureurs de bois, voyageurs, prospectors, Indians, lumberjacks and so on—who have lulled him out of a hole so often in the past—will not now let him down. The true story, or otherwise, of the capture should accompany the animal if possible. Anyway let's hear from everybody.

"Pups will be available all over Algoma by the middle of May. Readers are asked to make arrangements in time and notify.

"P.S.—Captor's name will be given wolf if desired."

The Closing Is Welcomed

It is high time members of the Ontario Legislature closed up shop and went home. And high time for the House leaders to stop for a moment and consider if they are not turning the Legislature into a hall where with no admission charged one may be served with wise-cracks, mean phrases and cheap exhibitions of overblown rhetoric.

Within recent days Premier Hepburn charged the Conservative members who were opposing added powers to the Securities Commission with trying to cover up a lot of crooks," and that remark set the grass on fire. It was not withdrawn.

In the next session Mr. Henry was discussing reasons for repealing the School Assessment Act, and charged Premier Hepburn with "deliberately misleading or attempting to mislead the people of Ontario." After a great deal of wrangling that statement was withdrawn.

The gentlemen who gather at Toronto have much to learn. The lamentable feature is they do not seem to have the necessary inclination in that direction.

Turning toward the honored memory of one great Canadian statesman, Sir Wilfred Laurier, it is well to recall that although he passed through many campaigns, indulged in countless debates in the House, he never spoke to hurt. The election of 1917 saw him parting company with life-long supporters, but through it all Sir Wilfred remained the gentleman. One of his last recorded letters was written to a political friend in the West who was much perturbed by the turn of events and the failure of the government to repeal the War Time Election Act. The reply of Sir Wilfred was a typical Laurier utterance, starting this way:

"The situation is a very simple one to me. It is never sound policy to harbor a grudge nor even to resent an injury except when inspired by sheer malice."

One of his last public appearances was before the Western Ontario Liberal Association at London. To the young Liberals he said:

"As you who stand today on the threshhold of life, with a long horizon open before you for a long career of usefulness to your native land, if you will permit me, after a long life, I shall remind you that already many problems rise before you; problems of race division, problems of creed differences, problems of economic conflict, problems for the solution of these problems you have a safe guide, an unfailing light, if you remember that faith is better than doubt and love is better than hate.

"Banish doubt and hate from your lives. Let your souls be ever open to the promptings of faith and the gentle influence of brotherly love. Be adamant against the haughty, be gentle and kind to the weak. Let your aim and purpose, in good report or ill, in victory or defeat, be so to live, so to strive, so to serve as to do your part to raise ever higher the standard of life and of living."

If a shadow of so great a man as Sir Wilfred Laurier could pass over the Ontario Legislature it might serve good purpose. Faces referred to as white with anger have never been known to solve problems or to advance worthy legislation. Nor does the shaking fist indicate that the province is being well served. It is well that the hour of closing is at hand.

The Press Did Not Do It

H. L. Cummings, Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs, sent a letter to Peterborough in which he made it plain there was no justification for an audit of the business of the City Trust. In his concluding statement Mr. Cummings says he forwarded several copies of his letter so they might be of assistance in "allaying any fears as to the safety of the sinking fund which may have arisen in your city because of any statements or rumors resulting from press reports referred to in your telegram."

It should be plainly stated that press reports did not have anything to do with suggesting that affairs of the City Trust should be investigated or audited. The Examiner is just as jealous of the reputation of the city and its affairs as any agency or individual in the city. The press is careful of what it says. If it has occasion to make mention of city finances it does so only after carefully securing necessary information; the press is not given to tipping the municipal apple cart, and it has plenty of opportunity to see the adverse results which might follow pursuance of such a policy.

As far as the tribute paid by Mr. Cummings to the management of city finances and to the skill and honesty shown by the members of the City Trust, we can say only it is such a testimony as any body of men might well covet.

Better Forget It

A. L. MacDonald and his son Ian of Brussels, in Huron County, had been in Stratford selling cattle. When they started for home they had $1,000 cash in their possession. They drove to Mitchell and then turned north on the pavement toward home. There was a car following them and it kept on gaining. Father MacDonald and son MacDonald were nervous so the speed was shoved up to 80 miles or so. There was no escape, so three miles up the road they stopped in front of a creamery, thinking to enter there for protection.

The pursuing car also stopped and two men jumped out. It is related one of them fired a revolver, and in the end father and son and the $1,000 were rounded up. Then it was that the identity of the pursuers was made known. They were provincial police in plain clothes, and had mistaken the MacDonalds for two other men whom they were seeking to arrest. After which father and son and the $1,000 went home to Brussels.

One part of the story says "there will be more heard of the case," but what can be done about it? It was a mistake, but of the variety which may very well happen again in some other district. The MacDonalds did not know police were in the pursuing car, and the police did not know father and son MacDonald of Brussels were in the fleeing vehicle. Police thought they were two other men who were wanted, and the MacDonalds thought the police were bandits after their $1,000. There have been such cases before, and no one can guarantee there will not be another.

Clogged With Orders

There is so much war preparation going on in the world today that it becomes increasingly difficult for industry to secure supplies of steel in its various forms. In the House of Commons the case of black sheets was discussed. These are imported mostly from United States and are galvanized in this country. There is only one plant in the Dominion where these sheets are rolled and supplies are needed in a good many plants. When they are imported from United States the duty is 20 per cent., and from the United Kingdom the duty is 5 per cent.

Hon. R. B. Bennett suggested the duty might be removed so Canadian plants could purchase in United States before the prices went higher. He recalled that during the time the House committee was investigating prices of agricultural machinery the cost of raw materials which enter into the manufacture of the implements had increased 25 per cent. The making of different tariffs with various countries makes a complicated piece of machinery when some such quick action is desirable. Before anything could be done to change the duty on sheets coming from United States it would be necessary to get in touch with the British authorities to secure their consent because the agreement with Britain is that there shall be a preference in favor of that country of 15 per cent.

The manufacturer generally has to arrange his sources of supply according to the tariff arrangements made by the government. He is not in a position to buy in the market best suited to supply his needs, nor can he allow geography and quick delivery to dictate his decision. It is an involved process and the present situation proves that. Steel sheets are in demand in Canadian plants; it would be nice indeed to have a supply on hand ahead of the next price increase, but Ottawa cannot act until it consults with London.

The spectacle of Mr. Bennett, leader of the Conservative Opposition, rising to suggest a lowering of the tariff against goods made in United States to meet a peculiar situation in this country, may be making a little political history, but apart from that—nothing. For this reason:

As things stand at the moment the lowering of the duty on sheets from United States would make little if any difference, because it is not now possible to secure delivery under four months, so any action Ottawa may take will have little bearing on the situation.

Getting Out The Paper

There was a little item in the papers a few days ago about A. G. Graham, publisher of a weekly newspaper at Etonia, Sask. The name of the paper is the Enterprise, and Mr. Graham, the publisher, is 80 years of age. Etonia is credited with a population of 234, which appears small to support a newspaper, although the Guernsey Standard (also in Saskatchewan) is published in a community of 150 people.

It was recorded that Mr. Graham, the publisher is 80, recently prepared the copy for his paper, set it in type by hand, and then proceeded to put the paper on the press and run off the 500 copies, which is his circulation for the week. Probably four of these pages would be printed in the office, and the other side of the sheet would be printed when he received it.

It is interesting to follow what one man did, in comparison with the number of people employed to produce the same result on a daily paper. Mr. Graham would probably be out for a bit gathering his news. Then he would prepare his copy, after which he would go to his case, take a stick in hand and set up his copy one letter at a time. He would dump each stick, then pull his proof and read it and make the necessary corrections. When he had set up sufficient type in this way he would proceed to make up his pages. If he needed headings for any of his stories he would go to another case and set them up. In the end he would complete his make-up, lock the forms and lift them (heavy things they are) to the bed of the press. Then he would turn pressman and feed in his 500 sheets. Whether he would fold them by hand afterward we do not know. The last movement would be the mailing and distributing of his circulation. One man attended to all these things.

In the highly organized daily paper reporters would be on the path for news of the community; the wire would bring everything from the outside world, and there would be scores of correspondents covering the district. There would be desk men to handle and prepare the copy, men to write the headings, men to plan and lay out the pages. Then when the copy went to the composing room linotype operators would attend to the setting of the type. They in turn would dump their material on the bank, where another individual would take charge, pull the proofs, which would then go to readers and copy holders. When corrections were completed it would go to the make-up men, and when they were through the page would go to the mat roller where an impression of it would be taken to send to the stereotype department to be cast into semi-cylindrical plates which are finally locked on the cylinders of the press. No one is required to feed the press in the daily office, but as the papers came out they would go to the mailing room and mailers would proceed with their work. So the process of turning out the daily paper there would be the reporter, the editor, city editor, desk man, in some larger places a copy cutter, the operator, the bank man, proof reader, make-up man, the stereotyper, pressman and the mailer. We do not include photographers and engravers because the comparison is kept as close as possible to turning out a paper such as Mr. Graham produces. In the larger paper there would over a dozen recognized daily occupations in operation to produce the printed paper, and Mr. Graham in his office at Etonia did the equivalent of all these combined and did it himself. And he is 80 years of age. When he locks the door and goes home then the whole plant stops.

NOTE AND COMMENT

After fourteen years Oxford has finally defeated Cambridge in the annual boat race. The law of averages probably stroked the victorious crew.

Unto him that hath etc. Some person has left a baby on the doorstep of an unemployed Montreal barber who has already had twelve children of his own.

Two California men testing a new axe caused the collapse of a barn and had to be rescued from the debris. There is a place for fellows like that in fire departments everywhere.

Just how the Ontario Legislature expects the new speed limit for automobiles to make driving conditions safer has not been explained—possibly because there is no explanation.

An American writer has just completed a 51,000-word novel without using the letter "E". That is about as difficult a task as it would be for a politican to make a speech without using the letter "I".

Mr. Dunning, denying that he himself is a free trader doubts whether there is more than one in the whole membership of the House of Commons. The solitary opponent of all tariffs should be retained as a museum piece.

According to a German doctor singing is recommended to reduce blood pressure. We understand however that the reduction only takes place in the case of the singers themselves; the effect upon the listeners is exactly the reverse.

Ten thousand acorns from the New Forest are to be planted throughout the Dominion to commemorate Coronation Day. The present crop of Canadian children will one day be telling their grandchildren the history of the Royal Oaks.

The difficulty in enforcing the old law against selling tobacco on Sunday is that the public refuses to recognize any moral difference between selling cigars or cigarettes and selling other commodities which can be legally purchased on Sunday.

EXPLAINED

(By A. H. E.)

¶ I never could quite understand, how Neighbor Q got on so grand, he struts around a lot; not only is he richly dressed, but I am always much impressed, by all that he has bought.

¶ If some new gadget comes to light, why Neighbor Q buys one first sight, he shows it to his friends; he never mentions running debts, but rather boasts of all he gets, the puzzle never ends.

¶ And I've heard neighbors speculate, on how Q's money gets so great, he's known far and wide; they say he never had a cent, and struggled with his coal and rent, an uncle must have died.

¶ And others say he plays the nags, and of the way he wins he brags, they say he bought some stock; beats all the talking that they do, about affairs of Neighbor Q, it drifts along the block.

¶ And Q trades in his car each year, the neighbors say that's rather queer, he's not a monied man; I'd like to do the same myself, but being a man of little wealth, I keep my pink sedan.

¶ But something happened up at Q's, and all the neighbors got the news, I heard of it today; I guess the thing was rather tough, they seized a truck load of his stuff—then carted it away.

Our Statesmen At Their Labors

Parliamentary Debates

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): I will tell my hon. friend why it has been placed under the control of the President of the Privy Council. Anything that relates to war is a very important matter, and it was thought better to leave it under the Prime Minister, or the Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. CAHAN: Then make it the Secretary of State for External Affairs, but certainly not the clerk of the privy council. I protest against that.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): I will accept the suggestion of the hon. member for St. Lawrence-St. George.

Mr. CAHAN: And then it should not be dealt with by the President of the Privy Council but by the governor in council.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): Instead of the clerk of the privy council I suppose it ought to be the Under-Secretary of State for External Affairs.

Mr. CAHAN: It should be the Secretary of State for External Affairs. That is the term. Sometimes when he is absent it goes as a matter of course through the under-secretary, but there may be an acting secretary of state for external affairs.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): I think that is an improvement.

SPEECH IS A SPEECH

Mr. CAHAN: Who is the author?

Mr. WOODSWORTH: I am stating it as my own. The memorandum is from a friend who wrote me in regard to this matter. This is a technical matter; I am not a lawyer, and for that reason I am using the words as given.

Mr. CAHAN: It might have more force if we knew who wrote it.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: No, I am letting the statement stand on its own merits.

Such an act is not forbidden by section3, because it is not recruitment for a foreign state at war with a friendly power.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): Again if my hon. friend would wait we might change this section to satisfy him.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: I am very glad to hear it.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): I thought I told the hon. member I would.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: No, there is still another section.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): A speech having been prepared, it has to be delivered.

PRICES GOING UP

Mr. BAKER: Have not the prices of almost everything been higher in 1936 than in 1934?

An hon. MEMBER: The Liberals are in power.

Mr. BAKER: That has nothing to do with it at all.

Mr. GARDINER: The price of cheese was higher in 1936, at 12.76 cents than at any time since 1930.

Mr. BAKER: So is the price of everything.

Mr. GARDINER: And we are very happy to be living under a Liberal government, and have these prices go up.

Mr. BAKER: That had nothing to do with it at all.

Mr. GARDINER: Then with regard to consumption, in spite of the fact that edible oils are coming in—and I am not advocating the bringing in of more of them—in spite of all we have heard about edible oils, there has been consumed in Canada this last year 12,000,000 pounds more butter than in the previous year.

Mr. BROOKS: Would the minister not consider that he should protect that market so that more butter will continue to be consumed in Canada instead of vegetable oils?

Mr. GARDINER: Out in our country we do not talk as much about protection as some of those who live in other parts of Canada. We like to be able to demonstrate that when we are not indulging in so much of that kind of thing we get a better market for everybody and, as has been said, a better price for everybody on everything.

Mr. MacNICOL: The minister knows that the government has not a single solitary thing to do with it.

Mr. GARDINER: I am just placing the figures on Hansard so that my friends can read and examine them.

NOT THE RIGHT PLACE

Mr. DOUGLAS: May I point out that although the act deals with enlistments, under subsection (c) of section 19 we deal with the seizure, detention and disposition of conveyances, goods and merchandise.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): Yes, relating to this act.

Mr. DOUGLAS: Since this bill deals with goods, merchandise and ships, could it not apply also to war materials, particularly to munitions?

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): I may assure my hon. friend that for the effective legal working of these matters it is better to deal with that in separate legislation.

Mr. Douglas: Will something of that nature be done?

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): It is being considered.

Mr. WOODSWORTH: That is hardly good enough. In this case, as in so many others, we are taking the power to determine what certain individuals may do but at the same time continuing to permit other people to make money out of the distress of those in warring countries. I do think we ought to have some assurance from the minister that, under circumstances in which enlistment would be prohibited, copper, nickel and material of that sort will not be allowed to reach those who are at war with a friendly foreign state. To me that is a reasonable proposal. We are prohibiting the sending of men, but we are not prohibiting the sending of copper or nickel, and the making of all money that can be made out of it. The sending of materials of war is likely to involve us in international complications.

Mr. LAPOINTE (Quebec East): It cannot be done under this legislation.

Know How Fast You Can Stop.

(From the Motor Vehicles Branch of the Ontario Department of Highways)

MOST people know how fast their cars will go, but very few appear to have any knowledge of the time and distance necessary to bring a vehicle to a stop from any given speed.

For several years the accident recording division of the Motor Vehicles Branch has been making a continual check of drivers whose records indicate a more than usual proneness to accident or who have been convicted of breaches of the traffic regulations on several occasions. A large number of such persons have been required to appear for a hearing and examination and on such occasions a review of the individual's operating record is made as well as a survey of his knowledge of driving problems.

A compilation covering the statements of 64 of the drivers who have appeared for a hearing within the past few weeks, showed an interesting situation. The operators concerned averaged 41 years in age, had an average driving experience of 15 years and claimed to drive an average of more than 20,000 miles each year. This mileage would constitute an unusual exposure to hazard and explains in part why these drivers had amassed unfavorable driving records, but a lack of appreciation of the actual time required to stop a car appeared to be a contributing factor in almost every case.

With one exception—an automobile mechanic—these drivers failed to appreciate the important fact that brakes do not take hold until the driver's foot applies them, and that before this takes place there is an interval—the braking reaction time—in which the mind must, in turn, be carried out by the muscles, and that the distance travelled during this interval accounts for a large part of the total stopping distance. The average estimate of the 64 drivers was that, from the time danger was sighted, a car, at 20 miles an hour, could be stopped in 18 feet. The average estimate at 30 miles an hour was 32 feet, and the estimate for a stop from 60 miles an hour was 74 feet.

The minimum stopping distance at 20 miles an hour (on the basis of a three-quarter second reaction time) is 40 feet; and the distance travelled at 30 miles an hour—with perfect four-wheel brakes and on the best type of road surface—would be at least 186 feet.

Most of the drivers examined were frankly skeptical about these stopping distances. One driver expressed the belief that he could stop his car in four feet from a speed of 20 miles an hour, and in nine feet from a speed of 30 miles an hour. Another operator who claimed 12 years' driving experience expressed the conviction that from speeds of 20, 30 and 50 miles an hour he could stop in three, seven and 30 feet, respectively. By actual test it was found that this last-mentioned driver required 42 feet to stop from a speed of 20 miles an hour. The test car used was a 1937-model, equipped with four-wheel brakes and tires in good condition.

In view of the fact that the safety with which we can travel at various speeds is dependent upon the distance required to stop, it would seem that the belief that a vehicle weighing a ton and a half can be stopped on a dime" from, say, 30 miles an hour, is responsible to a considerable degree for the large toll of death and injury now resulting from the use of motor vehicles.

He Does Some Figuring.

(From the Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

W. ANGUS DICKSON, member for Perth, gave the Legislature a few days ago a detailed statement of what he said the present government had saved his country. He estimated the amount at $180,000 a year, exclusive of the saving in amusement tax and high school examination fees.

It is a curious bit of reasoning for an ex-warden of a county. He begins with a reduction in Hydro charges, whereas Hydro is not a department of government at all. Its dominating principle is service at cost, and if it collects too much from consumers it must reduce rates. Cost of school examinations has to be paid by somebody, and to the extent that fees are done away with the amount must be provided by school boards.

Chief items in the computation, of course, are the one-mill subsidy recently announced, and assumption of the share formerly contributed by the municipalities toward old age pensions and mothers' allowances, less the loss on income tax. But when Mr. Dickson speaks of the government paying all this money, where does he think it comes from? Perth has about 10,000 motor vehicles, fueled by gasoline which pays the government six cents on each gallon. The country undoubtedly pays its share of the $26,000,000 which the government collected in the present fiscal year by way of motor taxation. Its people contribute a full share of corporation tax, succession duties, income tax and other direct levies, besides liquor profits, which went to make up the $31,670,000 of revenue, exclusive of interest payments, collected by the government in the current fiscal year. Taking from one pocket and restoring part to another would not have been counted a "saving" when Mr Dickson was in county council and advocating abolition of the Legislature in the interests of economy.

Famine In Russia.

(From the Chatham News.)

IT IS A most difficult thing to learn the truth about Russia, but sufficient is reaching the outside world to indicate that things are not moving as smoothly as the propagandists would have us think. Mass persecutions are being carried out by the rulers, presumably to rid the state of traitors, but the Moscow correspondent of a Berlin paper claims that these terrorist tactics are undertaken chiefly to divert the attention of the world from the famine which is reigning in the Russian villages, and at the same time warn the Russians against any semblance of uprising against the conditions under which they are compelled to live.

This correspondent states that a drive a few miles south of Moscow brings the traveller closer to the real enemy of Russia—famine among the peasants. The terrible drought of the summer had catastrophic results for the harvest in the territory surrounding the capital, just as in approximately 40 to 50 per cent. of the entire agricultural territory of the Soviet Union.

This poor harvest has to be delivered completely to the state while only 300 to 320 grams of wheat were left to the peasants for their daily sust. i.e., around 80 pounds of bread as annual payment and almost exclusive basis of existence for a whole year.

The bread was consumed almost everywhere months ago and those collective peasants owning cattle were the first ones to begin with, because there is no fodder available. Today the villagers practically face ruin.

In most of the rural districts, it is said, peasants are poorly clothed, and have to steal the wood to keep fires burning to provide warmth in their homes. But as we have said, it is most difficult to gain the truth about the situation in that country. Reports are conflicting; but this in itself indicates that there is much that the world does not know, and much that the world should know in order to gain a proper understanding of Communism as it exists in that country.

CO-OPERATION.

(Western Producer)

JAMES AIKEN, C.C.F.-Labor member in the Manitoba legislature, is a firm believer in the co-operative movement. Mr. Aiken is Scotch. To illustrate the benefits humanity can derive from mutual effort, he told a Scotch story to the legislators last week.

The 900 employees of an Aberdeen firm, said Mr. Aiken, decided to give a present to the retiring manager, and found out he wanted a radio. They subscribed a shilling each. The committee then bought 900 shilling packs of cigarettes and got a radio with the coupons. At the presentation the manager got the radio, each man got cigarettes, and refreshments were provided with the dividend from the co-operative store where the money was spent.

MONEY IN CHICKENS.

(Charlottetown Guardian)

SOME time ago a paragraph went the round of the press about the great profits made in the States by a poultry farmer, and Mr. J. B. MacFadyen, Carleton Siding, wrote to the College of Agriculture, Kentucky, on the subject with the result he got the following official reply from Mr. C. A. Lewis, Extension Editor:

"A cash gain of $1,041 from his poultry for the period of October 1 to February and a net profit of $1,-003.96 for last year, are reported by Grant Maddox, a Boone county farmer.

"Maddox gathered 44,983 eggs in the four months from October 1 to February 1. He began the laying year on October 1 with 1,086 hens, but on February 1 had culled the flock to 800. Production for the four months averaged 45 eggs, or more than half of the average yearling production for Kentucky hens.

"His flock last year contained 600 Rhode Island Reds, which averaged 178 eggs for the year."

NOT SO BAD AFTER ALL.

(Kitchener Record)

IN VIEW of periodical criticism of the press practically as a matter of course and particularly with regard to the recent press gag motion passed by the Kitchener City Council we wish to draw attention to the words of His Honor Justice Cherrier at St. Thomas the other day.

After excluding the public from attendance at the hearing of a serious criminal charge he declined to include the press in the ban and justified his action with the following words:

"I may say that in my many years of experience in public life I have never had occasion to reprimand the press. I leave it to the reporters' sense of decency and fairplay to report this case, having in mind the fact that our newspapers go into homes where we expect to maintain a high standard of clean lives and morality."

In other words, the judge realizes that the press has a duty to perform to the public and that he had no right to interfere with it. Of course, he is a member of the Supreme Court of Ontario. Our local critics are always men.

$30,000,000 SEADROME

Engineer Proposed Base Between America and Hawaii.

LOS ANGELES, March 25 (A.P.)—With plans for a huge "seadrome" between the west coast of North America and the Hawaiian Islands to aid air travel, M. E. Heiser, Australian engineer, arrived here yesterday to confer with civic and financial leaders. He proposed a "U" shaped raft with arms 2,000 feet long and 400 feet wide, rising 117 feet above the water level. Seaplanes would land within the "U."

The seadrome would cost approximately $30,000,000 and would require 10,000 men working two years to build. It would be towed to the mooring point after construction.

CANADIAN FIRE LOSS

TORONTO, March 24 (CP)—Fire losses in Canada for the week ended March 24, are estimated by the monetary Times at $37,500 compared with $187,625 in the preceding week and $362,500 in the corresponding week last year. Fire losses from Jan. 1 to March 24, 1937, totalled $3,-892,625 compared with $4,426,890 for the corresponding period last year.

DAUGHTER OUTGREW HER STRENGTH "LISTLESS, FRETFUL, UNDERNOURISHED"

"My over-grown 15-year-old daughter was so frail, listless and undernourished. I was really worried until the Doctor recommended Fellows' Syrup. That fine old family tonic was just what she needed. Her appetite came right back, her nerves steadied, and she is now bright and happy, the picture of buoyant health. I can't speak too highly of 'Fellows'."

Children of 'teen' age need the Calcium, Iron, Phosphorus and other mineral elements in Fellows' Syrup to aid their systems at this worrying stage. Because Fellows' Syrup is so widely imitated it pays to insist on the genuine. Look for the name 'FELLOWS' on the wrapper — two sizes — at your druggist's.

LAD'S QUEER TALE SUSPECTED HOAX

Police Claim That No Person Harmed Him—Except Himself

HAMILTON, Ont., March 25 (CP)—Mystery surrounding the eight-hour disappearance Monday night of 13-year-old Hubert Stewart of Bartonville, was cleared up today with an announcement by Inspector W. T. Moore, head of the branch here of the Provincial Police.

"Nobody did the boy any harm," he said, "and whatever was done to him he did himself," said Inspector Moore.

There was no explanation given regarding the story told by the youngster when he was finally located early Tuesday after having been missing since leaving school late the previous afternoon.

The boy told of having been set upon by two older boys, forced to walk a considerable distance to a deep depression in the countryside, and then pushed part way down an embankment with his feet bound with his own tie.

WINNIPEG GRAIN.

WINNIPEG, March 25. — Export of Canadian wheat placed at over 2,000,000 bushels, coupled with unexpected overseas strength, were the two major bullish factors sending wheat futures higher on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, showing 1¼c gains at top levels, new seasonal and seven-year highs were established for May and July wheat, but values at the close were only 1 to 2¼ cents up.

Apart from a temporary let-up near mid-session, trading was active throughout, with volume of business large. Export and Continental buying predominated the trade. Wheat purchases overnight were reported for delivery next July, and Italy was reported inquiring for Canadian wheat. Any profit-taking encountered was easily absorbed.

TORIES MAY VOTE BEFORE END YEAR UPON NEW CHIEF

'Peg Senator Says Names Of Harrington, Duplessis, Rowe, Willis Mentioned

BENNETT WANTS VOTE?

WINNIPEG, March 25—(CP)—Senator J. T. Haig last night told the annual meeting of the Macdonald-Cartier Club that Conservatives of Canada may be called on before the end of the year to select a new national leader.

"Have you made up your minds who will be the Conservative leader in 1938?" the Conservative Senator from Winnipeg asked. "Before the year is out you may be called on to make that decision. The feeling in Ottawa is that Mr. Bennett (Conservative Leader R. B. Bennett) will offer to withdraw from the party leadership. He will insist that the view of the party throughout Canada be consulted.

"There are four men whose names are prominently mention as successor if Mr. Bennett should retire. They are Gordon Harrington of Nova Scotia, Maurice Duplessis of Quebec, Earl Rowe of Ontario and Errick Willis of Manitoba. They stand out with possibilities of leadership.

Mr. Harrington is a former Nova Scotia Premier, Mr. Duplessis as Premier of Quebec and Mr. Rowe and Mr. Willis are Conservative leaders in their respective provinces.

"You are to be asked to choose whether Mr. Bennett is to be requested to carry on," Senator Haig said. He spoke of the Conservative leader as " a new man since he made his trip around the world," and with a grin of world affairs not exceeded by any other man in Parliament.

He said, however, there is the possibility Mr. Bennett may resign from the party leadership after the Coronation.

GREATEST RETREAT POLITICAL HISTORY

'Freedom slowly broadens down from precedent to precedent.'

"I am at a loss to understand how the Prime Minister and his Cabinet made any contribution to the settlement of this vexed question by the high-handed, tyrannical and unworthy action here last night," he said. "I do not want to use language not warranted by the circumstances."

Pales Napoleon's Flight.

"Last night the Prime Minister conducted the greatest political retreat in history—the retreat of Napoleon from Moscow was not a circumstance to this," Mr. Macaulay continued.

"To cover up his retreat he had to throw out the personal gas of innuendo and unfair criticism of men like Drew, Rowe and others— he went on till stopped when the Provincial Secretary, Harry Nixon, leading the House in the Premier's absence, rose. "Is this a point of privilege," demanded Mr. Nixon of the Speaker, "Where is the point of privilege to which the Speaker is addressing himself."

"I did not object to the member making a brief statement but considering all the circumstances it should be very brief," said Speaker Hipel.

"This Legislature as a whole has passed on last night's incident. As far as I am concerned, the incident is closed. If you have a very brief statement you may make it."

"I stand here to-day not by any reason of the grace of Mitchell F. Hepburn," declared Mr. Macaulay.

Lifting his right arm, he went on: "I stand here as a member of this assembly as the representative of a constituency of 75,000 people interested in seeing fairness in this Assembly."

Want No Mussolini Tactics.

Mr. Macaulay declared he represented countless thousands who were interested in seeing "debate is not stifled here as it was by Mussolini in Italy."

"I object," interjected Attorney-General Arthur Roebuck.

"The objection is correct," said the Speaker.

"Send for the Prime Minister," called Thomas Kidd (Cons., Kingston).

"Order," called the Speaker. "I must reprimand the honorable member for Kingston. Has he a point of order or privilege."

"Will the honorable Speaker permit me to ask a question," persisted Mr. Kidd. He wasn't stopped so he went on.

"Where is the leader of the government?" he asked. "Do you know? Why isn't he in his seat? Why doesn't he lead the House?"

M. M. MacBride (Ind., Brantford), was next to his feet with a point of privilege.

"I am anxious for prepared debate on all issues," he declared.

Representing All Ontario

"We are all prone to become excited at times. But there is one point I consider is my duty to emphasize. The honorable member is here not only as representing South York but as representing the whole province of Ontario, a province in which people uphold constituted British authority."

"Order, order," called the Conservatives.

"I saw the spectacle of the good old British flag dragged on the floor here," went on Mr. MacBride.

"What's this point of privilege," demanded Mr. Henry. "The member for Brantford is not connected with this at all."

"Yes, he is," filled the speaker. "He is a member of the assembly."

"My object is to put an end to unnecessary ill-will and bitterness," declared Mr. MacBride. "It has been generated here. What I object to is the defiance of the speaker's rulings, thereby bringing under attack the whole provincial constitution."

Mr. Henry was on his feet again. The speaker asked him if he wished to make a statement.

"No," said Mr. Henry, throwing up his hands and sitting down.

Denies Defying Authority

"I did not defy constituted authority," declared Mr. Macaulay. "The arrangement was made here on the floor of the House the prime minister was to follow Mr. Henry in the debate. The prime minister asked us if we had anything to say."

Mr. Macaulay said all right, I wanted to hear what he had to say."

"You had your opportunity to speak and refused to do so," Mr. Nixon said.

"We knew there was something doing after flying of these kites in the Star and Globe," said Mr. Macaulay. "We wanted to comment on the change of front by the Prime Minister. We maintain we have a right to continue the debate, and the Prime Minister can not arbitrarily shut it off."

Speaker Hipel said Mr. Macaulay had refused to take his seat last night when ordered to do so.

"It grieved me very much to take the action I did, but under the circumstances it was absolutely necessary," he said.

Ready to Shelve Rules.

"I was prepared to let him make a brief reply, disregarding the strict rules of procedure."

"You mean the Prime Minister can shut off debate?" asked Mr. Macaulay.

"Now just sit down and keep quiet," admonished the Speaker. "As far as I'm concerned, the House made the ruling and the matter is closed."

Mr. Macaulay left his efforts to continue his statement and the House turned to other business.

EMPLOYS 40 MEN.

WILL ABANDON WOODEN GARDEN

Famed Wooden Flower Display At Winnipeg To Disappear

USED CAR LOT

WINNIPEG, March 25 (CP)—The machine age probably had no real meaning for Sam Hazell until the present, but right now motors are a pretty sore spot with the local designer of what may well be the world's only wooden garden.

For the vacant lot which Sam spent hours decorating with beautifully hand-carved flowers, to the delight of thousands who saw it, is being taken over by a motor sales concern for the display of used cars.

Sam first displayed the fruits of his unique penknife hobby in front of his residence, but soon the little plot became too small for the variety of blossoms he whittled, and with the city's consent he took over a deserted business lot.

It was little more than a rubbish heap when the singular craftsman moved in. Tin cans, rank grass and rocks yielded to his patience. He bought fertilized and grass seed, laid out flower beds and paths, surfacing the latter with innumerable bags of cinders which he brought from his employer's plant on his bicycle.

But Sam has been advised he will have to vacate, leaving behind his visions of terraced beauty—and his flowers—which cannot be uprooted until a thaw releases them from the frozen earth.

City and company officials offered him another vacant lot; but Sam, recalling the wasted hundreds of hours of labor for which he received no revenue, and the dollars which he could ill afford to spend, was reluctant to accept for fear the same situation would arise again.

Quake Rocks South Areas In California

10,000 Square Miles Quiver Sending Residents Fleeing To Open

NO DAMAGE REPORTED

LOS ANGELES, March 25 (AP)—Southern California shook this morning with a heavy earthquake. It appeared to be centred in the Imperial Valley or south of the Mexican border in the Gulf of California area.

It was 8.49 a.m. when an area of about 10,000 square miles quivered.

Los Angeles and its environs were swayed by a long and continuously increasing motion. Long Beach reported it was quite unlike the heavy 1933 shock, which came as a jolt. Today's movement was a sort of rhythmic shimmy, with an east west motion.

Santa Monica, Glendale, Pasadena, Anaheim, and Alhambra reported similar effects, while to the south the intensity seemed to be greater. In the San Bernardino-Riverside region it was a good shake.

San Diego, more than 100 miles from Santa Monica, felt it as a sharp quake. At El Centro, county seat of Imperial Valley, 100 miles east of San Diego, the jolt was heavy but no immediate damage was reported.

El Centro residents ran from buildings in the downtown district and gathered in little groups on the street.

HEAVY TOURIST RUSH EXPECTED

British Columbia Prepares To Welcome Million And Half Visitors

SURPASS '29 PEAK

VANCOUVER, March 25 (CP)—British Columbia brushed up its "At Home" sign and prepared to welcome an all-time record of 1,500,000 callers from Eastern Canada, the prairie provinces and the United States.

Transportation officials, hotel executives and merchants expected to share in almost $25,000,000 left behind by departing guests — an increase of 30 per cent over the estimated $25,000,000 spent last year by tourists in the province.

Estimates were based chiefly on early reports from the United States where the annual trek to the Pacific Coast has already begun. Heavy increase in inter-state traffic—automobile, rail, bus and air—led to the belief 1937 would far surpass in British Columbia the previous peak set in 1929.

Anniversary celebrations in at least two cities were expected to swell the flow. Kamloops, in the interior Okanagan Valley, will observe the 125th

LADS WRECK CAR FLEEING POLICE

Wind Up In Ditch Near Barrie, One Injured After Chase From Orillia

BARRIE, Ont. March 25—(CP).—After a wild, cross country automobile chase, three youths were held by police to-day while a car they wrecked has been identified as having been stolen at Brantford, Ont. The trio gave their names as James Armstrong, Weston; Bert Conrad Cameron, Bothwell; and Robert Bloye, Toronto. Bloye was injured in the crack-up and is in hospital here.

Chief Harry Stanley of Brantford, said the wrecked car is owned by Harold English, Buffalo, N.Y. (200 Crestwood avenue), and was stolen at Brantford a week ago to-night.

Armstrong and Cameron were arrested on nominal charges of vagrancy, while Bloye was detained under guard at hospital. He told police, however, he had been hitch-hiking and was picked up by the other youths before the police chased them.

The chase started late last night when Orillia police notified officers here to watch for a car bearing New York plates. Constable George Stewart of Allandale spotted the machine and commandeering a truck, gave chase. Hitting up 90 miles an hour, the fugitive car swerved on icy pavements three miles from Allandale and somersaulted into a ditch, its wheels in the air.

A youth crawled from the wreckage and proved to be Bloye, who was attended by a Dr. Braden of Hamilton, who happened by. The other two occupants of the machine were picked up nearby. A sawed-off shotgun was found in the car, police said.

PAINFUL PILES

Can Be Quickly Relieved.

If you think there is no way to relieve the misery of piles, it's because you don't know of HEM-ROID, an internal medicine, from a prescription written by Dr. Leonhardt, a western physician.

The real cause of piles is on the inside—bad circulation of blood in the lower bowel and inflammation with the tiny rectal veins full of stagnant, impure blood.

Dr. Leonhardt decided the way to relieve piles was internally, with a medicine which would ease the congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and help to heal and restore the sore, tender spots. After many tests he wrote the prescription which has been so successful in giving quick relief from pile misery. It is now offered to you with our promise that you may have your money back if you are not completely satisfied after using one bottle.

No matter what kind of piles you have or how long you have had them, HEM-ROID must show you the quick, clean way to get rid of your pile misery or your money will be given back to you. McDermid & Jury and Rexall Drug Store or any other druggist can supply you with HEM-ROID and will back up this promise.

HEPBURN REPEALS SEPARATE SCHOOL TAX LEGISLATION

You may be a dictator but you can't do this to us in the name of democracy."

"Contemptible," "un-British," "A dirty trick," came from Conservative House Leader Henry as he roared at the premier.

For five minutes or more the uproar continued. Mr. Macaulay moved from his seat and shouted to the galleries. Speaker Hipel called Sergeant-at-arms Charles Rutherford. "You can put me in the tower or take me to Whitby," shouted Mr. Macaulay. "I'M going to have my say no matter what anyone says."

Then directly to the press gallery over the speaker's stand he shouted: "Take this down, you fellows. It is the dirtiest, rottenest trick perpetrated in Canadian political history for 100 years."

Protesting Protests

Conservative members were on their feet protesting almost "en masse" several members were protesting the protests.

Then Captain Rutherford moved to Mr. Macaulay's side, spoke a word in his ear and put his hand on his shoulder. Mr. Macaulay shook free. The sergeant-at-arms moved quickly. His right hand went to the back of Mr. Macaulay's coat collar, his left beneath the back of the member's coat.

Sword dangling at his side, Captain Rutherford pushed the still-protesting white-faced member down the centre of the chamber and out the door the whips rounded up the members for division, first on the motion that shut off debate. It was carried, 63-15. Second reading of the bill then carried, all 80 members in the House at that moment voting in its favor.

The House then took up debate on a Conservative motion asking that a special committee inquire into administration of Ontario's liquor laws. On a straight party division the motion was defeated 50-14, and the House turned to consideration of estimates of various departments in a drab discussion.

No Election In Offing

In his speech on the school tax bill, Premier Hepburn made known his disappointment at the reception that had met the 1936 legislation. At the same time he let it be known he would "disillusion" the Conservatives if they thought an election was "in the offing."

Mr. Hepburn confessed that the school tax act had been a failure, but added, "no one was more sincere than myself in seeking to bring to the minority here in Ontario the same equality and justice as has been given to minorities in three other Canadian provinces."

He declared the Hastings East by-election—won by Conservatives last December—had been a revelation to him. The seat was retained for the opposition.

Out of that by-election the premier said he came to the realization how the flames of religious prejudice could be fanned to obscure all other issues.

"I want to give a definite assurance to the Catholic minority of Ontario that the Liberal party will give justice and equality to all people regardless of race or religion," he declared.

"How far-reaching will be the effect of this religious controversy opened anew?" he asked. "We look at Spain and the bloodshed there. They don't think about these issues. They fight about them."

"Very Bitter Pill"

"I'm man enough to stand up and take it on the chin and swallow what to me is a very bitter pill," Premier Hepburn told the members in saying he was "taking this act out of the picture as a political issue."

He commended to the Conservative Opposition the words of Sir Wilfred Laurier: "I do not want to open the door to power with a bloody key."

The Premier made it clear the responsibility for the decision was his alone, a fact seriously made having been extinguished in the same block during the late afternoon.

Glass Cartels.

Conservative Leader Bennett, who furnished the bulk of Opposition criticism of the Canada-United Kingdom trade agreement, brought up the question of cartels in the glass industry yesterday, and asked Finance Minister Dunning to study the possibility of some steps that would meet the problem.

If some Canadian manufacturer, faced with bankruptcy and not concerned about the effects of his action on industry and trade generally, sold goods in Great Britain at less than a fair price in Canada the government agreed to correct the situation. That meant all other Canadian manufacturers might be penalized by the admission of British goods into Canada on terms which would otherwise not be justified, Mr. Bennett said in application to the anti-dumping law.

"Because one has sinned all are to suffer," he said.

Finance Minister Dunning said Mr. Bennett was indulging in remote speculation. The article could not be invoked because of an isolated dumping of bankrupt stock. It contemplated a continuing condition of dumping. The two governments were not antagonistic or seeking advantages over another. They were trying to deal with a condition in the interest of both countries. The Canadian government relied on the good faith of the British government and the British government relied on the good faith of Canada.

The possibility cited by Mr. Bennett had never been mentioned in any discussions between the two governments. He would regard it as "an absolute breach of faith on the part of Great Britain" if the article were invoked in the way the Conservative leader suggested.

Uncertain of Solution

Mr. Bennett said he didn't know what would be "suitable steps to correct the situation" as required by the treaty.

"Neither do I," said Mr. Dunning. "But I do know we are prepared to ask Canadian industry to co-operate with us in removing abuses which are the chief obstacle to satisfactory trade relations between the two countries."

Not a single industry or individual had complained of the clause.

Mr. Bennett said no one would complain if Great Britain passed an adequate law to curb dumping. Mr. Dunning replied he had told the British that but they did not wish to do so and asked for the assurance conveyed in the treaty.

Operations of the international cartel in the manufacture of flate glass are causing the government concern, Mr. Dunning said, in answer to earlier remarks from Mr. Bennett.

"We seem to be in a most unfortunate position in connection with plate glass," said the Conservative leader. "It affects our furniture situation and our automobile situation and the whole business of building. A cartel or combine has been in existence for years. It has been the subject of investigation by the Combines Investigation Act. Now we are told that the cartel has been dissolved and that the plate glass industry is in competition. Is that correct?"

"It does seem to me that we are bound to make our purchases under conditions and circumstances with regard to prices that certainly enhance the cost of the production of some of our furniture and some of our automobiles. Can nothing be done in that regard?" The plate glass system was more than a cartel, he said. There was an overriding organization.

Grand Master Not Surprised At Action Taken By Hepburn In Repealing The School Act

Ernest F. Reid Declares Action Of Orange Order Completely Vindicated

BETTER NEVER ENACTED

Commenting on the repeal of the Separate School Tax amendments, Ernest F. Reid, Grand Master of the Grand Orange Lodge of Ontario East, declared:

"It is a complete vindication of the action of the Public school supporters and the Orange Order since this legislation was first mooted.

"The Orange Order has not been alone in this fight, but has had the support of every Protestant religious denomination, as well as School Boards and Boards of Education throughout the province.

"Mr. Hepburn claimed in East Hastings that he had only given to the Roman Catholic minority in Ontario what the Roman Catholic majority in Quebec gave the Protestant minority 75 years ago, and he said, 'the act is fair and just.'

"If it was fair and just three months ago," Mr. Reid remarked, "why is it not fair to-day, because the Act has not changed since the East Hastings by-election.

Mr. Reid declared he was not really surprised at the repeal of the amendments, because, "Mr. Hepburn has been jumping from pillar to post several times since assuming office, one day saying one thing and the next day changing his mind".

"How much better it would have been," Mr. Reid thought, "if Mr. Hepburn had listened to the protests of hundreds of thousands of voters in this province who pleaded with him not to enact this piece of legislation, instead of putting it through only later to admit that it is unworkable and has to be repealed."

GLAD SAYS ROWE HEPBURN AGREES ACT WAS UNFAIR

Quinn To Continue Fighting—Orange Victory, Claims Past Grand Master

DOES NOT CLEAR PREMIER

TORONTO, March 25 (C.P.). — Hon. Earl Rowe, Ontario Conservative Leader, and member of Parliament for Dufferin-Simcoe, to-day issued the following statement from Party headquarters in the Legislature Building:

I am indeed glad even Mr. Hepburn and his followers have agreed to repeal the "Act to amend the Assessment Act." For almost a year I have endeavored to show the public that this act was unfair, clumsily-drafted and unworkable. Mr. Hepburn now admits the Act is unworkable, and surrenders to my policy of its repeal. The disgraceful incident of last night is only a culmination of a series of many violations of decent parliamentary procedure. Our forefathers have fought for freedom of speech—Mr. Hepburn has denied it to our people's representatives.

With reference to Mr. Hepburn's charge last night that I have made the statement that our forefathers have bled over this issue, that our children will bleed—may I say this is an utter falsehood. I do not believe that even he would have risked such a glaring misrepresentation had he not intended to deny the right of the Opposition to reply.

Will Continue Fight

TORONTO, March 25 — (C.P.). — Martin J. Quinn, chairman of the Catholic Taxpayers' Association of Ontario, which presented requests to both the Henry and Hepburn governments for school assessment act revisions, indicated to-day it would continue its publicity campaign to present its views and information on them to the general public.

Mr. Quinn said Premier Hepburn had made an effort to meet the Roman Catholic taxpayers' views. "Unfortunately a political situation was created and had to be dealt with," he said, referring to the repeal by the Ontario Government last night of its 1936 legislation giving Separate schools a larger share in corporation taxes.

"A weakness of the case for Separate schools was lack of information on the part of the general public as to the facts," said Mr. Quinn. "We will make an effort through time to correct the situation and expect that ultimately there will be little opposition to satisfaction of our claims."

TORONTO, March 25—(CP). — C. H. Carrie, prominent in the Orange Order and a member of Toronto Board of Education, said to-day, repeal by the Ontario Government of the School Act Amendment which he said, referring to the repeal by the Ontario Government last night of its 1936 legislation giv-

For Friday, March 26

A LIVELY enough state of affairs dominates this day, according to the leading planetary influences, but these may not be without anxiety, complication and situations calling for sagacity and wise judgment. While the energies will be direct, yet there are elements of surprise as well as frustration affecting employment, industry, positions and affairs in both business and private affiliations. These stubborn situations and opposing influences may be best served by postponement, patience and planned deliberation.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which several difficult situations or frustrating circumstances must be wisely and tactfully manipulated. Some surprising development seems at the core of the which may have an impeding force and probably call for a change in the affairs of employment. Calmness, resignation and postponements of important decisions may best enhance the interests, although the energies will be keen and constructive.

A child born on this day may be energetic and capable, but may encounter obstacles to an active career. This may be due to a studious and retiring nature which may turn it to a life of retirement and aloofness.

For Saturday, March 27

A RATHER lively day is presaged from the accelerating influence of the prevailing planetary configurations, both by lunar and mutual aspects. All business affairs, as well as all pertaining to writings, publishing, advertising and promotion, are under a stimulating ray.

Those whose birthday it is are under excellent auspices for the year, with much activity, liveliness and probably pleasure, particularly in connection with the affairs of youth or with young people themselves predicted.

A child born on this day may be versatile, clever, witty of speech and talented with pen or brush. It may be lively and probably have a pronounced proclivity toward sports or athletics.

KIWANIANS ASKED TO SUPPORT MOVE FOR MAYOR'S ROBES

Roland Denne Discusses With Club Some Of Features Of H. I. P.

LENDS DIGNITY

After Alderman James Dutton, chairman of the Citizens' Committee in charge of Coronation observances, had outlined to members of the Kiwanis Club tentative plans, and had discussed with them his proposal for presenting the Mayor and his successors with a chain and robes to mark the historic occasion, the Kiwanians promised the committee one hundred per cent. support.

On motion of Fred Johnston, seconded by Dr. J. J. Craig, the club further recommended that the executive consider Alderman Dutton's proposal to invest the Mayor with chain and robes, with a view to endorsing the proposal or rejecting it. The motion carried.

After listening to Alderman Dutton expound his reasons in favor of investing the office of Mayor with a little more dignity and authority, Archie E. Gates told him, "You should not apologize for making the suggestion. When I was a boy in Kingston I recall the Mayor of that city wore a chain of office on special civic occasions and I always considered that it helped to lend dignity and authority to the office."

Too Democratic

The proposer of the measure said that he was well aware there were a large number of people of the opinion that Canada is too democratic a country to adopt frills. But, he declared, he was not so sure of that. "In these days when there is such widespread disregard for law and order, I believe it would be a good thing," Alderman Dutton said.

He was glad to note that recently the Federal Government spoke out plainly on the question of sit-down strikers who sought to disrupt the country's industrial life, and he mentioned this in support of his contention that anything that can be done to instill greater respect for law and authority is a good thing.

While plans in connection with the city's Coronation observances have not yet matured, Alderman Dutton said his suggestion had been thrown out at this time to bring forward some expressions of opinion on the matter. He indicated that the decision of his committee would, of course, be actuated with a due regard for public opinion.

As guest speaker Roland Denne was introduced at the club luncheon by Dr. G. Raymore Scott. He discussed with the club some of the features of the Government's Home Improvement Plan, and paid tribute to the local bank managers who, he said, were doing all they could to facilitate working of the plan.

It was announced at the meeting that so far forty-one applications for loans have been made in Peterborough under the plan involving a sum of between $1,300 and $1,400. Inquiries that have been received by the banks indicate that with the onset of better weather conditions more favorable to the building and allied trades, this sum will be boosted considerably.

Harold R. Scott as chairman of the meeting extended the hand of brotherhood to Milton Hardill following his initiation to membership as a Kiwanian by Carl S. Browne.

SCHOOL TAX ACT SET BACK TO '86

Corporations Will Be No Longer Compelled To Direct Levy To Separate Institutions

TORONTO, March 25 — (C.P.). — The Conservative Bill, approved amid hectic scenes in the Ontario Legislature last night, repeals amendments to the School Tax Act which re-apportioned corporation taxes among Public and Separate schools. The amendments were passed by the Legislature last year.

The bill passed last night was entitled, "A Bill to repeal Chapter 4, Statutes of Ontario, 1936." Last year's legislation gave Roman Catholic Corporation shareholders the right to notify directors they wished their share of corporation taxes to go to Separate schools.

Behind the whole issue of division of taxes between Separate and Public schools were controversies which waged since 1863.

The 1936 amendments made it mandatory for corporations to direct taxes to Separate schools after Separate school shareholders filed the required notice. Previously corporations were not compelled to do so.

There was also provision in the amendments regarding corporations whose head offices were not in Ontario and whose wide distribution of shares made it impossible to ascertain the religious complexion of the shareholders. In such cases the 1936 legislation provided for division of school assessments on the basis of assessments in the municipalities so affected.

It was the first time in Ontario taxes could go to Separate schools when it was not definitely established such taxes were paid on shares held by Roman Catholics. With adoption of the repeal bill, the system in use before 1936 amendments was restored.

Local huntsmen who spend their spare hours in the woods of this district without rabbits report evidences of the greatest number of weasles in this district in many years past this winter. They blame the ferocious little animals for a scarcity of cotton-tail rabbits. The unusual number of weasles may be partly the result of the openness of the winter. With no snow to impede them, the animals are finding no trouble in obtaining their food by killing rabbits and ground-hogs in their burrows.

GORDON WILL ASK JUDICIAL INQUIRY INTO CITY TRUST

Alderman Gordon Replies To Letter Of Deputy-Minister Cummings

MISSED MAIN POINT

Alderman G. N. Gordon stated today that the opinion of Deputy Minister Cummings in respect to the administration of the affairs by the Peterborough City Trust was of very little value. Mr. Cummings gave an opinion to Alderman Max Sloan and Alderman McIntyre that a fixed assessment of a Corporation could be renewed for a further period of ten years, if only a dollar was changed in the amount. Reversing this opinion, Mr. Cummings wrote Mr. Gordon confirming his opinion and that of one of the city solicitors of Toronto that a fixed assessment could not be renewed, no matter, to what extent it was increased or decreased, because it was contrary to the provisions of the Bonus Limitation Act.

Mr. Cummings sent down a three page letter to Mr. Gordon, of which he sent copies to the members of the Utilities Commission and the members of the Council, and went out of his way to say how well the business of the City had been conducted, but the fact is, that he never dealt with the statute which dealt with the City Trust in regard to submitting a statement before the first of February each year of the amount required to provide for sinking funds and interest and upon that statement the Council shall then impose a levy, nor does Mr. Cummings deal with the $300,000.00 of surplus monies not required for interest or sinking fund, held by the City Trust, and which should be used in the reduction of taxes.

Mr. Gordon further stated that Mr. Cummings' department in the case of another municipality of where there was approximately $90,000.00 of monies in reserve, not required for interest and sinking fund, suggested or directed that the municipality should use one-tenth of same each year in the reduction of the tax rate for the ratepayers and this was done.

The policy of Mr. Cummings' department in regard to the last-mentioned municipality, where the money was used to reduce the tax rate is contrary in regard to his conduct in regard to Peterborough, so his inconsistency is so great that his opinion is absolutely worthless.

Mr. Gordon stated he proposed to have a Judicial Investigation into the entire City Trust operations and intended to apply to His Honour Judge Spoke, when he returned from Bermuda.

OBITUARY

DENNIS SHAUGHNESSY

Funeral services for the late Dennis Shaughnessy, a life-long resident of Peterborough County, who passed away on Monday were conducted on Wednesday morning at the Church of the Sacred Heart, where the pastor, Rev. J. J. O'Brien sang Requiem Mass at 9 a.m. The exceptionally large gathering for the service and the profusion of spiritual offerings signified wonderful tribute to the high esteem and friendship deceased had entered amongst his acquaintances. Rev. J. J. O'Brien preached the funeral sermon also and in the course of his address to the congregation, impressed upon them the inevitableness of death and our lives here on earth should be a preparation for death as a beginning of a new life with God; so do so we should follow three things: to know, to love and to serve Him and the persons who seriously undertake to do so will have few fears when the Angel of Death comes. And everyone could take an example of this from the life of the deceased.

Present in the sanctuary were Rev. Herbert Fitzgerald of Parry Sound; Rev. F. L. Rishea of Trout Creek; Rev. J. J. Coretty and C. J. Maloney of Peterborough.

Interment followed in the family plot in St. Peter's Cemetery, the pall-bearers were Jeremiah Corkery of Harwood, James Burnie of Toronto, Leonard Cheney, John McMartin, John J. Hayden and Abe Rose.

Among those noticed from a distance who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Burnie, James Burnie, J. J. Carley, and Master Harold Carter of Toronto; Edward Cassie, George O'Connor and Fred O'Connor of Detroit; Jerry L. Corkery, Dennis Corkery and Timothy Corkery, of Harwood.

Fire Fighters Are Singed Battling Farm House Blaze

One Man Is Hurt When Round Lake Residence Is Partially Destroyed

NEIGHBORS ASSIST

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TRENT RIVER, March 25.—The farm residence of William Anderson of Round Lake was partially destroyed by fire Tuesday morning between the hours of nine and ten o'clock. Mr. Anderson was at the barn doing the chores when the alarm was given by P. White, a neighbor. Men who were at work around the barn at the time of Mr. Anderson, near by were soon on the scene and formed a bucket brigade.

There was a high wind blowing at the time. P. White in fighting the blaze fell from a ladder into the cellarway sustaining painful injuries to his left side and one arm. A number of the firefighters had their hair and eyebrows singed by the blaze.

The residence was not totally destroyed, cause of fire unknown, and residence partly covered by insurance.

YOUNG HUNTERS DIE IN WOODS

through a window of the old shack which the youths apparently made into a camp to wait for a raging storm to abate. Then Willie cut his leg while chopping wood and was unable to walk. Meanwhile, new storms buried the bushlands and they were unable to make their way through the heavy snow. Supplies were meagre.

Word of their death filtered through to the Attorney-General's department, and Dr. Pinet, who acts as coroner in the district, about 500 miles east of Quebec, and 150 miles north of the St. Lawrence River, investigated. Near the bodies, almost skeletons, he found the diary.

Illness and Cold

From day to day the entries told of misery from hunger and illness and cold. On January 12 they told how weak they were but said they were praying, and expressed the hope of getting back to civilization. Gradually hope dwindled. Pain and hunger became more acute. Suffering increased. A pathetic note from Edgar on January 26 recorded his brother's death during the previous night.

In that entry, the brother wrote: "Jan. 26: My very dear parents and friends.—It is Edgar whose sad duty it is to tell you that the Good Blessed Virgin came from Heaven last night to take away my dear brother, Willie, about 11 o'clock.

"Dear God, I don't know what to do with myself. I can't sleep now. I have eaten only once in three days. I can hardly cut wood because I'm just able to lift the axe. Oh God, maybe in a few days the Blessed Virgin will come for me, too. Do not fear for us, dear parents. We have gone through too much not to be saved.

Tell Date of Death.

"I wish you good-night now. I no longer can see the date on the page. Whatever date is missing from his notebook will be the day Good Sainte Anne came for me. I'm saying my rosary. I cry and sigh, and am trembling with cold. Edgar."

That was the last he wrote. On the floor beside his crumpled body, they found the book, its first entry dated December 24. It told of a little party the brothers staged for two trappers, "Joe et Jean," who dropped in on them that day.

"Together we had a little party. We had a rabbit."

On Christmas Day the diary recorded "Heavy snowstorm. Very cold."

Less than a week later, while repairing their toboggans, Willie "ended this unlucky year by cutting my foot. It's not very painful, but it's annoying."

Days of raging storms drifted by. Food became more scarce. On January 11 they prepared to go home. But two days later:

"We weren't able to leave. Strong winds are blowing and it is cold. It is hard to move about. Willie has sore legs, and I am sick to my stomach. The way it is now we can't eat any more. It is hard to cut wood."

Becoming Weaker.

Almost a week later: "Still snowing. We are getting weaker every day. Oh God, how miserable life is to us. We can't tell on paper all our miseries and trouble. It could not carry them. For (two days we have eaten only (flour and water) cakes. How long and lonely the days are. We are very weak."

Another week passed: "We couldn't even drag ourselves out to get wood to-day. Oh God, we would be happy to see our dear ones and good, relatives. We haven't heard from them for five months.

"We made something to drink soaked some spruce in water. It will protect our stomachs. We are despairing day by day. If only help would come. Jesus, Mary, Joseph, pray for us.

"Jan. 18: What a sad sight we are, Willie especially. He is almost dead. Haven't eaten for two days. I can still move my fingers to write a few lines. We always were unlucky.

"I turned Willie over in bed to-day so he could write. I can hardly move my fingers. My body is as if it were paralzed.

Tears in Mother's Eyes.

"Another day and no one came to our rescue. Who would have said that it would be the last time I was to kiss you, mother, when we left home five months ago. There were tears in your eyes.

"My dear brother can't lift himself. He is very weak, hasn't eaten for days, nor have I for three.

"We grow weaker every day and have hardly any flesh on our bones. We think only of death. So sad and so miserable. At night we almost perish from cold. I can see with only one eye.

"Jan. 25: Willie is dead. Oh God, maybe in a few days the Blessed Virgin will come for me, too."

The rest of the book was blank.

COUNTER PETITION ON COST OF HOMES

$2,500 Building Restrictions In North Ward Area Are Asked

A petition for building restrictions in the area bounded by Aylmer and Wolseley streets, Park Hill Road and Benson avenue was briefly discussed by the Property Committee of the council Wednesday night. The deputation which had recently made their request to the council renewed it before the committee, asking that a minimum value of $3,000 be placed on houses to be built in the north-west section of the city.

A counter petition signed by five or six residents of that area proposed a minimum of $2500. Alderman McIntyre, chairman, said he was inclined to favor a restriction of $4,000. No action was taken by the committee in the expectation that two weeks' suspensions might effect a compromise between all the property owners.

The citizens who waited on the committee in support of the larger restrictions were R. P. Leeming, K. G. Lech, J. H. Vance, W. R. L. Blackwell, T. H. Graham and Thos. Mark. They were accompanied by Alex L. Elliott.

Council Keeps Faith With Property Owner

Respects for the council's good faith toward a ratepayer was exemplified by Alderman R. M. Glover in a little incident at the meeting of the Property committee Wednesday night. Joseph Labrash had applied for a building permit for a house on Aylmer street, north in the area for which residents have applied for a $3,000 restriction. He had been promised that he would be notified of any meeting at which the restriction question was to be discussed, but somehow notification of the meeting had been overlooked. Telephone communication was lacking. Rather than have Mr. Labrash think he had been overlooked, Ald. Glover drove up to his home near the north end of Aylmer street, told him that the committee preferred to take no action for another two weeks, and assured him that his interests were not being ignored. He offered to drive Mr. Labrash to the meeting and home again, but the latter said he was entirely satisfied with the committee's decision, and he did not consider it necessary to attend. It was stated that Mr. Labrash is not in favor of the $3,000 restriction but would support a lower minimum value.

Only One Tender For Market Tolls

Only one tender was received by the Property Committee Wednesday night for the collection of market tolls. James Brown, the present market clerk, submitted a bid of $1,370, $10 more than last year, and it was accepted.

Alderman Wilson suggested that the city's agreement with Mr. Brown should require him to wear some distinctive uniform, at least a cap.

"We might get him here the Mayor's robe," Mayor Macdonald suggested, and for that reason Ald. Dutton will have to meet you later."

The fifth annual Warriors' Ball of the Canadian Legion, which will take the form this year of a Coronation Ball, will be the major event of Eastern Monday evening at the Legion Hall, with music by Percy Atkinson's orchestra.

Friends here of Miss Jean McPherson of Toronto, a frequent visitor to the city prior to her departure for London, England, will be interested in knowing that she has taken a small group of Canadian girls who are resident in London, to Paris for Easter week.

Out-of-town relatives and friends who were in attendance at the funeral on Tuesday of the late Mrs. H. J. Archambault, included Mrs. Evelyn Harper, Mrs. James Leeke, the Misses Vera and Gertrude Carew, Nathaniel Carew, Fred Harper, and J. Clancy, all of Toronto; Dr. Martin Killoran of Barberton, Ohio, and Mrs. William Gendreau of Rochester, N.Y., sister of the late Mrs. Archambault.

Double Bereavement.

W. J. Young of 689 Water street has received word of the death on Wednesday at Mount Pleasant, Michigan, of his brother, Francis Young, who is also survived by another brother, Matthew Young of Young's Point, and two sisters: Mrs. James Carroll, also of Young's Point, and Sister M. Bernardine of the Sisters of Charity at Trenton. The deceased, who was eighty-two years of age, visited relatives in this city and district, last year. The announcement of the death of Mr. Young's brother followed closely on the word received by his wife of the death on Tuesday in Chicago of her sister, Mrs. James Collins, who was also well-known in Peterborough.

Pretty Easter Tea At Parsonage.

A very pretty Easter tea was well attended on Wednesday afternoon, when the parsonage of Murray street Baptist Church was host by the Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Sutcliffe for the occasion, with hostesses in members of the Women's Association of the church.

The guests were received by Mrs. Sutcliffe and the president of the W.A., Mrs. Frank Irons, with Mrs. Walter Kidd as co-hostess in the living-room. Mrs. Clifford Cocks ushered the ladies to the tea-room, where arrangements were supervised by Mrs. R. G. Gavine and the two vice-presidents, Mrs. Harvey Webber and Miss Nellie Stenton.

The tea-table had an exquisite arrangement by Mrs. Gavine, that elicited many admiring comments. It was done in an Easter color scheme of mauve and yellow. On a lace cloth, tiny bunnies and chicks and tiny colored eggs appeared in a bank of imitation grass encircling mauve sweet peas in a crystal bowl. Matching crystal candlesticks held yellow tapers. Mauve and yellow tints were carried out in the baskets holding colored mints, and the icing of the cakes.

Tea was poured by Mrs. A. W. Wray and Mrs. S. Cottingham. Assistants were Mrs. S. Malsch, Mrs. Horace Wells and Miss Aileen Morgan.

A sale of home-made cooking was supervised by Mrs. Thomas Irwin, Mrs. Stanley Gillespie and Mrs. Norman Berrie, and the candy sale was in charge of Mrs. Sven Valentin and Mrs. A. Rightmyer.

Mrs. D. A. Loomis was treasurer for the tea.

During the afternoon, piano music was played by Mrs. Percy Johnston, little Betty Mather sang, accompanied by small Adele Fitzgerald at the piano, and the two young sons of the house performed for the guests, Raymond Sutcliffe playing the piano, and Jackie giving several songs.

New On The Fashion Horizon

The "soft suit" carries out the more feminine theme, yet conforms to the simplicity of better quality fashions this spring. Shown above is a lovely heavy crepe suit, with shawl collar of pastel-tinted fox that tones in with the color of the suit. These suits were all the "rage" in southern resorts this winter, especially when made of the new rayon or other synthetic fabrics which have a "cool" feel to the skin. They were seen in high pastels, beige, slate gray, or prints, with tinted fox in the same lovely colors.

Just Between Us Women

A Daily Chat With Examiner Neighbors, Conducted by Roberta

MINUTE EVENTS are the hinges on which magnificent results turn. In a watch the smallest link, chain, ratchet, cog, or crank, is as essential as the mainspring itself. If one fall out the whole will stand still.—Cumming.

Dear Friends:

I am back again on the importance of even the smallest and most humble of us doing our part in life, for when we don't do it, we throw all the rest out of gear. Start to make a pie, and leave a small thing like salt out of the paste, and you have a tasteless pie crust.

Try and make a cake that needs eggs, and leave them out, and see what a mess you will take from the oven. (Yes I know you can make a cake without eggs, for many's the one I've made.)

But it is in life that minute events left undone, cause the most trouble. It is the chiselers who do a small thing for you and expect such large returns that cause you to shut yourself off from them entirely.

Many's the doctor or lawyer or editor can tell you about them. They meet the doctor and are too cheap to go and consult him in his office. So they contrive to give them a list of the symptoms of their ailment, and ask what would be good for that, all the while assuring him that they are not consulting him professionally, but "just asking."

Or they meet their lawyer, and present the case of "a friend," and try to get some free advice from him. If he has shown them some kindness before, they are not content with a little, but want more.

Or maybe the editor of their daily paper has shown them some favor, so they march along with some "news" where they will get some free advertising, and which is no news at all, and are they mad when it is turned down.

It never occurs to them that the doctor and the lawyer, and the editor earn their living by their profession, and it is these little people who think they are so clever in getting something for nothing, something they should pay a good price for, that gets under the skin of professional men. It is the lack of niceties which makes chiselers act like this.

Maybe if your own life is not as it should be, it is due to littleness in those around you, or maybe you have let them away with too many little things which have caused you annoyance or heartache. Or could it be possible that you are the one who committed the little things you should have done?

Life is made up of little things. No one person on this earth has made a name for himself or herself, by one large deed, but all the little decencies, all the small courageous acts, all the little disciplines have built up character in them, and enabled them to be heroes or heroines wherever they were in life.

It is also the little neglects in life which kill love, the little words of discourtesy, or criticism and anger, the little belittling things that are done and said, all these rub on the silken skein of love until it breaks in two.

It is all the little bits of work done around the house which transforms it into a home, and the lack of which makes it into a place to be avoided. It is the little word of praise which keeps a person going, the bit of understanding which keeps a heart from breaking.

The whole life is composed of small things, and if you think of it, it is the little things that make you happy, and the lack or commission of them which brings the tears to your eyes an takes all the heart out of you. It is very easy to tell another to take no notice of a little thing like that, or you let little things bother you too much, but where is there a big thing which is not made up of little things? So let each of us look after them and see the difference.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

WED A CHORINE ADVISES SOPHIE

Make Good Wives To Settle Down With Says Blues Singer

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., March 25—(AP) — A man looking for a wife ought to pick himself some nice chorus girl and settle down—it's Sophie Tucker, the "red hot momma," speaking.

The obvious attributes of a chorine to most men are those shown to best advantage during the floor show, but Miss Tucker listed some other strong selling points.

"Chorus girls make better wives than college girls," she declared today and explained:

"Business and marriage are a great deal alike, in that both include many hard knocks. Let's take the college girl and place her against a screen dancer.

"The dancer has known good and bad days—days during which she didn't know where her next meal was coming from. Yet, she has learned to take it with a smile and keep on plugging."

This, insists Miss Tucker, blues singer is fine prepping for the business of matrimony. A chorus girl doesn't grumble or complain much. Any husband ought to appreciate that.

They're good housewives, too!

"Most dancers have learned, because of their salaries and the necessity of their keeping well-dressed, that it is cheaper and more enjoyable to cook their own meals instead of going to restaurants."

SIMPSON SLANDER SUIT WILL GO ON

Case Reported Settled Is Docketed For Appearance Late In April Or Early May

LONDON, March 25 (CP-Havas)—Ernest Simpson's slander suit against Mrs. Joan Sutherland, London society woman, has been formally docketed for hearing before King's Bench Division jury, it was announced yesterday.

With the case slated for the Easter term, there was speculation as to whether it would come to trial before Mrs. Wallis Simpson's decree nisi becomes final on April 27, after which she intends to marry the Duke of Windsor. Jurists were inclined to believe the suit would not reach court until late in April or early May.

The nature of statements charged against Mrs. Sutherland, the wife of Lieut.-Col. Arthur H. C. Sutherland, has not been divulged. It is understood they were made in Capt. Simpson's presence at a West-End restaurant.

Appearance of the suit on the court calendar ended reports the case had been settled out of court. Mrs. Sutherland has engaged Sir Patrick Hastings as counsel, R. D. Vaughan will act for plaintiff.

Mrs. Sutherland's husband was last reported en route to India on business. The defendant, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McKechnie of London, has since been living with her grandparents.

BUSTLES GONE STAGE IS SAFER ACTRESS SAYS

Canadian Star Recalls Episodes Of Other Dramatic Days

VISITS NEW YORK

NEW YORK, March 24.—(CP)—For the first time in two seasons, Lucille Watson, the Quebec-born actress, has discarded the bustles in which she has been seen on the stage during that time and appears before her admirers as a fashionable woman of modern society.

This change, which rather delights Miss Watson, came with the opening of "Yes, My Darling Daughter," Mark Reed's comedy.

Clothes of another era are likely to be troublesome and may lead to misadventure on the stage, thinks Miss Watson. In a book of her memoirs, as yet unpublished, called "Reflections in a Spangle," the Canadian star recalls two incidents connected with clothes which almost disrupted her career at its outset.

It was the night of the Chicago opening of "Zira," with Margaret Anglin, also a Canadian, starred with Miss Watson in a rather emotional role. As was customary in those days, actresses furnished their own dresses and Miss Watson's, appropriate to her role, was longer in the back than in front, trailing heavily in the mode of the day.

"When Miss Anglin turned on me in the third act and reached for my throat I backed away from her precipitously, as was my wont," she writes. "This time I backed away, trampling on my skirt and throwing myself with the force of the movement half way across the stage on my back. I struck my head violently, my legs went up straight into the air—I caught a fleeting glimpse of them and of some frills from where I lay and that I felt myself grabbed by the shoulder and dragged to my feet by the mighty and determined grip of Miss Anglin.

"For a moment we both faced each other breathless and grim and the house stopped gasping and began to laugh, but Miss Anglin drove into her speech with such power and authority and I stood there a graven image of rage and despair, and our faces, they told me, were as full of dignity and purpose that the laughter was choked in the throats of the audience and the curtain descended to frantic applause of admiration and sympathy.

"The fact that I was able to keep as neat and circumspect after this terrible fall as before was a fortunate thing. Our heads, in those days, were so firmly hair-pinned and our hats so securely screwed on with at least three hatpins that it would have taken a cyclone to upset the sartorial comeliness of my appearance. If I had looked in the least dishevelled as a reminder of the accident the scene would have been lost."

Another near-disaster occurred in her second engagement in "Glad of It." Josepha Osborne, a fashionable dressmaker, made all the clothes for Charles Frohman's productions. The dresses were heavily-padded all around, says Miss Watson in these same memoirs.

"In addition to a train, it lay on the ground in front to the thickness of several inches. I pleaded with her to cut mine in front and demanded how I was to walk on the stage with muffled feet. She was inexorable and told me to 'kick out.' So I stumbled about as best I could over a croquet lawn sodded with heavy grass mats. I 'navigated' in the most important scene of the play."

With these memoirs no one can wonder that Miss Watson welcomes the changes in to-day's fashions. She helped design the clothes she wears in her current role.

DOGS ARE BETTER

Automobiles Not So Good in 50 or 60 Below Zero Weather.

WINNIPEG, March 25 (C.P.).—Automobiles have advantages, but in 50 or 60 below weather one can't bed down in a snowdrift with one and expect to be kept warm, according to Arthur Taylor, north country guide.

Mr. Taylor stopped in Winnipeg on his way to Chicago from Pelican Narrows, N.W.T., where he has lived for seven years, looked over the new cars, and said he guessed he would stick to his dogs. "There are still plenty of places inaccessible to cars or airplanes that I can easily navigate with my team of dogs," he remarked.

Cities were too cramped and noisy for him, and cost of sturgeon and trout, which could be had virtually for the asking in the north was far too high. What with sightseers travelling in increasing numbers to the far north every year, the guide business was improving, and there was little to tempt him back to town life.

HOLLYWOOD UPSET BY DOUBLE THREAT

$20,000 Demanded Each Of Anna Wong And David Selznick Family

HOLLYWOOD, March 25 (AP).—Maniacal extortion threats against the family of David O. Selznick, film producer, and Anna May Wong, Chinese actress, were disclosed by district attorney's investigators today.

A note received by Miss Wong yesterday threatened to disfigure her for life and cripple her father unless she advanced $20,000 for financing a motion picture, Captain Clyde Plummer said.

Another letter, intended for Mrs. David O. Selznick, asked for $20,000 in unmarked bills on pain of bodily harm to her young son and to her father, who was not mentioned by name. He is Louis B. Mayer, head of Metro-Goldwyn Mayer Studios.

Believed to have been selected as a third victim of the extortion plot, Plummer said, was Dr. E. J. Foote, chiropractor and Spanish-American War veteran.

Dr. Foote, who turned over to Plummer a threatening note which he said he also had received, was held as a material witness. The message commanded him to receive the money as intermediary and hold it for further instructions if he wished to survive.

Plummer said the projected move mentioned by the extortionist apparently was to be on a Biblical subject and suggested Evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson for a role.

This inclusion of Mrs. McPherson's name led investigators to theorize the writer was the same person who recently mailed threatening notes to her at Angelus Temple, resulting in a police guard at her sermons.

PLANE SQUADRON JOINS IN SEEKING FLYING DUCHESS

Blinding Snowstorm And Floods Hinder 2,000 In Ground Parties

HUNT EXTENDS TO SEA

LONDON, March 24. —(AP)— A squadron of planes from 10 stations of the Royal Air Force joined today in the most intensive aerial search of many years—the hunt for the Flying Duchess of Bedford who vanished in her plane Monday.

They scoured the watery meadowlands in the Fen country, the Wash —a large inlet of the North Sea — and even hunted out to sea.

Handicapped by a blinding snowstorm and floods, more than 2,000 persons on the ground took part throughout the night in the search for the 71-year-old aviatrix.

Friends of the Duchess disclosed she might have flown to her death in an attempt to realize an ambition to round out her 100 hours of solo flying into an even 100. She planned "a short trip around" of about two hours when she took off.

The Duchess took up flying when she was 62. She has flown in all, some 20,000 miles.

Shot At By Moors.

On long distance hops she usually took along Captain C. D. Barnard. She was enroute from Canary Islands to Africa three years ago when Nomadic Moors fired on her ship, two bullets striking a wing.

Earlier on the same flight her engine failed and the duchess was forced to land with a "deadstick."

In 1930 she and Captain Barnard were forced down in Africa and the two tramped miles through lion-infested bush country to safety in a native hut. Last spring she flew over the Pyrenees to Tangier and back.

Daughter of an Archbishop, she married the Duke of Bedford in 1898 and has one son, the Marquess of Tavistock. The Duke was an aide-de-camp to the late King George V.

In 1927 she was made a dame commander of the Order of the British Empire.

WRITES 50,110 WORDS IN NOVEL MINUS LETTER E

Unusual Fiction Effort Is Accomplished In Five Months

MAN OF 66

LOS ANGELES, Calif., March 25 (AP)—Ernest Vincent Wright, 66, sat down to write a novel that would be different, tied down the "E" bar of his typewriter and completed the job—50,110 words.

"Let's tie down the "E" bar and tell about it!"

Author Wright is a kindly, vivacious chap in Company D at National Military Barracks in this city. His hobby always was to do unusual things. Alumnus of a famous Boston campus, class of 1889, Wright's classical foundation is thorough.

Publication of a four-stanza composition without a common fifth symbol, and acclaim of it as most odd, got him to thinking.

And so Wright got it, writing this unusual fiction composition. It was difficult at first. Most pronouns would not do. "Just try it," Wright said, grinning and pulling at gray hairs of his trim, triangular growth on his chin.

Four months and 30 days it took to do it all.

Smooth Bit Of Work

It is amazingly smooth. No halting parts. A continuity of plot and almost classic clarity obtains.

Try a snatch-grab at his manuscript, at random, say a fourth down, about 14,000 words from his introduction and find this as typical:

"Now I think you that you should know this charming Gadsby family. So first I will bring forth 'Lady Gadsby,' known as such through Mayor Gadsby's inauguration, a most popular woman—taking part in many a city activity, such as clubs and social affairs—also a loyal church woman with vocal ability for choir work and good capability on piano or organ. No woman could fill in so many ways; no woman was so willing and quick to do so."

Wright calls his book "Gadsby—Champion of Youth." It is about a mayor who consults his youth in his administration.

Writing this way is a good thing for an insomniac things to try.

A couple have finished a honeymoon, spent in a tent during a blizzard, amid snowdrifts at Tisvildeleje, Denmark.

COLUMBUS, Ind., March 25—(C.P.)—Frank Gibson, meat market proprietor, plunked down a big box in an abstract office saying, "Here's your money for that piece of property." It held $700 in quarters and half dollars.

He saved it by "just pitching a quarter or 50-cent piece into the box every now and then."

NOTED DRAMATIST DRINKWATER DIES

Succumbs Suddenly Of Heart Attack After Attending Boat Classic

LONDON, March 25 (AP)—John Drinkwater, noted dramatist, died suddenly today of a heart attack while asleep at his London home.

The playwright, whose dramatization of British and American historical characters were among his best known works, went to bed yesterday apparently in good health after attending the Oxford-Cambridge boat race and later spending the evening at the University Club with friends.

His widow, Daisy Kennedy, the Australian violinist, was injured March 11 when the automobile, in which she and Drinkwater were driving to a party after her concert, was in a collision.

"He was very happy all day yesterday," Mrs. Drinkwater said.

"His last words written in an article on the Coronation were 'happy and glorious.'"

Big-boned and picturesque in appearance, Drinkwater was an insurance broker turned actor and son of a schoolmaster who turned actor.

The young Drinkwater spent his youth touring the British provinces with his father's company. Born in Leytonstone, Essex, his early education was gained at Oxford High School where he was a classmate and boyhood friend of the youth who later became famous as Lawrence of Arabia.

He was fond of athletics and the school broad-jump record he set still stands.

Tried Insurance

After he left school, Drinkwater entered the insurance business and became a fairly successful salesman—his friends chaffed him his success was because he was tall and handsome with a pleasing personality.

But all the time Drinkwater's heart was in the theatre. He wrote endless verse—which, he later described as "mostly bad"—and resisted to heed the admonition of an uncle to give up his writing.

Drinkwater was instrumental in founding the Amateur Dramatic Society called the Pilgrim Players which developed into the international famous Birmingham Repertory Theatre.

His play "Abraham Lincoln," written in prose which verged on blank verse, won fame and success for him.

The young dramatist hawked his play to every producer in London, but none of them would touch it. It finally was produced in 1918 by the Birmingham Repertory Theatre. Overnight it became a smashing success.

From then on his path as a playwright was easy and when "Abraham Lincoln" was produced in New York the next year, critics hailed the author "England's new dramatist."

Drinkwater was an indefatigable worker and exploited his success in all directions. He was particularly interested in the lecture platform where his good looks and superb platform manner created a tremendous demand for his books.

RED HORNER EXONERATED

Referee Smith Says He Was Not Struck By Leaf Player

CLAPPER CASE OPEN

DETROIT, March 25—(CP).—President Frank Calder of the National Hockey League said last night he was convinced Red Horner of Toronto Maple Leafs did not strike Referee Ar Smith during a free-for-all in Tuesday night's playoff at Toronto against New York Rangers.

"I have a report from Referee Smith which completely exonerates Horner," said the league President. "Smith says he was not struck by Horner, and therefore I have no intention of taking any action against the Toronto player."

But Calder was not prepared to say what decision he would make in the case of Dit Clapper, Boston winginan, who got a major penalty at Montreal for punching Dave Trottier of Maroons. Clapper also struck Referee Clarence Campbell, who has reported this incident to the National Hockey League Board. Before he left for New York the N.H.L. head said he had still to hear from Clapper.

"I have reports from Referees Campbell and Dye on the Montreal incident, but it would be unfair to reach a decision until Clapper has had a chance to defend himself. I expect him to make a report to me in New York.

LIFE-SAVING CLUB FORMED AT Y.W.C.A.

Best Of Girl Swimmers Form Nucleus Of Club For Ornamental Swimming

A life-saving club for Y.W.C.A. swimmers has been formed for the first time, the intention being to promote interest in ornamental swimming and to continue instructions in life-saving work for girls. Only winners of the bronze medallion and silver award merits are eligible for this class, which will meet twice weekly when the Y.W. pool opens in April. Miss C. Littlefield, swimming instructor who will be in charge, is enthusiastic over prospects among the local girls, saying: "We have a number of girls who are almost as good, if not as good, as the best aquatic stars in Toronto in ornamental swimming. This and life-saving work are quite important."

Officers elected for the year are: President, Mrs. V. R. Currie; vice-president, Miss Jessie Pattison; secretary-treasurer, Hazel Bradley; and the executive includes: Mrs. H. Forbes, Mrs. B. Gray, Peggy Edmonds, and Isobel Young. Mrs. Foster was named an honorary member.

Ingersoll Pitcher Is Wanted By Wings

WASHINGTON, March 25 (AP)—Oliver French, president of Rochester Red Wings, former International League baseball champions, appealed to representative George B. Kelly, of Rochester today for aid in obtaining the services of Pitcher Thomas Judd of Ingersoll, Ont.

From Leesburg, Fla., where the Red Wings are training, French telegraphed he had been trying unsuccessfully for four weeks to gain the admission of Judd into this country.

Kelly immediately communicated with the office of Acting Immigration Commissioner Edward J. Shaughnessy and received assurance the matter would be investigated at once. French did not disclose why Judd was unable to cross the border.

IMPLEMENTS TO COST MORE.

OTTAWA, March 24 (C.P.)—Due to drastic reductions in working capital both the Cockshutt Plow Co. of Brantford, Ont., and its subsidiary, the Frost and Wood Co. of Smith's Falls, Ont., had been obliged to increase farm implement prices in 1937, J. H. Risby, president and general manager of the latter firm, told the House Agriculture Committee here to-day.

Two Youngsters And Veteran Enhance Rangers' Chances

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

ANOTHER WEEK or so and Frank (Drake) Jopling, ex-Petes' defenceman, will be back from N'Yawk where he played with the Rovers this past winter. We hear he had a pretty fair season—and an enjoyable one—with this smart squad, which didn't make the playoffs but packed in the crowds at Madison Square Garden. Atlantic City Sea Gulls and the Hershey B'ars are meeting in three-in-five playoffs now, and the winner will invade Toronto next month and play for the world's amateur puck title—amateur, ha, ha, ha (stop, you're killing us!)—against sextets from Canada, England and maybe other European teams. In 46 games, the B'ars made 38 points, the Gulls 36, Pittsburgh 43, Rovers 43 and Baltimore 40.

* * * * * *

DON'T KNOW much about Les Patrick's farm team, the Rovers, but there are only three U.S. pucksters on the Hershey B'ars, the rest being Canucks. Tony Graboski, who played for Oshawa 'gainst our team a few years back, is with this outfit. Carl Gamble, late of Oshawa and Bowmanville, is with the Sea Gulls. Jopling played with the Petes last year and then, after a tryout with the Rangers in Winnipeg last autumn, he joined up with N'Yawk Rovers. No doubt he's an improved player now—and a blase New Yorker!

* * * * * *

JUST ABOUT a year ago now we paid a brief visit to Detroit. The town was in the throes of Stanley Cup playoffs with Toronto and we got into an argument with a Yankee friend. "Just what is this Stanley Cup hooey, anyway?" he asked. "We win the league title and now we gotta playoff for a cup. Why don't we get the cup when we win the championship?" And he pointed out in big league baseball, eight teams in each league play the schedule and the winner of each loop meets in the world series—with no nonsense afterward about another series for a cup. We explained that the Stanley Cup is not a challenge cup. It used to be played for between the east and west but when the western big league hockey folded it was decided to give several teams in the N.H.L. a crack at it each year.

* * * * * *

HE COULDN'T quite get it, saying that the Stanley Cup winner was considered the N.H.L. champion in reality whereas the team that finished first in its section and then won in the playoffs should be the best. In reality that is true but somehow folks regard possession of the Stanley Cup as more desirable than the N.H.L. title. As long as the fans yell for tickets to all these playoffs—after months of hockey see but two out of eight teams eliminated — well, the loop moguls will give them plenty of it.

SECRETARY WALTER Dinesen of the Blood and Thunder Loop writes: "Now that the Senior City Hockey League season is over I have a few comments to make. I wish to thank the teams and managers for their co-operation, and the out-of-town teams are to be congratulated for the way they turned out for games and the sportsmanship showed. Lakefield deserves mention not only for winning the title but for the manner in which the ydid it. Lakefield fans gave them splendid support all through. After 80 minutes overtime, Lakefield beat the Marines to meet Mayfairs. The first game was tied and the second one just about over at 2-1 for Mayfairs when Blewett tied it up. In new uniforms for the next game, Lakefield won out to meet Westclox in the finals, winning in two straight.

* * * * * *

"CANADIENS OF the West End League may enter the Senior Loop next year. This team journeyed to Lakefield Tuesday and, although losing to the champs 6-4, they made it a real lively game. It ended in a free-for-all with Bob Curtin—lineman with the Orfuns'—in the middle of it. Fans joined in and things were real hot for a time. Lakefield wants another game and their invite has been accepted, with Curtin along and also Ned Villarelli, the spark-plug who got three goals. Well, now you Blood and Thunder fans, in saying so-long, I want you to bear in mind that next hockey season in this league will be worth looking forward to, as it promises to be even better than the one just finished. Sportfully yours, Walter Dinesen."

* * * * * *

JUST TO keep the argument going: Three weeks ago Andy Lytle wrote in the Star: "Referees are always fair game it seems for the yelping pack that runs with the team, the sycophants of the trade who froth at the feet of the local club and toady to what they hope is in the mind of the gentleman who cracks the Garden whip." Last night he wrote: "Referee Smith was lou—well anyway, not good. He usually looks weak and vacillating. In my book he's the series screwball to date." The Oshawa scribe, who saw the game, says: "Horner's boarding of Shibicky was the most deliberate piece of dirty, crude checking we have seen this season. If ever a player deserved a major penalty, Horner did." And so it goes. Personally, a team that has beaten another six times out of seven this season looks superior to us—despite what happens tonight.

LET'S SEE the basketball layout. Last night at the Y.W. in girls' games, C.G.E. Seniors beat Marconi Radio, 18-6; and St. John's copped a 6-2 nod over C.G.E. Juniors. The senior losses are now set for the playoffs. Westclox and C.G.E. meeting in two-out-of-three, starting on April 2nd. But in the junior bracket, Westclox and St. John's must have a sudden-death game within the next week to see which team goes into the two-out-of-three finals with the top Electrics. Up at the Y.M.C.A. this Saturday night at 5.15, P.C.I. and C.G.E. tangle in a sort of playoff tilt. If P.C.I. wins, they meet St. Paul's in the finals; but if C.G.E. wins, it will be considered the first of home-and-home (points counting) semi-finals, ultimate victor to meet St. Paul's. An exhibition tussle may also be arranged between Belleville and St. Paul's on Saturday night.

American-Born Players Fail To Make Grade With Chicago Hawks

CLEM LOUGHLIN SIGNED

CHICAGO, March 25— (AP)—Major Frederic McLaughlin, owner of Chicago Black Hawks team, in the National Hockey League, announced last night the retention of Manager Clem Loughlin as Hawk pilot for another season and the outright release of five American-born players who received tryouts at the end of the past campaign.

The players released were Ike Kilrobert, Bun-La Prairie Milton Brink, Al Scuml and Paul Schaefer. Major McLaughlin trained them with the idea of giving Chicago fans an American-bred team, but at their release he insisted he has not given up his hopes of ultimately developing a full squad of American-born puck chasers.

Manager Loughlin will return to Chicago in mid-summer to hunt for new material. Several of the Hawks already have signed their 1937-38 contracts, he said.

St. John's surprised C.G.E. by copping a 6-2 win last night from the league leaders in the Y.W. gym to end the schedule and force a sudden-death playoff with Westclox to declare a finalist. It was 4-2 at the halfway mark in a close-checking tussle that saw the Saints scrapping hard to stay in the running and the Electrics not looking as good as usual. A. Bowler was the deciding factor with four points for the winners, while E. Craig got two. The lone basket for the losers was collected by Z. Birkhoff. The teams:

Cricket Notes

The annual Spring meeting of the Peterborough Cricket Club was held on Tuesday evening with the vice-president, R. B. Hamilton, in the chair. The club heard with regret that J. Gore, owing to his departure from the city, had been obliged to resign his position as secretary. The appointment of J. G. Caird to this office was confirmed.

Main business before the meeting was to decide on placing a team in the Ontario Championships this season and, on a vote being taken, it was decided not to enter. Messrs. R. Harvey and S. Lorne were appointed to take charge of transportation and entertainment, while other routine matters were settled.

Treasurer R. H. Stuart presented a very favorable financial statement, showing a good balance on hand, and the secretary was able to say that things were working out well regarding a good schedule of matches for the coming season.

Play was speedy and clean, with C.G.E. getting two points on free tosses. M. Woods was their big scorer, with 10 points, while A. Craig and E. Bradley had four each. For the losers, L. Magee, S. Fred "Cyclone" Taylor Back In Hockey—Once Game's Best

President of Northwest League Also Commissioner Of Immigration

OUTSTANDING RECORD

VANCOUVER, March 25.—Fourteen years after he retired from pro hockey Fred W. "Cyclone" Taylor — considered by many to be the greatest player of all time—returned to the game.

Mr. Taylor, now 31, and father of five children, was elected president of the Northwest Hockey league which embraces Vancouver, Seattle, Portland and Oakland.

When he retired as a player in 1923 Fred did not give up his interest in the game and he could always be found at every hockey game, amateur or professional. In addition he had taught his sons, John, Fred and Edward, the same smooth stick-handling which made him famous.

"Cyclone" Taylor was known as the fastest skater and the most dangerous shot in professional hockey in the years between 1909 and 1919. He was also something of a rebel, too, and had more than one brush with officials during his career. Once he ended up in the local jail house, still clad in his hockey uniform. He held a reception for his friends in the cooler on that occasion.

He learned his hockey as a lad in Listowel, Ontario, where he was raised and played with Portland Lakes, Ottawa, and Renfrew before going west. In 1905 Portland Lakes, a little mining town in Michigan, assembled a great hockey team with the young Taylor as rover and star. From there he went to the Ottawa team which captured the Stanley Cup in 1909. He played with Renfrew in 1910 and 1911 and joined Vancouver in the old Northwest Hockey league in 1912.

Outstanding Record.

During his seven seasons with the Vancouver Millionaires — several times winners of the world's championship during that period—Taylor led the league in scoring no fewer than five times. Here is his record:

Year	Games	F	A	Pts	Place
1912-14	14	10	8	18	5th
1913-14	16	34	15	39	1st
1914-15	17	23	32	45	1st
1915-16	18	22	13	35	1st
1916-17	23	14	15	29	9th
1917-18	18	33	11	43	1st
1918-19	20	33	13	36	1st

This record was made against such stars as Ernie "Moose" Johnston, Lester Patrick, Bobby Rowe, and a host of other hockey greats. In his 126 games in those seven seasons he scored 143 goals, 97 assists for a total of 245 points, a record far ahead of any other big-time star.

Then came the sale of the Northwest Hockey league teams to the National Hockey league's new entries from New York, Boston, and Chicago. Frank Patrick, head of the coast league, went with his teams and all the leading players like Lester Patrick, Frank Boucher, Bobby Rowe and the others went east.

"Cyclone" Taylor stayed home in Vancouver for he was an officer of the Canadian immigration service and he placed business ahead of hockey. He is now commissioner of Canadian immigration at Vancouver, the biggest post in the service on the coast.

After a couple of seasons without hockey, the Pacific coast revived the Northwestern league which has grown in size and importance steadily ever since. Taylor turned out for Vancouver again and was its mainstay until he retired in 1923. During that season he played only home games with the team, devoting the most of his time to business.

Interested In Other Sports

The will-to-win which always featured Cyclone's work on the ice extends to his other sports. After he put aside the skates he became an enthusiastic tennis and badminton player and he can always be counted on to give a good account of himself on the courts. He takes an interest in many sports and has served as executive head of basketball, hockey and badminton leagues in Vancouver.

"The greatest player I ever saw" was Frank Patrick's tribute to Taylor. "He could skate so fast that sometimes he just seemed to fly."

There is a famous story about how Cyclone, after joining the Ottawa Senators, skated backwards through the entire Renfrew team and scored a goal.

Tradition has it that Taylor, annoyed at the row caused by his transfer to the Senators, predicted that he could skate backwards all the way and still score a goal.

Tommy Gorman, then a sports writer and now manager of Montreal Maroons, spread the boast over the page in his biggest type and a $100 bet resulted. Cyclone did it, too. He was almost as fast in reverse as most players are in high, and his stick-handling was superb.

Fred is just as energetic in his handling of hockey league affairs as in his playing and the organization, which has plenty of troubles because of the long haul between Oakland and the northwest cities and other factors, is looking forward to bigger and better things.

Copper Cliff Will Meet Montreal

OTTAWA, March 25 (CP). — A switch in the Memorial Cup playdowns throwing Copper Cliff against Montreal Victorias was announced early yesterday by Cecil Duncan, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Duncan's statement said:

"The O.A.H.A. junior champions will go to Toronto for the first game on Saturday afternoon, March 27, and Copper Cliff will then go to Montreal for the return game on Monday, March 29. Winners of that series will meet the winners of the Ottawa Rideaus-Amherst St. Pat's in the eastern finals, dates for which will be announced later. Montreal Victorias were originally drawn to meet the winners of the Rideau-Amherst series, but the swift termination of the Copper Cliff-St. Mike's series made it possible to move the Montrealers up."

REDMEN OUST ST. MICHAEL'S 8 GOALS TO 2

Toronto Irish Apparently Burned Out Are No Match For Copper Cliff

Ottawa Defeats Amherst 5-4 —Sudbury Takes Dominions 4-3

TORONTO, March 25.—Irish eyes were not smiling at Maple Leaf Gardens last night when St. Michaels College junior hockey team, obviously no little leg weary and burned out, bowed before a fresher and speedier line-up of Copper Cliff Redmen by 8 to 2, and thus passed out of the Memorial Cup playdowns. The Copper Cliff team, champions of the N.O.H.A., swept the series in two straight, having won by 5 to 2 over the newly crowned O.H.A. title-holders on Sudbury ice Monday night.

A crowd of about 6,000 fans was stunned by the one-sided score, as the Irish had been 2-to-1 favorites in the pre-game wagering.

Pat McCreavy, a centre-ice wizard, impressed Toronto observers as the best junior they'd seen all winter. He scored three goals and contributed three assists—and the irony of it all was he played for St. Mike's last term. Copper Cliff was never headed, leading 2-1 at the end of the first period and 4-1 at the end of the second.

Following the game, President Cecil Duncan of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association announced a revision in the playdowns. Instead of biding its time, Copper Cliff will play Montreal at Toronto Saturday afternoon, and the winner of the best-of-three set will meet Ottawa or Amherst in eastern finals.

Amherst Beaten 5-4.

Amherst lived up to advance notices at Ottawa, going down battling by so narrow a margin as 5-4. The Maritime club led 1-0 at the end of the first chapter and 3-2 as the two-thirds mark was reached. Rideaus scored three straight goals in the last period, but Amherst stayed in the game till the final bell with a goal in the last minute.

Alex. Higgins contributed two Ottawa goals and Carl Ripley and Lowther made up St. Pats' total. The best-of-three series will be resumed tomorrow night.

Winnipeg fans are seeing heaps of good junior hockey. They maintain they'll send out a winner yet. In semi-finals Winnipeg Monarchs and Portage la Prairie went four games before a winner was declared, and now St. Boniface has forced a third contest in finals, to be staged tomorrow night. Last night St. Boniface scored three straight goals, but Monarchs made it close in the late minutes when they capitalized twice on penalties.

Dominions Lose 4-3.

When Toronto sent its Dominions north to play Sudbury's senior machine an overwhelming beating was anticipated. But the Toronto team was actually ahead by 1-0 at the end of the first period, and Sudbury's final margin was only 4-3. Dominions made it a great fight, mainly by tying down starry Jim Dewey with persistent checking.

The round will be continued tomorrow at Toronto, and today a strong possibility of a third game loomed. The surviving club will go against the winner of the Hull-Quebec series which opens tonight.

BANCROFT TAKES MADOC DOWN 6-5

Fast Exhibition Tilt Gives Fans Hour Of Excitement

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, March 25.— The Bancroft hockey team took the Madoc squad into camp 6-5 in an exhibition game staged on Madoc ice on Wednesday night. Only a few of the most ardent fans witnessed the game, which was played on a fast sheet of ice.

At the five minute mark, in the first period, K. Spring opened the scoring for Bancroft when he neatly spilt the defence, to sail in on Nickle in the Madoc nets for an unassisted tally. Madoc soon replied when Kellar scored from a scramble in front of the Bancroft goal. Two more goals for Madoc followed in quick succession when Keller again scored on a pass from Akey, followed by Smith's tally on a pass from Akey. Wellman of Madoc, received a penalty for holding and although Bancroft were on the offensive no further scoring resulted. The period ended, Madoc 3, Bancroft 1.

The second period opened at a fast clip. Spring of Bancroft scored from a scramble, after three minutes of play. A few seconds later Munro of Madoc's second line, scored on a neat pass from Halkston after completey outwitting Joint in the Bancroft nets to put Madoc three up. But they did not retain the lead long. Bill McAlpine picked up the puck when it was loosely cleared by the Madoc defence and banged it home behind Nickle. Shortly after he tied the score when he tallied a second time. Cyril Munro of Bancroft received a penalty for an illegal body check and Madoc tried hard, but failed to score before the Bancroft team was again at full strength. Shortly before the end of the period Mel Tryon pushed home a counter for Bancroft, making the score Madoc 4, Bancroft 3.

Both teams pressed hard in the opening of the third period. Bancroft showed some fine defensive play against Madoc's continued attacks and after eight minutes of play widened their lead when McAlpin scored his third goal on a pass from Spring. Sprung was chased for carrying the puck, but no damage was done while the team was short-handed. Although shortly before the gong, Akey scored on a pretty piece of combination with Smith and Keller.

The game ended, Bancroft 6, Madoc 5. For Bancroft McAlpine and Sprung were standouts, while Tryon on defence and Joint in goal deserve much of the credit for their team's win.

Line-up:

Madoc—Goal, J. Joint; defence, Munro, Tryon; centre, Sprung; wings, McAlpine, Vance; subs, Hillis, Moxam, Young, Russeu.

Bancroft — Goal, Nickle; defense, Kincaid, Embury; centre, Smith; wings, Akey, Keller; subs, Wellman, Hallstone, Munro, Moon, Parks.

Referee—Whytotck.

PERRY STILL HAS TILDEN GUESSING

Veteran Beaten In First Meet Is Unable To Figure Why Briton Wins

NEW YORK, March 25 (A.P.)— Big Bill Tilden saved only 10 games out of 32, and one set out of four in his first meeting with Fred Perry, but still wondered to-day what makes Perry's tennis click.

"It was extremely interesting to play, but I still don't know why he wins," mused the 44-year-old veteran, repeating his theme song of recent months, after dropping a decisive 6-1, 6-3, 8-6, 6-0 decision to the Briton before 15,000 spectators in Madison Square Garden last night.

The post-battle opinions of Perry and Tilden read as if they had been learned from the same book.

"Playing Bill was an experience I wouldn't have missed for all the money in the world," said the Briton who, quite incidentally, earned $7,500 for his night's work.

90 P.C. OF INDIANS' CHANCES HINGING ON ITS BATTERY

—If Feller's Comes Through— And Pytlak Catches 100 Games

WILL MISS VOSMIK

By Paul Mickelson
(Associated Press Sports Writer.)

NEW ORLEANS, March 25 (AP)—Even the slickest crystal ball gazer would toss up his hands and retire when he came to forecasting Cleveland Indians of 1937.

The team, led by the sensational Bob Feller, can win the American Baseball League pennant, or it can fall right back into the wilderness of second division without causing the flutter of an eyebrow.

Probably 90 per cent of the team's chances depends on Kid Feller and the veteran catcher, Frank Pytlak. If Feller can come through as advertised and Pytlak can catch 100 games without looking up a first class hospital for repairs, the Indians may stage an uprising that'll scalp every enemy club in the circuit.

So far Feller, the 18-year-old school boy pitcher from Iowa has developed a fine change of pace down here to go with his fast ball and sweeping curve.

An Outstanding Problem

Pytlak has been a problem for years. A great catcher and a dangerous hitter, his problem has been ruggedness. In four years with Cleveland, he has failed to catch more than 91 games, retiring in 1936 after but 75. Pytlak reported in fine physical and mental shape this spring but he's still a problem. If he couldn't catch 10 games before, Manager O'Neill can hardly expect that many from him this year when he's a vet of 23.

On paper, the Indians appear greatly improved over last season when they hit the skids and landed in fifth place. Although Joe Vosmik's punch will be missed, Manager O'Neill believes the big swap with the St. Louis Browns gave the teams better balance and lifted its spirit.

For pitchers O'Neill has Mel Harder, Johnny Allen, Dennis Galehouse, Earl Whitehill and Feller composing a starting "Big Five," all right handers except for Whitehill. The three reserves, undoubtedly, will be Ivy Andrews, obtained from the Browns, Lloyd Brown, and Willis Hudlin.

SYRACUSE WINS OVER PITTSBURG

Stars Take First Game Of Playdowns By Score Of 4-1

SYRACUSE, N.Y., March 25 (C.P.). — Syracuse Stars enjoyed a one-game advantage over Pittsburgh in their International-American Hockey League Western Sectional playoff series to-day, while the triumphant Springfield Indians and the defeated Providence Reds rallied their forces for the second game of their preliminary Eastern Section playoff round to-night.

The Stars got off to a victorious start with a 4-1 triumph last night on goals by Bummer Doran, Normie Mann, Maxie Bennett, and Murray Armstrong, to which Red Doran fired the lone Pittsburgh reply.

WILL TRY FIVE GUELPH ESCAPE

Four Are Freed Of Charges Under Nixon's Promise Of Amnesty

GUELPH, Ont. March 25.—(CP)—Echo of the rioting of January 17 when prisoners fled into the rain and wind from the battered Ontario reformatory, nine prisoners appeared in police court here to-day.

Four of them benefitted under amnesty issued the day after the riots by Provincial Secretary Harry Nixon. Charges against them were withdrawn after the circumstances of their capture were outlined to the bench by Chief Constable Harold Nash and Crown Attorney J. M. Kearns, K.C.

Five were committed for trial on charges of escaping and one was remanded on a further charge of stealing an automobile.

The four who received the benefit of the amnesty were Frank Kirkland, James Peace, John Charron and Arnold Cameron. Those committed for trial on escaping charges were Albert Elson, Fred Cooper, Romeo Lauzzique, David Freeman and Kenneth Nolan. Elson will appear for preliminary hearing on the auto theft charge later. Expressing his desire to fulfill the wishes of Mr. Nixon, Crown Attorney Kearns told the Bench that before the first four men entered election or plea, he wished to put evidence before the court to determine whether or not they came under the Provincial Secretary's amnesty issued January 18th.

He outlined the circumstances connected with Kirkland, Charron, Peace and Cameron, declaring that they got as far as Rockwood, then changed their minds and were trying to thumb their way back when the police met them.

The Day That I Forget

CHAPTER 44

WHEN Janet left Harriet Casey's luncheon, she telephoned her apartment and told her maid to ask Mr. Paynter to wait if he were in before she arrived.

Then she got in a taxi and told the driver to break all speed limits getting to her apartment house across the town.

When she got there, she discovered that Joel had not even been at home. But she had a guest, Mrs. Kintsing was in the living room, Janet's maid told her.

The last person in the world that Janet wanted to see that day was Amelia Kintsing. She was a fluttery little thing that Janet had met somewhere at bridge and she had been bothering Janet for weeks to join her committees, to "run over for tea". After weeks of telephone calls, she had assumed the air of an old friend.

"Guess what?" she said to Janet and Janet said coldly that she couldn't.

"I just had to tell you. Oh, darling, may I have a cup of tea? I'm simply got to settle down over a cup and talk so you, Janet, where did you get that divine hat? Oh, how I envy you being able to wear those high crowned things!"

Janet found herself leading the way into her drawing room with her mouth drawn tightly over her teeth. She thought: Janet Paynter, you used to have a good disposition but you haven't any more. You snap and snarl and think jealous, mean things. But, oh what is a girl to do when she has to hear from another woman that that woman has met her husband through still another woman? Mrs. Newbold? Well, she must be a new one. Janet couldn't ever remember having heard her name. Sooner or later it would come up. Joel would say casually: "If I'm not on time, don't worry. I'll be along directly. I've got to have some cocktails with Mrs. Newbold."

And then aJnet would know that this was the new woman.

She would go out and buy a new frock and a new hat and come back to her beautiful home and Joel would come in later and she would find that she really didn't care as much as she would have once. And something that had once been tender and sweet and breath-taking would be harder now. You could drop it and it wouldn't break.

You can only keep tender things tender by nurturing them. The nutriment of love was more than words. It was a wordless thing that grew up between people when they had learned to keep the world out.

Well, Janet and Joel had let the world in. They had been forced to; it was the world that had made them. It was the world that paid them great sums so that they could live in a big house and fill it with strangers. These strangers owned them. They said, "We want you" and they smiled when they said it, and you found yourself making dates with women other than your wife because the invitation was casual.

If you were Janet, you made dates with other men. All perfectly above the board and on-the-level dates with people that your husband might know. You made engagements with them because your husband was at the theater every evening and you were no longer a bride who could while away her lonely evening hours reading travel books and dreaming of the wonderful things that you would see with your husband. In fact, you seldom planned engagements, let alone journeys to fascinating lands with your husband, because if you planned to do something after the theater on Friday night, invariably you found that Friday night was the night your husband promised to play poker with the boys or you had tickets for a show and you were expected to go dancing somewhere later. You couldn't get out of the later date because the man who was your escort wouldn't have a girl. So you can see why you couldn't invite your husband to join you later, don't you?

It was all very involved and Janet felt that she couldn't quite get a grasp on it still as she sat listening to Amelia's chatter that March afternoon. She had long given up any hope of getting a grasp on Amelia but heretofore her lack of orientation had been purely conversational.

This afternoon it was physical. She had an illusion that Amelia kept receding from her view as though her chair were being pulled back and forth on a track. What she probably needed was sleep, she decided. She had really been working very hard. And playing hard. And being someone that she was not.

She said "Really?" and "Of course" and a whole series of inconsequential things and then she realized that Amelia was talking about Russell.

"My dear, she got off the boat"—Janet hadn't any idea who had got off the boat—"and went straight to Reno. So I suppose now she'll marry Russell. He was simply mad about her an the year that we came out but his father's death and all! So she married Jim. I always thought it was funny that Russell never married and now we know it was because he was in love with Althea all these years. At least that's what we think, don't you?"

Janet said she didn't think anything about it.

She was thinking: Russell is going to marry someone else!

Amelia left a few minutes later and Janet sat in her dark filled room holding a cup of cold tea in her hand.

She was going to lose Russell. She needed Russell. She had fitted him into a place where she had wanted Joel to be but she didn't know that.

Suddenly she felt completely alone and lost. Weak tears came into her eyes and spilled over to her cheeks. She felt their moisture on her cold hands without knowing that she was crying.

Katie came in and lit the lamps. Still Janet didn't move.

"Will you want dinner, Mrs. Paynter?"

Janet didn't answer her.

"Mr. Paynter is dining at his club," Katie reminded her.

Janet got up. "No," she said vaguely, "I'm going out."

She went to her room and put on her coat and hat. She knew that she should put on a warm coat but suddenly she was in a hurry and her silk coat was enough even though she felt cold.

She was going to Chester—to Martha Colby.

She shivered in her thin coat and sat huddled up in her seat in the accommodation train that made every stop on its slow progress to Connecticut and to Chester.

There were no taxies waiting at the small station, so she walked the short distance to Martha's house. She had walked that same path many times in years gone by. Snatches of those times came back to her. She remembered the time that she had won an award in the secretarial school and proudly carried home the certificate rolled under her arm. She felt her purse and half expected to find the roll there.

She thought: Tonight might be the night that I am going to the Alpha Omega dance with Ernie Layton. Martha has made me a rose colored, taffeta dress for a birthday present.

Her legs felt strangely light and her cheeks burned. She wiped away the tears that seemed to be falling without reason. She wiped them with the finger of her soft suede gloves. The finger tips felt stiff.

At last she saw the familiar, friendly lights of Martha's house. She walked up the path she had tread hundreds of times. This time she did not see that the tulip fringe of the walk was beginning to break into brave colors.

She stumbled a little on the worn steps and raised a heavy hand to open the door.

"Martha!" she said from the door.

Then Martha's strong arms were around her and in the distance she heard Martha say, "Why, Janet, babs!"

"You'll help me, won't you? I'm afraid, Martha. I'm scared to death." That was all she remembered.

Bedtime Story
By HOWARD R. GARIS

UNCLE WIGGILY AND CHARLIE CHICK

"Bam! Slam! Bam!"

That's the way the snowballs, thrown by Peetie Boy Wow, Charlie Chick and Billie Wagtail, the lost, were falling around Uncle Wiggily and Jackie Bow Wow.

"Oh! Oh!" howled Jackie as a ball hit him on the end of his soft and tender nose.

"Stop it! Stop throwing those snowballs, if you please!" ordered Uncle Wiggily. He twinkled his pink nose most severely at Peetie, Charlie and Billie. "Why do you throw them?" he asked Peetie.

"Oh, just for fun," barked Peetie.

"Do you call it fun to snowball your brother Jackie when he can't get away or dodge the balls?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

He Couldn't

"Why can't he dodge or run away?" asked Peetie who thought it such fun to pelt Uncle Wiggily and Jackie with snowballs. The animal boys had found some late Spring snow in a deep hollow of the hills on the north side where the warm sun didn't shine to melt it.

"I can't run away!" whined Jackie. "I'm having bone trouble!"

"And I came to help him," explained Uncle Wiggily, telling the animal boys about making a Spring garden and how Jackie borrowed the grubbing hoe to dig up a bone he had buried deep in the ground.

"What kind of bone trouble is it?" asked Peetie. Of course he, being a puppy dog, was a much interested in bones as was Jackie.

"My paw is caught fast in a hole of the bone and the bone is fast in the ground," explained Jackie.

"Oh, that's too bad!" said Peetie. "I wouldn't have pelted you and Uncle Wiggily with snowballs only I thought it would be fun, for you would throw some back at us."

"How can I throw snowballs?" asked Jackie. Really he couldn't, with one paw stuck in a bone hole, with one paw stuck in a bone hole.

"The next time you want to have fun, Peetie," said Uncle Wiggily, digging some snow out of his left ear, "make sure it doesn't hurt anyone."

"I will," promised Peetie, and Charlie and Billie also promised. Then Peetie said: "I'll help Jackie pull up the bone."

Trees Did Not Mind

This he did, while Charlie and Billie threw snowballs at trees which didn't mind being snowballed. Then, when between them, Jackie and Peetie had pulled up the bone, and when Jackie's paw was pulled out of the hole in it, everything was all right and then, all of a sudden, Jackie and Uncle Wiggily threw snowballs at Peetie and his friends, banging them hard.

"Hey! What's the big idea?" barked Peetie.

"Oh, now it's my turn to have fun!" laughed Jackie. But the snowballing was soon over. Peetie and Jackie went home with the bone, Billie Wagtail ran to a billboard to tear off some of the posters to eat the sweet paste on the inside of them and Charlie asked:

"What are you doing here, Uncle Wiggily?"

"Oh, I'm going to make a garden," said the rabbit gentleman.

Charlie Chick, who was a raiser boy, didn't say a word but he softly crowed. And when Uncle Wiggily heard that he knew scratching was going to happen to his garden, if he planted it when Charlie was near. For roosters and chickens love to dig up newly planted garden seeds. So Charlie just crowed and whistled and said:

"Oh, so you're going to make a garden, eh? Well, I'll come and look at it when you have finished."

Then Uncle Wiggily knew he would have to catch Charlie Chick. I'll tell you about it in the next story about Uncle Wiggily and how he caught Charlie. But please ask the kitchen chair not to come in the dining room to read the wallpaper.

Pioneer Course Is Planned For Nova Scotia Students

Dalhousie University Will Train Scholars For Civil Service

NEW HONORS COURSE

HALIFAX, March 25—(C.P.)—Tentative plans for Dalhousie University's new honors course in Public Administration, first of its kind in Canada, have been announced.

"The aim of the course is to fit students for various branches of general administration and for careers such as journalism which has to do with public affairs," said Professor R. A. MacKay, head of the Political Science Department and one of the organizers of the course.

"The course is broadly cultural rather than technical, and it is hoped that a student on completion of the course will have a good general knowledge of economic and political problems of the day and, more particularly, those relating to Canada," he said. "It should be particularly useful for prospective law students, especially if they are considering entering a political career."

Broadly, the proposed course, which is actually a regrouping of classes already taught at the university, will include related classes from economics, political science, history and law, requiring five years for completion. It will differ from an arts or commerce course, on which it is based, in the grouping of advanced classes required.

Elementary Arts or Commerce classes will be compulsory for the first two years of the Public Administration course. Students proposing to continue in Law will probably be allowed to take first-class law classes in their last year of studies for the Public Administration degree.

"The need for special training for candidates for the public service is apparent," Professor MacKay said in a review of the proposed course. "Governments are being compelled, very often against their wishes, to take on many new responsibilities, especially in economic and social fields.

"To carry out its many tasks efficiently, a government requires an administrative staff of high ability and sound education. Otherwise inefficiency and waste are likely to add to the costs. Special training for prospective civil servants has long been provided by the University of London. More recently, several other universities throughout the British Empire have begun to provide this training, as have also a few American universities, notably Harvard and Chicago. Until recently no Canadian university has undertaken work in this field. Dalhousie is, therefore, a pioneer in offering this course, as it was when it established the first academic law school in Canada more than half a century ago."

OMEMEE

FAMOUS PICTURE ABLY EXPLAINED

Omemee Y. P. U. Discuss Holman Hunt's "The Light Of The World"

(Examiner Correspondence.)

OMEMEE March 25. — Doris Vaughan, Christian culture convenor, was in charge of the meeting of the Young People's Union on Monday evening. The president, Mr. Arthur Williamson, occupied the chair.

Miss Mary Faulkner read a history of the life of Holman Hunt. This famous artist was born in London and after visiting Palestine, painted many Eastern pictures. Among them are "The Shepherd," "Christ in the Temple," "Claudio and Isabella," and greatest of all "The Light of the World."

The picture, "The Light of the World," in colours, was then thrown on the screen and Doris Vaughan gave an explanation of the various parts of the picture and the spiritual truth conveyed by each. She closed with the question, "What shall I do with this strang and singly pilgrim?"

Mary Faulkner and Doris Vaughan sang a duet, "Knocking, knocking, who is there," and the hymn, "Behold a stranger at the door," followed.

The meeting closed with a contest of Easter hymns.

Mrs. George Overholt and daughter Elda visited Mr. and Mrs. H. Overholt in Toronto over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis held a very successful aluminum demonstration Tuesday at the home of Dr. and Mrs. H. McPhee.

British Airliner Crashes, 3 Dying

Marseilles, France, March 25 (AP).—THE British flying boat Caprivi rose today in mountain snows during a stinging blizzard near the Hamlet of Ouroux and police reported three of the occupants were killed.

Two others were reported injured seriously in the crash, which ended the great plane's maiden flight from England to Egypt.

WESTWOOD

NAME DELEGATES FOR CONFERENCE

Helen Bray And Rita Faux To Represent Westwood W. I.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

WESTWOOD, March 25. — Misses Helen Bray and Rita Faux were the two girls appointed as delegates to the 12th annual girls' conference at Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, at the March meeting of the Westwood Women's Institute on Tuesday afternoon, March 23rd. The girls will have their railway fares paid by the Institute, but will furnish funds for their own living expenses. Miss Bray expressed their joint appreciation for the splendid opportunity offered them.

A recipe for a favorite murphy dish in answer to the roll call, brought different ways of preparing this most common vegetable. An effort to secure at least three new members or renewals will be made, in order that five voting delegates may attend the district annual meeting, as formerly.

The gift of a number of books from Mrs. F. M. Grover of Norwood was gratefully received and will be formally acknowledged. Letters of thanks for various remembrances from the Institute were received and included one from Miss M. Battersby, who recently moved to Haliburton, and reports her condition much improved after a recent operation.

Current events were contributed by Miss Rita Faux. A most interesting geography match followed, with Mrs. Fred Faux being the winning member.

An amusing episode occurred when two moths, apparently in an early stage of life, fluttered from the overturned collection basket as it was emptied, and soared to the windows before the curious gaze of the members. Was it a near tragedy of circumstance or a mischievous prank? At any rate a sure sign of spring was the unanimous feeling of the meeting.

Personals.

Miss Irene Olmon of Hastings was the guest of her sister, Mrs. Lawrence Doherty, a couple of days this week.

Roy Richardson of Hastings visited his sister, Mrs. Clayton Brockenridge, this week.

END OF NINE-YEAR HUNT

Mother Asks Court Declare Son Dead

LONDON, Ont., March 25—(CP)—The nine-year-old hunt for Garnet Aloysius Doyle of Chatham, who left a Detroit hotel in 1928, checked his baggage at a station, and then disappeared, ended up in the civil courts to-day.

His widowed mother, Mrs. Catharine Doyle of Chatham, is asking the Ontario Supreme Court to declare her son dead, so that she can cash an insurance policy on his life. Her action probably will come before a weekly high court judge in London within the next week or two.

BRITAIN'S DELEGATION.

(LONDON, March 25.—CP Cable.)—Britain is sending a heavy delegation to the Imperial Conference. It will consist of Prime Minister Baldwin, Ramsay Macdonald, Neville Chamberlain, Sir John Simon, Lord Halifax, Malcolm Macdonald and Colonial Minister William Ormsby-Gore.
